FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT—FINANCE.

The 26th December 1878.

The following Resolution is published for general information :—

READ—

A letter from Accountant-General, Bengal, No. 1068, dated the 3rd December 1878 submitting certain proposals for keeping a better account of the Government securities held in trust by officers of Government acting in their official capacity on account of Local and other Funds.

It has recently been brought to the notice of Government that the receipts and expenditure of a large number of Trust Funds and Local Funds (chiefly of a petty nature) do not appear in the public accounts, and that, even in the case of those Funds which do appear in the public accounts, no proper register is kept of the Government securities which belong to them. Those securities are scattered all over the province and held in the names of different officers. As a consequence, the existence of a Fund is not unfrequently forgotten ; sometimes the existence of the securities is overlooked and interest not drawn ; and occasionally the securities are improperly dealt with.

2. The Director of Public Instruction, in a recent report on the Educational Trust Funds, brought to notice that, out of nearly eighty Funds, the accounts of only twenty-five are shown in the Accountant-General's books; the others are either administered by local officers without appearing in any public account, or appear in the Provincial accounts under the budget head "Education" in such a way as to render proper supervision almost impossible. The Accountant-General has also cited instances of large sums of money and funds accidentally brought to his notice, but of which no account was kept in his office; thus it only came to light through a casual enquiry that the balance of a relief fund, amounting to Rs. 25,000, had been invested, and that nobody was in charge of it, and no trace could be found in the Accountant-General's books. The Wahabee Fund which existed in the form of Government securities in the hands of the Commissioner of Patna.

3. The above instances are sufficient to show the necessity of having more better information than is secured by the present procedure regarding invested funds, which are already very numerous, and which increase every year in number and importance. It has accordingly been proposed that all Government securities held by public officers in Bengal in any official capacity, and not being mere security deposits, should be endorsed to the Accountant-General and the Financial Secretary to the Government of Bengal, jointly, and placed in the custody of the Accountant-General, whose duty it would be—

- (1) to keep a proper account of the securities in the manner prescribed for account offices;
- (2) to publish every year in the Gazette a complete list of the securities showing the nature of the Fund to which each belongs, and the officer charged with the administration of it;
- (3) to draw the interest on due dates, and remit it to each administering officer by an order payable at any treasury named by him;
- (4) to report all cases in which the orders for the payment of interest are not cashed;
- (5) to sell out any portion of the investment when required by competent authority to do so.

4. The Lieutenant-Governor approves these proposals, and desires that all Commissioners, District Magistrates, and other public officers who are entrusted with the administration of any Local or Trust Fund, and in whose names any Government securities are held, be directed to endorse all such securities in favour of the Financial Secretary to the Government of Bengal and the Accountant-General, Bengal, jointly, and to make them over to the Accountant-General, Bengal, who will henceforth be entrusted with the custody. The Accountant-General should at the same time be informed in each case of the name of the Fund or Trust to which each security belongs, the object of the Fund or Trust, the official designation of the officer administering it, and the treasury at which he desires the interest to be drawn. If any legal obstacle should exist to the transfer of the securities in the way proposed, a special report of the circumstances of the case must be made to Government.

5. The present orders do not affect the audit or control of the receipts and expenditure of each Fund, which are quite separate matters, and will be dealt with in separate orders to be issued hereafter. The custody of the Government securities is all that is transferred to the Accountant-General, who will periodically place the interest due on them at the disposal of the officers administering the Fund.

ORDER:—Ordered that a copy of the above Resolution be forwarded to the Accountant-General, to all Commissioners of Divisions, all District Magistrates, and to the Director of Public Instruction, for information and guidance, and to the Judicial, Political, General, and Revenue Departments of this office for information.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

D. BARBOUR,
Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

The letters* and telegraphic despatches which your Government has transmitted to me, reporting the circumstances connected with the reception of a Russian Mission at Kabul in July last, and the subsequent rejection by the Amir Shere Ali Khan of the special Embassy accredited to his Court by Your Excellency have been considered by Her Majesty's Government with the care due to their importance.

2. The various communications which have from time to time passed between the Government at home and that of India, ending with Lord Salisbury's Despatch of the 4th of October last year, contain a complete exposition of the general policy of the British Government towards Afghanistan, and set forth, moreover, the considerations which lately induced Her Majesty's Government to endeavour to place their relations with the Amir on a more satisfactory footing. In order, however, that no misapprehension may exist on this subject, I deem it advisable to recapitulate some of the leading features of that policy, and to trace the course of events which have led to the present condition of affairs on the frontier.

3. Although much difference of opinion has existed, and still exists,

*ARTICLE I.

Between the Honourable East India Company and His Highness Amir Dost Muhammad Khan, Wali of Kabul and of those countries now in his possession, and the heirs of the said Amir, there shall be perpetual peace and friendship.

ARTICLE II.

The Honourable East India Company engages to respect those territories of Afghanistan now in His Highness's possession, and never to interfere therein.

ARTICLE III.

His Highness Amir Dost Muhammad Khan, Wali of Kabul and of those countries of Afghanistan now in his possession, engages, on his own part and on the part of his heirs, to respect the territories of the Honourable East India Company, and never to interfere therein, and to be the friend of the friends, and enemy of the enemies of the Honourable East India Company.

foreign and distant enemy as it is possible for us in the nature of things to compass."

4. The question, however, has assumed special prominence since the period of the transfer to the Crown of the direct administration of India. The growing interest in the subject has been the result partly of the increased responsibilities assumed by the Government of Her Majesty in maintaining Her Indian Empire, and partly of the intestine disorders to which Afghanistan became a prey after the accession of the present Amir to the throne in the year 1863. Upon Lord Lawrence devolved the direction of the policy to be adopted in this new state of affairs, and that statesman considered that the objects of the British Government would be best obtained by abstaining from active interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan, and by the friendly recognition of the de facto rulers of that country, or of portions of it, without undertaking inconvenient liabilities on their behalf. On this basis Lord Lawrence thought that the British Government would have the greatest chance of gaining the permanent friendship and alliance of the Afghan people. The outposts of Russia were then distant from the borders of Afghanistan, and His Lordship's Government attached no special importance to the probability and danger of the growth of the former Power in the direction of India, which they considered would, in any case, best be restrained or rendered innocuous by a friendly understanding on the subject between the English and Russian Cabinets.

5. The views of Her Majesty's Government of that day on the subject of their relations with Afghanistan were in complete harmony with those of Lord Lawrence. They did not desire to exercise active influence at Kabul, nor to interfere in the conflicts then rife between contending parties in Afghanistan, so long as those conflicts did not jeopardize the peace of the frontier. This policy was therefore adhered to, although not without some inconvenient results, during the civil war which raged for so many years after Shere Ali's accession, and might not unreasonably be thought suited to the circumstances of the time. But the final and unaided success of the Amir in regaining his throne, in the autumn of 1868, in some measure changed the position of affairs, and, in the opinion both of Lord Lawrence and of Her Majesty's Government, justified some intervention in His Highness's favour, and the grant to him of such assistance in money and arms as appeared conducive to the maintenance of his authority.

6. The policy followed by Lord Mayo's administration in its dealings with Afghanistan was to a considerable extent in accord with the course of action thus finally adopted in the autumn of 1868 by his predecessor. Whilst, however, Lord Mayo did not deviate, in any material degree, from the attitude of non-interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan, which had been so long maintained, he recognized Shere Ali as the de jure as well as the de facto ruler of that country, and, in a letter addressed to that Prince, engaged to view with severe displeasure any attempt on the part of his rivals to disturb his position. This step, added to the marked personal influence obtained by Lord Mayo over the Amir, was sufficient at the moment to remove a certain feeling of resentment which had been generated in his mind by the apparent indifference shown by the British Government to the result of his struggle for power, and, at the same time, rendered His Highness's position at Kabul more assured than that of any previous ruler.

7. The advances of Russia in Central Asia had not, up to this period, assumed dimensions such as to cause uneasiness to the Indian Government. Lord Mayo agreed, therefore, in the views of his predecessor, that the best means of averting interference on the part of the Turkistan authorities in the affairs of Afghanistan would be by a frank interchange of views on that subject between the Government of Her Majesty and that of the Czar. Her Majesty's Government had independently arrived at the same conclusion, and early in 1869 initiated friendly negotiations at St. Petersburg, which terminated in a very distinct understanding on this subject, and in the recognition by the Czar's Government of the limits of the Amir's territories, in complete accord with the wishes of Shere Ali and of the British Government.

8. The policy of his predecessors was that substantially followed by Lord Northbrook, although the rapid development of events in Central Asia was gradually increasing the difficulty of abstaining from closer relations with the ruler of Kabul. The capture of Khiva by the forces of the Czar in the spring of 1873, and the total subordination of that Khanate to Russia, caused Shere Ali considerable alarm, and led him to question the value of the pledges with reference to Afghanistan which had been given by His Imperial Majesty to England, and which had been communicated to His Highness by the British Government. Actuated by his fears on this score, His Highness sent a special Envoy to Simla in the summer of that year, charged with the duty of expressing them to the Government of India.

9. Finding that the object of the Amir was to ascertain definitely how far he might rely on the help of the British Government if his territories were threatened by Russia, Lord Northbrook's Government was prepared* to assure him that, under certain conditions, the Government of India would assist him to repel unprovoked aggression. But Her Majesty's Government at Home did not share† His Highness's apprehension, and the Viceroy ultimately informed the Amir that the discussion of the question would be best postponed to a more convenient season.‡ The effect of this announcement on His Highness, although conveyed in conciliatory language, was not favourable; the policy which dictated it was unintelligible to his mind, and he received it with feelings of chagrin and disappointment. His reply to Lord Northbrook's communication was couched in terms of ill-disguised sarcasm; he took no notice of the Viceroy's proposal to depute a British Officer to examine the northern frontier of Afghanistan; he subsequently refused permission to Sir Douglas Forsyth to return from Kashgar to India through Kabul; he left untouched a gift of money lodged to his credit by the Indian Government, and generally assumed towards it an attitude of sullen reserve.

10. Such was the position of affairs when Her Majesty's present advisers assumed office in 1874. The maintenance of Afghanistan as a strong and friendly power had, at all times, been the object of British policy. The method adopted in attaining that object had not met with the success that was desirable. Its accomplishment was, nevertheless, a matter of grave importance, and it had now to be considered with reference to the rapid march of events in Turkistan. Her Majesty's Government could not view with indifference the probable influence of those events upon the character of an Asiatic Prince whose dominions were thereby brought within a steadily narrowing circle between two great military empires, and although no immediate danger appeared to threaten British interests on the frontier of Afghanistan, the situation in Central Asia had become sufficiently grave to suggest the necessity of timely precaution. Her Majesty's Government considered that the first step necessary was the improvement of their relations with the Amir himself. With this object in view, they deemed it expedient that His Highness should be invited to receive a temporary mission at Kabul, in order that an accredited British Envoy might confer with him personally upon what was taking place, might assure him of the desire of the Queen's Government that his territories should remain safe from external attack, and at the same time might point out to him the extreme difficulty of attaining this object unless it were permitted by him to place its own officers on his frontier to watch the course of events beyond it. It was true that the Amir's relations with the Russian Governor-General of Turkistan had of late become more intimate, and that a correspondence which that official had commenced with the Kabul Darbar in 1871, and which at one time had caused serious disquiet to the Amir, was being carried on with increased activity, whilst His Highness's original practice of consulting the Indian Government as to the replies to be sent to General Kauffmann's communications had been discontinued. Nevertheless, Her Majesty's Government were willing to believe that Shere Ali, if his intentions were friendly, would be ready to join them in measures advantageous to himself, and essential for the protection of common interests.

11. In view of these interests and of the responsibilities which had morally devolved upon the British Government on behalf of Afghanistan, looking also to the imperfect information available in regard to the country in respect to which those responsibilities had been incurred, Lord Northbrook's Government had, in 1873, expressed the opinion that the temporary presence in Afghanistan of a British Officer, as then proposed by them, might do much to allay any feelings of mistrust lingering in the minds of the Afghan people, and might at the same time prepare the way for eventually placing permanent British representatives at Kabul, Herat, and elsewhere. Encouraged by this opinion, Her Majesty's Government came to the conclusion that although Lord Northbrook's efforts to attain the desired object had not met with success, the time had come when the measure thus indicated could no longer with safety be postponed. Your predecessor in Council had, indeed, whilst appreciating all the advantages to be anticipated from it, frankly represented to Her Majesty's present advisers the difficulties attending the initiation of it; he believed the time and circumstances of the moment to be inopportune for placing British Agents on the Afghan borders, and was of opinion that such a step should be deferred till the progress of events justified more specific assurances to Shere Ali, which might then be given in the shape of a treaty, followed by the establishment of Agencies at Herat and other suitable places. Her Majesty's Government, however, were unable to agree in this view; they deemed it probable that if events were thus allowed to march without measures of precaution on the part of the British Government, the time would have passed when representations to the Amir could be made with any probability of a favourable result; and they considered it important that the actual sentiments of His Highness, in reference to which different opinions were held by different authorities, should be tested in good time.

12. Accordingly, on Your Excellency's departure from England to assume the Viceroyalty, Her Majesty's Government instructed you to offer to Shere Ali that same active countenance and protection which he had previously solicited at the hands of the Indian Government. It was clearly impossible, however, to enter into any formal engagement in this sense without requiring from the Amir some substantial proof of his unity of interests with the British Government. Whilst Her Majesty's Government, therefore, authorized Your Excellency to concede to His Highness substantial pecuniary aid, a formal recognition of his dynasty, so far as it would not involve active interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan, and an explicit pledge of material support in case of unprovoked foreign aggression, you were directed not to incur these heavy responsibilities unless Shere Ali, on his part, were prepared to allow a British Agent, or Agents, access to positions in his territories (other than at Kabul itself), where, without prejudicing the personal authority of the ruler, they could acquire trustworthy information of events likely to threaten the tranquillity or independence of Afghanistan.

13. The measures which Your Excellency adopted on your arrival in India to give effect to the instructions of Her Majesty's Government were framed with discretion, and in a spirit of consideration towards Shere Ali. You sent your Native Aide-de-Camp, Ressaldar-Major Khanan Khan, to that Prince, charged with the duty of informing him of your desire to depute temporarily to his capital, or to any other point in Afghan territory agreeable to His Highness, a special Envoy, whose mission was not merely to be one of compliment, but one for the discussion of matters of common interest to the two Governments; and you took care to convey to His Highness verbal assurances of the friendly character of your advances to him. But Shere Ali rejected your overtures and declined to receive your Envoy.

14. Your Excellency exhorted the Amir to consider seriously the consequences of an attitude which might end in compelling the British Government to look upon him thenceforth as a Prince who voluntarily desired to isolate his interests from those of the British Government. In a conciliatory spirit you abstained from pressing upon him the reception of your Envoy, and you acceded to a suggestion of His Highness that your Vakil at Kabul should make personal representations to you on the Amir's behalf. These representations proved to be a recapitulation of grievances dating from 1872, and were briefly as follows:—

- 1.—The communication which he had received from the late Viceroy in 1874 on behalf of his rebellious son, Yakub Khan, whom he had imprisoned.
- 2.—The decision on the question of the Seistan boundary.
- 3.—The gifts sent by the late Viceroy direct to the Chief of Wakhan, who is a tributary to the Amir.
- 4.—The repeated rejection of his previous requests for an alliance and a formal recognition of the order of succession as established by him in the person of his son, Abdoollah Jan.

15. These grievances appeared to weigh heavily on His Highness's mind, and you therefore lost no time in assuring Shere Ali, through the Vakil, of the friendly feeling of the British Government towards him, of your desire to remove by a frank exchange of views all causes of irritation on his mind, and of your willingness to accede to his proposal that, in lieu of Sir Lewis Pelly proceeding to Kabul, an Afghan Envoy should be deputed to meet one from Your Excellency at Peshawar.

16. Your Vakil thereupon returned to Kabul, charged with the duty of explaining to the Amir, with the assistance of a clearly worded aide memoire, the favourable treaty which the British Government was prepared, upon certain conditions, to negotiate with him, and its desire to clear up past misunderstandings. His Highness evinced no cordiality in his reception of him; but after some delay he deputed to Peshawar his Minister Syud Nur Muhamad Shah, there to carry on with Sir Lewis Pelly the negotiations which Her Majesty's Government had considered of sufficient importance to have taken place on Afghan soil with the Amir himself. Although the Amir had been informed in writing, both of the concessions which the British Government was ready to grant to him and the conditions attached to them, and although, at the same time, it was signified to him that it would be of no avail for him to send his Envoy to Peshawar unless His Highness were prepared to agree to those conditions as the bases of the proposed treaty, it became apparent in the course of the conference that the Minister had received no specific authority to accept them. As, moreover, the language and conduct of Shere Ali, which had so long been dubious, became openly inimical, you judiciously took advantage of the sudden death of His Highness's Envoy to discontinue negotiations, the bases of which had been practically rejected.

17. This step on your part, as well as all your proceedings throughout the year preceding the conference, met with the entire approval of Her Majesty's Government. As observed by my predecessor in his Despatch of the 4th October 1877, Her Majesty's Government had felt justified in hoping that the advantages which they were ready to tender to the Amir would have been accepted in the spirit in which they were offered. At the same time, the attitude of His Highness for some years past had been so ambiguous as to prepare them for a different result. Far, however, from regarding the possibility of failure as affording sufficient grounds for total inaction, and continued acquiescence in the existing state of relations with the Amir, they had arrived at the conclusion that while the prevailing uncertainty as to His Highness's disposition rendered caution necessary in their advances, it was in itself a reason for adopting steps which would elicit the truth. From this point of view Her Majesty's Government could not regard the result of the Peshawar conference as altogether unsatisfactory, inasmuch as they were no longer left in doubt as to the reality of the Amir's alienation, which had previously been a matter of speculation. On the other hand, the proceedings at the conference, and the previous negotiations, had placed before the Amir in a clear light the views of Her Majesty's Government as to their existing obligations towards him, and had, at the same time, informed him of the terms, so favourable to his interests, on which they were willing to draw closer the bonds of union between the two countries, and to place their mutual relations on a footing more advantageous to both.

18. Their overtures having been thus treated, Her Majesty's Government were of opinion that no course was open to them but to maintain an attitude of vigilant reserve until such time as the Amir might better realize his own position and interests. This view had been anticipated by you in the final assurances conveyed to the Afghan Envoy by Sir Lewis Pelly, and your policy since the close of the Peshawar conference has been in accordance with it. Whilst carefully watching the course of affairs in Afghanistan, so far as the imperfect means of obtaining information has admitted, you abstained from all interference in them, in the hope that time would enable His Highness to realize the dangers accruing to himself by the rejection of the friendly advances of the British Government. That hope, however, has not been realized. The Amir has persisted in his unfriendly isolation, and ultimately, having two years ago declined to receive a British Envoy, even temporarily, within his territory, on the ground that he could not guarantee his safety, nor thereafter be left with any excuse for declining to receive a Russian Mission, he has welcomed with every appearance of ostentation an Embassy from the Czar, despatched to his Court at a time when there were indications that an interruption of friendly relations between this country and Russia might be imminent.

19. In these circumstances Your Excellency represented to Her Majesty's Government that a policy of inaction could no longer be persisted in, and that the Amir's reception of the Russian Mission at such a time, and under such circumstances, left him no further excuse for declining to receive at his capital an Envoy from the British Government. Your Excellency proposed, therefore, to demand the reception of a Mission to Kabul, headed by an officer of rank in the person of Sir Neville Chamberlain, whose name and family were held in high esteem by the Amir.

20. This proposal was approved by Her Majesty's Government. It was evident that a potentate who willingly admitted to his capital, at a critical period, Envoys of a Power which at the moment might be regarded as making its advances with objects not friendly to the British Government, could not reasonably refuse to receive a Mission from a Power with which he had continuously been in alliance. Your Excellency in Council did not anticipate any such refusal, and Her Majesty's Government saw no reason to question the soundness of your opinion on this point, based, as it must have been, on the best information at your command.

21. The anticipations both of Your Excellency and of Her Majesty's Government were, however, disappointed by the event. In a friendly letter, carried to Kabul by the Nawab Gholam Hassan Khan, you informed the Amir of the date on which Sir Neville Chamberlain was to leave Peshawar, and you gave His Highness adequate time in which to issue orders to his local officials for the reception of the Mission. You caused it, moreover, to be intimated to His Highness and his officials that a refusal of free passage to the Mission would be regarded by you as an act of hostility. The orders sent to the Afghan officers at Ali Masjid were, nevertheless, the reverse of what you had a right to expect, and Major Cavagnari, who went in advance of your Envoy, was distinctly informed that any attempt to enter Afghan territory would be resisted by force, of which an ostentatious display was at once made.

22. This conduct on the part of the Amir was wholly without justification. He was aware from various communications addressed to him by Your Excellency's predecessors, that the Russian Government had given assurances to the Government of Her Majesty to regard his territories as completely beyond its sphere of action; he was equally aware that the whole policy of the British Government since his accession to the throne had been to strengthen his power and authority, and to protect him from foreign aggression, although the methods adopted for doing so may not have at all times accorded with His Highness's own views; he had received from the British Government evidence of good-will, manifested by large gifts of money and arms, as well as by its successful efforts in obtaining from the Czar's Government its formal recognition of a fixed boundary, agreeable to himself, between his kingdom and the neighbouring Khanates; his subjects had been allowed to pass freely throughout India, to the great benefit of the trade and commerce of his country; and in no single instance has the Amir himself, or any of his people, been treated unjustly or inhospitably within British jurisdiction. By every bond of international courtesy, as well as by the treaty engagement of 1855 existing between the two countries, binding him to be the friend of our friends and the enemy of our enemies, the Amir was bound to a line of conduct the reverse of that which he adopted.

23. In reporting to Her Majesty's Government the forcible rejection of your friendly Mission, Your Excellency expressed the conviction of the Government of India that this act deprived the Amir of all further claim upon the forbearance of the British Government, and necessitated instant action. Her Majesty's Government were, however, unwilling to accept the evasive letter brought from Kabul by the Nawab Gholam Hassan Khan as Shere Ali's final answer to your Government, and determined to give him a short time for reconsideration. While, therefore, Her Majesty's Government acknowledged fully as binding on them the pledges given by Sir N. Chamberlain to the friendly Chiefs and people who undertook the safe conduct of his Mission, they decided to make an effort to avert the calamities of war, and with this object instructed Your Excellency to address to His Highness a demand, in temperate language, requiring a full and suitable apology within a given time for the affront which he has offered to the British Government, the reception of a permanent British Mission within his territories, and reparation for any injury inflicted by him on the tribes who attended Sir N. Chamberlain and Major Cavagnari, as well as an undertaking not to molest them hereafter. These instructions were promptly carried into effect by Your Excellency's Government, and the Amir has been informed that unless a clear and satisfactory reply be received from him by the 20th November, you will be compelled to consider his intentions as hostile, and to treat him as a declared enemy.

24. It only remains for me to assure Your Excellency of the cordial support of Her Majesty's Government in the onerous circumstances in which you are placed, and to state that I have received the commands of Her Majesty to publish this Despatch for the general information of the public, in anticipation of the papers connected with the important question with which it deals. Those papers are in course of preparation, but as they cover a period of not less than fifteen years, they must necessarily be voluminous.

I have the honor to be,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most obedient, humble Servant,

CRANBROOK.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

Camp Lahore, dated the 18th December 1878.

SPECIAL.

No. 10A.—His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General has much pleasure in directing the publication of the following despatch received from Lieutenant-General Sir S. Browne, K. C. S. I., C. B., V. C., Commanding the 1st Division, Peshawar Field Force, announcing the capture of Ali Masjid on the 22nd November, the first important success of the campaign.

The Right Hon'ble the Governor-General wishes to express to the troops of all ranks, British and Native, his high appreciation of the manner in which they performed their duty on this occasion.

No. 111, dated Dhaka, the 29th November 1878.

From—LIEUT.-GENL. SIR S. J. BROWNE, K.C.S.I., Commanding 1st Division, Peshawar Valley Field Force,

To—The Quarter-Master-General in India, Army Head-Quarters.

My message from Ali Masjid on the 22nd instant communicated, for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in Chief, the capture of that place. I now have the honor to submit a detailed account of the operations.

On the receipt at Jamrud of orders to advance the force under my command, it moved in the following order:—

The 2nd Brigade under Brigadier-General Tytler, C.B., V.C., consisting of Her Majesty's 17th Foot, the Guide Infantry and the 1st Sikhs, at 6 P.M. on the 20th instant; followed at 2-30 A.M. of the 21st by the 1st Brigade, under Brigadier-General MacPherson, C.B., V.C., consisting of the 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade, the 4th Goorkhas, the 20th Regiment Punjab Infantry, and No. 4 (Hazara) Mountain Battery. Both these brigades took the same route, via Gudur Lashora to Sapri, the 1st Brigade being ordered to detach a party of 400 men under Major Gordon from Torbai for the Rotas Ridge.

Brigadier-General Tytler was directed to diverge from Sapri to Kata Koosta, a spot two miles behind Ali Masjid, where the defile begins to open, and which is here about 100 yards wide.

The 1st Brigade was ordered from Sapri to make for the continuation of the Rotas Ridge and crown the heights above, and a little in rear of, Ali Masjid.

The route as far as Sapri, which lies through a glen separating the Rotas Mountain from the main Tataria Range, had been reconnoitred previously by the Corps of Guides; but beyond that I was altogether guided by native information. It was a trying and most fatiguing march to Sapri, and the ground beyond proved to be more difficult still.

In my direct attack on Ali Masjid by the ordinary pass road I relied on the co-operation of the 1st Brigade by about 1 P.M. of the 21st, but as it turned out it could not reach its destination by the appointed time, owing to the very difficult nature of the hill it had to traverse. The Guides and 1st Sikh Infantry, however, occupied Kata Koosta about 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Counting on the co-operation above alluded to, I marched from Jamrud at 7 A.M. on the 21st with the remainder of the force in the following order:—

The advanced guard under Brigadier-General Appleyard, C. B.

250	14th Sikhs.
250	81st Foot.
2nd and 3rd Companies	Sappers and Miners.
40 Sabres	11th Bengal Lancers.

1 Battery C Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery.

No. 11 Battery 9th Brigade, Royal Artillery.

and remainder of the 14th Sikhs, followed by the Engineer Park; and at half a mile distant the remainder of the 81st Foot, the 27th Regiment Punjab Infantry, E-3rd and 13-9th Royal Artillery. Lastly, the 4th Infantry Brigade, with the Cavalry Brigade bringing up the rear.

No baggage was to leave Jamrud until the following day.

Three days' rations were taken by the troops.

On arrival at the commencement of the road which was made by us in the Afghan War of 1839-42, and which is known as the Mackeson Road, the Mountain Battery (11-9th Royal Artillery) with 200 Infantry diverged to the right, taking a course parallel to the column between it and the high Rotas Range.

Some little delay was occasioned owing to the bad state of the road just beyond Mackeson Bridge; and here a picket of the enemy's Cavalry was seen on the low hills in front of us. This picket gradually retired as we advanced.

At 11 A.M., the head of the advanced guard reached the Shagai Ridge; and as a large body of the enemy were now visible on the Rotas Ridge to my right, a part of the 4th Brigade was detached to occupy the intervening ridges.

The advanced guard threw out parties to its right and left, and one of 100 rifles was sent on in advance to occupy a rocky ridge some 200 yards in front, and to cover the working party employed in making passable for guns, the descent between it and the Shagai Ridge into the Khaibar stream.

We had occupied the Shagai Ridge half an hour or more, and had made our dispositions without opposition, when the enemy opened fire simultaneously from the fort, from a gun on a peak to the right of Ali Masjid and overlooking it, and from three other guns below the fort, but invisible to us.

The practice was excellent, shot after shot hitting the ridge; but our little force in the front was well sheltered, and only suffered slightly. The fire continued about an hour without our replying to it.

In the meantime I.-C., Royal Horse Artillery, had come up and taken up a position to our right, out of the line of fire; and shortly after, I ordered up two guns from that battery on to the ridge and opened fire. The other four guns subsequently came into action; and the fire was continued till the Heavy Battery came up at 1-30 P.M., and opened fire at 2,800 yards. Our firing was good, and was kept up all day.

The fire from the 40-pounders seemed at first to cause the enemy's fire to slacken; but after a short respite it recommenced as warmly as ever.

Hoping that my detached brigades might be nearing their destination, I, at 2-30 P.M., ordered an advance. Brigadier-General Appleyard was to descend and cross the Khaibar stream at Lalla China, and, under shelter of a spur, to work round towards the line of the enemy's intrenchments to our left; our right to advance on to the ridge in front of Shagai; 11-9th Royal Artillery (Mountain Battery) to take up a position there also and open fire; and I.-C., Royal Horse Artillery, with the escort of the 10th Hussars, to descend into the Khaibar stream and take up the most suitable position to aid in silencing the enemy's fire.

About 3-30 P.M. my right was in sharp conflict with the enemy's left, which occupied an inaccessible position along the face of a precipitous cliff, and on one point of which they had a gun in position. No further advance could be made on this side beyond pushing on a small party in the right centre, which, from the nature of the ground, was well protected.

In the meantime the Heavy Battery and E-3rd Royal Artillery, taking the place of the Horse Artillery, kept up a constant fire on the enemy's position, and I.-C., Royal Horse Artillery, having descended and advanced to the bend of the stream came into action there at 1,000 yards.

As the day was closing in, I sent word to Brigadier-General Appleyard not to advance beyond an indicated ridge; but before my orderly officer could reach him to deliver the order, his skirmishers had advanced and had arrived close on the enemy's position, when a sharp fire was exchanged within a very short distance. At this point Major Birch and Lieutenant FitzGerald of the 27th Punjab Infantry met their death whilst gallantly leading their men. Here also Captain Maclean was wounded, and many casualties took place in the 14th Sikhs and 27th Punjab Infantry.

Darkness now stopped further operations; and Brigadier-General Appleyard withdrew his men to the ridge I had previously selected for him to hold.

In these positions we bivouacked for the night: and up to this time I had failed to receive any intelligence of the movements of my two brigades, which, as has been previously indicated, had been detached to turn the enemy's flank.

During the night I decided to reinforce Brigadier-General Appleyard with the Mountain Battery and some infantry from my right, so as to attack the enemy's right defences the following morning, after the Artillery had shelled the position well for half an hour.

When it was daylight, I observed the Mountain Battery, which was on its way to join Brigadier-General Appleyard, crossing the stream unmolested, where, on the previous evening, I-C. Royal Horse Artillery had been under a sharp fire; and there being also no reply to the three guns which then opened on the fort, I concluded it was abandoned. Further firing was therefore stopped; an advance was ordered; and, as supposed, the fort and entrenchments were found to be abandoned. The camp was standing, and there was evidence of a hurried flight, nothing whatever having been carried away. Twenty-four guns and large quantities of ammunition, both ordnance and rifle, fell into our possession.

The prisoners, of whom a number were captured by the turning brigade, stated that the cavalry, at about 5 p.m., first attempted to escape, but were checked at Kota Koosta by the Guides and the 1st Sikhs, and that they were followed by a portion of the infantry, who laid down their arms after receiving a volley. The main body of the garrison, finding the direct line of retreat cut off, fled by the Pesh Bolak track, which lay through their right entrenchments. The flight appears to have commenced when it became dark, but the Pass Afridis, who had been watching the combat during the day from the neighbouring heights, were soon in pursuit, and robbed the enemy of all they possessed, securing a great number of rifles.

The Mir Akhor and other Sardars, it is stated, escaped by this route.

I remained during the 22nd at Ali Masjid, and opened communication with my two advanced brigades. On the 23rd I marched for Lundi Khana with I-C. Royal Horse Artillery, the 10th Hussars, the Guide Cavalry, and the 14th Sikhs, arriving there at 3-30 p.m. The Guide Cavalry, accompanied by Major Cavagnari, C.I.S., I ordered on to Dhaka, ten miles further on, and which place they reached and occupied at 6 p.m.

Brigadier-General Appleyard followed the next day with the 3rd Brigade and 11-9th Royal Artillery to Lundi Khana Kotal, where they have remained. The 1st and 2nd Brigade came on to Dhaka.

The 4th Brigade under Brigadier-General Browne, with 3rd Royal Artillery and the Heavy Battery, I left at Ali Masjid, the 11th Bengal Lancers remaining also in the vicinity, in view to keeping open my communication at the lower end of the Pass.

The above is a general report of the proceedings of the force under my command from the time of leaving Jamrud to the occupation of Dhaka. Subsidiary reports will be submitted when I am in receipt of them from the officers commanding brigades.

I trust the result of the operations will be deemed satisfactory.

I can now only further add that the whole of the troops, officers, and men, did their duty in a manner meriting the warmest approval of Government, and upheld the character of the British and Native Army of Her Majesty.

 The Hon'ble BABOO KRISTODAS PAL, RAI BAHADOOR, C.I.E.

NEW MEMBER.

The Hon'ble MOULVI AMEER HOSSEIN took his seat in Council.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said—Before the Council proceeded to the regular business before them, it might perhaps be convenient to refer to the position which they stood in regard to the business which was likely to come before the Council during the present cold weather. The first and oldest measure they had before the Council was a Bill which was passed last year—he meant the Bill to amend the procedure in suits between landlord and tenant in Chota Nagpore—and was sent up for the assent of the Governor-General. That assent had not been received; in fact it had been withheld, but there was no chance of the Bill being vetoed. The assent, however, had been kept in abeyance on account of a technical difficulty arising from the Act being somewhat in conflict with section 4 of the Civil Procedure Code. He believed that at the next meeting of the Council of the Governor-General a short provisional Bill would be passed amending the Code, and the difficulties in the way of giving legal effect to the Bill which had been passed by this Council would then be removed. When that had been done, they should also be able to bring in a Bill which had been discussed for a long time, a Bill which he had pledged himself to endeavour to have passed into law, for improving the procedure in suits for rent. The consent of the Government of India to a Bill of that sort being introduced was obtained in the early part of 1877. After the Bill had been drafted and circulated for the consideration of a number of local officers of experience and certain public bodies and private individuals, and the opinions of those officers and others had been received, he was advised that that Bill, for the same reason as the Chota Nagpore Rent Bill, was beyond the powers of the local Council, and should be dealt with by the Council of the Governor-General. He therefore addressed the Government of India, forwarding the draft of such a Bill as seemed to be required, with a request that it might be considered and passed by the Council of the Governor-General; but, on account of the difficulty to which he had referred, the Bill had remained pending. The Bill was ultimately referred back to this Government, with the intimation that the Code of Civil Procedure would be so amended that the local Council would be able to take up the Bill and pass it themselves. The subject of the Bill was one which was obviously particularly within the province of a local Council to deal with. He hoped, as he had said before, that the Bill to amend the Civil Procedure Code would be passed at the next meeting of the Council of the Governor-General, and, in anticipation of the passing of such a Bill, the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie would move for leave to bring in a Bill to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent. The draft of the Bill which the hon'ble member proposed to introduce had been largely circulated for discussion amongst officers of experience and knowledge of the subject, and the Government had received a large number of replies, and many valuable suggestions and criticisms. There had also been a lengthy correspondence with the British Indian Association, in which they had represented their views very ably. There was at first a great difference of opinion between them and the Government regarding the transfer of occupancy rights; but although the members of the Association did not all agree to what was proposed, the majority of the Association had withdrawn to a great extent the objections which they had raised, and he hoped that in Committee the Council would be able to come to some definite conclusion upon the subject. It must be expected that the landholding classes would be inclined strongly to the landholding view in this respect, but he believed that a perusal of the papers would show that the Association were disposed to consider the matter in an impartial spirit, and he thought they had represented the general opinions of the landholding interest on this question.

The next Bill before the Council was a Bill for the settlement of the rents of lands on the application of landlords and tenants. There had been a good deal of correspondence on this Bill also, which had been circulated to the Commissioners of Divisions, and other local officers and public bodies. There had been considerable differences of opinion as regards the details of the measure, and on one or two of the main principles of the Bill. But he felt satisfied that, when the papers were laid before the Committee, they would be able to frame a really useful beneficial measure which would meet the real interests of both the parties concerned.

The Court of Wards' Bill was still under the consideration of a Select Committee. The subject was a very pressing one, and he hoped the Select Committee would proceed with the consideration of the Bill with as much expedition as was practicable; a number of communications regarding this bill had been received since the last meeting of the Council, and he had no doubt they would receive the careful consideration of the Committee.

So much for the Bills which had been drafted or were under discussion before. There were also one or two new Bills, and there might probably be some more introduced later on. Amongst these was a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to jute warehouses and fire-brigades in the town and suburbs of Calcutta and Howrah. The object of this Bill was to reduce the fees now received for the registration of jute warehouses. It would be found, as would probably be explained by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, that they were levying fees in excess of what was required for the bond fide purposes of the Act, and the charge upon Insurance Companies also pressed rather hardly upon them, and a Bill would be brought in to remedy those defects in the existing law.

Then there was a Bill to transfer the control of passenger boats plying within the Port of Calcutta from the Commissioner of Police to the Conservators of the Port; and a Bill to extend to other places, where pilgrims congregated, the same provisions of law which had operated so satisfactorily at Pooree, with a view to provide for sanitation in the midst of the large towns in Bengal to which pilgrims flocked at particular seasons of the year.

Lastly, there was a Bill for the periodical inspection of steam-boilers and prime-movers attached thereto in the town and suburbs of Calcutta and Howrah. The main features of this Bill would be explained to the Council by the Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell when he moved for leave to introduce it.

Besides the above mentioned measures, there were, as he had said before, one or two little Bills which were not yet in a condition to be placed before the Council, and he need not therefore further allude to them at present.

JUTE WAREHOUSES AND FIRE-BRIGADES.

THE HON'BLE MR. COCKERELL moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to jute warehouses and fire-brigades in Calcutta, the Suburbs, and Howrah. The Bill was really one to amend the two existing Acts in force, namely, Bengal Acts II of 1872 and II of 1875. The object of the Bill was to enable the Government to relieve the jute trade from the heavy taxation with which it was now burdened. Under the existing law, the entire expense of maintaining, and even more than maintaining, the fire-brigades for Calcutta and the Suburbs was thrown upon the jute and cotton trade. At first sight it would appear that the easiest way of remedying the difficulty would perhaps be to increase the area of taxation, and to bring under the operation of the Act warehouses used for the storage of other inflammable materials. But a difficulty existed in the schedule of rates, which gave a minimum below which they could not be fixed. In the present Bill it was proposed to introduce a new scale of fees, and also to render places used for the storage of inflammable mineral oils and other inflammable materials liable to taxation; such places were as dangerous to the town as the jute and cotton warehouses; and it was proposed that they should also be made to contribute towards the expenses of the fire-brigade which was maintained for the protection of Calcutta and the Suburbs.

The motion was agreed to.

STEAM-BOILERS AND PRIME-MOVERS.

THE HON'BLE MR. COCKERELL moved for leave to introduce a Bill for the periodical inspection of steam-boilers and prime-movers attached thereto in the town and suburbs of Calcutta and in Howrah. The existing Act under which these inspections were made—Bengal Act VI of 1861—only provided for the inspection of boilers and prime-movers within the limits of Calcutta and the Suburbs, and the municipal limits of the town of Howrah. At the time the Act was passed, there were few factories of any importance beyond those limits; and it was not considered necessary to give the Act any more extended operation. Since that time, however, a large number of extensive factories had been erected, on both sides of the river beyond the limits of the town and suburbs, where steam-power was employed; there were a number of laborers employed in these factories, and it was therefore considered desirable that they should be brought under the same supervision as the factories within the town and suburbs; and it was therefore proposed to empower the local Government to extend the Act to any district in Lower Bengal. The opportunity would be taken to incorporate the two existing Acts into one, and introduce certain amendments suggested by the Steam-boiler Committee.

The motion was agreed to.

PASSENGER BOATS (CALCUTTA).

THE HON'BLE MR. MACKENZIE moved for leave to introduce a Bill to transfer the control of passenger boats plying within the port of Calcutta from the Commissioner of Police to the Conservators of the Port. He said—"Some years ago, in 1871-72, the Port Commissioners of Calcutta undertook to pay three-fourths of the cost of the River Police on condition that the surplus fees from the registration of cargo and passenger boats plying within the port were made over to them. They have continued up to date to draw those fees. But under the law, as it stood, the work of surveying and registering cargo-boats, and realising fees on that account, lay with the Collector of Customs, while the registration of passenger boats is still a duty of the Commissioner of Police. It has from the outset been admitted that, if the Commissioners benefit by the fees, they might very well undertake the supervision of the work; and it has been shown that economy in establishments might be effected by bringing the registration of both cargo and passenger boats under one and the same authority. The new Customs Act VIII of 1878 has enabled the Lieutenant-Governor to entrust the management of cargo-boat registration to the Port Commissioners, and the Bill which I now ask leave to introduce is designed to transfer the registration of passenger boats plying within the port from the control of the Commissioner of Police to that of the Port Commissioners."

The motion was agreed to.

RECOVERY OF RENT.

THE HON'BLE MR. MACKENZIE moved for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent, and to amend the law relating to rent in Bengal. He said—"The announcement which you, Sir, have been able to make regarding the long-pending legislation on rent matters will, I am sure, have been gratifying to this Council, as it must be to the great landed interests of Bengal. In moving accordingly on the part of Government for leave to introduce a Bill to provide a more summary procedure for the realization of rents, and to amend in other particulars the rent law of the province, I do not feel called upon to take up the time of hon'ble members by any very lengthy speech. It will be necessary for me hereafter, should my motion be accepted, to explain, and I hope justify, the scope and motives of the measure which I shall then have the honor to submit. To-day, however, I need only remind the Council that the demand for a more summary method of realising undisputed rents than is provided by the ordinary procedure of the civil courts has been waxing louder and more pressing year by year since the passing of Act VIII of 1869.

The law's delays are, we know, proverbial; but the delays of a Bengal rent suit in a Bengal Moonsiff's court are more than even proverbial philosophy can make palatable. Notwithstanding the fact that in about 75 per cent. of the suits for arrears of rent the claim is not really contested, the zemindars and other rent receivers have too often found themselves unable to recover their just dues without submitting to a process which entails costs that they may possibly never recover, and delays that are frequently embarrassing and ruinous; and even when the zemindar has got his decree, it by no means follows that he has got his rent. Now, it is doubtless true that much of this difficulty in realizing rent actually due has arisen from the fact that in many districts there lie unsettled between landlords and tenants very serious open issues regarding rates, enhancement, interest, tenant-rights, and so forth. And the zemindars were, at the outset, anxious that in any legislative settlement of the matter the whole field of dispute should be, as it were, cadastrally surveyed, and all the doubtful boundary lines permanently marked. This course of action was, as some of us are aware, very strongly pressed upon the Government at the time of the Pubna rent disturbances, and at the commencement of the mora widespread, though less noisy, agrarian movement in Eastern Bengal; but even Sir George Campbell shrank from encountering the general upheaval of the whole rent system, as by law established, which such an enquiry and such legislation would certainly then have brought about. It was decided, therefore, to adopt a policy of watchfulness and waiting, in the hope that compromise and common sense would lead both parties nearer to a mutual settlement. That policy has, to a great extent, been justified by its results, and you, Sir, were able, at the close of your first tour throughout the Eastern districts, to declare your satisfaction with the improved tone and feeling which you then found to exist between landlords and tenants, owing, as it appeared, to wise and mutual concessions made. If anything were required to prove the enormous difficulties which even now beset every attempt to deal by law with the details of the economic problems that are wrapped up in this question of enhancement, the criticisms elicited by the measure so ably advocated by Sir R. Temple two years ago would supply that proof. The present Government is now indeed considering the possibility of dealing with it by approaching the difficulty from a different side. A position which it is hopeless to storm in front, may sometimes (as at Peiwar Kothul) be successfully outflanked. It is just possible that by reverting to the old theory of rent adjustment in this country, as a matter for the arbitrament or settlement of the ruling power and its revenue officers,—it is possible, I say, that we may find a rational remedy for the existing unsatisfactory dead-lock. That, however, is a matter which needs careful consideration and jealous scrutiny; and circumstances have arisen which make it imperatively necessary to deal separately and at once with the more simple question of the recovery of undisputed arrears of rent.

The zemindars on their part are now not merely not unwilling, but anxious to have this portion of their case taken into separate and final consideration. The Road Cess and Public Works Cess Acts have thrown upon them the responsibility of collecting with their rents and paying into the treasuries a that portion of this fresh local and provincial taxation which falls upon under-tenants of every degree. If they cannot recover this easily and effectually from their tenants, they must under penalty pay the amount themselves—a position which the State is obviously bound to render as little burdensome as possible. The Lieutenant-Governor therefore, as he has informed us immediately on his assumption of office, and in accordance with the last views of his predecessor, pressed upon the Government of India the necessity of early legislation to facilitate the recovery of undisputed rents and to improve the law for execution of decrees in rent cases. The actual measure proposed was settled by a committee of Government officers and native gentlemen, and would doubtless long ere now have been passed into law, but for the fact that certain legal theories regarding the legislative powers of this Council stood in the way. Last February, therefore, to avoid all technical difficulties of this nature, the Government of India was moved to have the Bill which had been prepared by the local Government passed in the Supreme Legislature. Involving, however, as such a measure must, many issues of local importance appreciable fully only by local experience, the Supreme Government has, on mature consideration, preferred after all to relegate the whole matter to the local Council, undertaking on its part to do what is necessary to validate our proceedings by supplementary legislation in its own Chamber. This resolution will I think, be satisfactory to all interested, as we shall in this way have the advantage of the criticisms and suggestions of my hon'ble friends opposite, and of the several officers of wide Bengal experience who now sit upon this Council.

But while the delay that has taken place in legislation may have been trying to the zemindars, it has enabled the Government to mature and graft upon the proposed measure various amendments of the law, calculated as it believes, to do much good to the ryots. Leaving, as I have already said, the economic questions involved in the law of enhancement for separate treatment, the Government has sought, while improving the position of the zemindar in respect of his realizations of rent, to strengthen also the position of the cultivator by relieving him from the harassment of too frequent suits by securing for him good evidence of his payments, and, above all, by giving him a transferable right and interest in his occupancy tenure. I shall on a future occasion explain under what limitations and safeguards the Government believes that these reforms are possible; but meantime I have perhaps said enough to convince the Council of the great importance of the measure, leave to introduce which I now crave."

The HON'BLE KRISTODAS PAL said—As he had taken a somewhat active part in the discussions upon the rent question in Bengal, he desired to express his satisfaction at the step proposed to be taken to improve the law for the recovery of rent. His hon'ble friend the mover of the Bill had in lucid and glowing periods described the state of the rent question in Bengal. He had told the Council how there had been a dead-lock and how the attitude of Government had hitherto been to wait and watch, and that active intervention would now take the place of the masterly inactivity of former days. This was a matter for congratulation. His Honor the President in addressing the Council last year upon the Irrigation Bill had pledged himself to a Bill of this kind. In referring to the obligations imposed by the new Cess Acts upon landlords of collecting on behalf of Government the cesses from their tenants, His Honor said—

They have not such facilities as they should have for the ready and prompt realization of their rent and the Government cesses. This difficulty had already attracted the attention of my predecessor, Sir Richard Temple, and just before he left Bengal he recorded a minute expressing his intention of at once applying for the sanction of the Government of India to pass a short Bill to provide a system for the realization of rent in a somewhat more summary and prompt process than that which now exists. I shall give that subject my best attention, and I may say that I am already in communication with the officers subordinate to me, and I hope it will not be long before I shall be in a position to ask the Council, with the permission of the Government of India, to pass a Bill of this sort.

That Bill was about to be laid before the Council, and the pledge, which His Honor was pleased to give, was now on a fair way to be fulfilled. As the Bill was not yet before the Council, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL was not in a position to consider its details, but he hoped it would have the effect of pouring oil over troubled waters.

The motion was then agreed to.

EXTENSION OF THE POOREE LODGING-HOUSE ACT.

THE HON'BLE MR. O'KINEALY moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend Bengal Act IV of 1871 (The Pooree Lodging-house Act). This Act was passed in 1871 for the sanitation of the town of Pooree, and had worked remarkably well. The necessity for extending the operation of the Act to other towns where pilgrims congregated had been brought to the notice of Government, and it was considered advisable to give the local officers of such towns powers similar to those conferred on the Magistrate of Pooree by Act IV of 1871.

The motion was agreed to.

COURT OF WARDS' BILL.

THE HON'BLE MR. BUCKLAND moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the Court of Wards within the provinces subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

The motion was agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 4th January 1879.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., at 22h.; the maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newmann's No. 8 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction and movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

Report on the Fluctuations in traffic on the Northern Bengal State Railway for the month of November 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.

THE result of the month's working shows a falling off of 6,213 maunds in the total weight carried, as compared with October, but as a matter of fact there has been an increase of 4,557 maunds in public merchandise, as will be seen if the short despatch of railway material is excluded.

INCREASES.

Ale Mds. 14
Cotton " 28
The increase in the weight lifted under these heads is unimportant.
Gunny-bags Mds. 3,667
The movement in this staple is most encouraging, not only as regards the staple itself, but as a forerunner of the heavy traffic in food-grain that will naturally follow.
Jute Mds. 8,409
The special reduced rate for this article came into force on the 13th instant, and this, together with an increase of 2 annas per maund in the Calcutta market, has given an impetus to this traffic.
Piece-goods Mds. 240
This is an ordinary trade fluctuation and does not call for any special remark.
Seeds Mds. 1,096
Two-thirds of the weight shown under this head is upward traffic, and is almost entirely to meet agricultural purposes.
Other goods Mds. 5,866

The total weight lifted under this head during the month is 10,688 maunds, which is 3,167 maunds more than we have yet carried in any one month. As this traffic is made up almost entirely of miscellaneous through booked consignments, I think it may be taken as an indication of a movement on the part of native despatchers to avail themselves of the rail for the purpose of supplying stations that have hitherto been almost exclusively served by boats.

DECREASES.

Food-grain Mds. 4,342
Operations in this staple have been almost entirely suspended during the month, pending the result of the gathering in of the new crop, which is being rapidly carried on.
Ginger Mds. 753
No business whatever has been done in this article for some time, and despatchers are holding off for more favourable rates than can be obtained in the present state of the Calcutta market.
Hides Mds. 103
The slightly increased rates prevailing at the beginning of October caused larger despatches of some of the lower descriptions than there was demand for, and the result of this is being felt this month.
Railway material Mds. 10,570
This falling off was caused principally by a scarcity of labour at Sara for loading purposes, the coolies engaged on the ghât work having left almost in a body to gather in the harvest.
Tea Mds. 4,403
Although this falling off is considerable, still the weight lifted during the month, 11,500 maunds, is more than an average month's work, inasmuch as the despatches during October were unusually heavy owing to the partial stoppage in September.
Tobacco Mds. 5,283
The same cause which operated on this traffic during October has had a still greater effect this month.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT—MUNICIPAL.

The 7th January 1878.

THE following Resolution is published for general information:—

READ—

A letter from the Accountant-General, Bengal, No. 1116B, dated the 16th December 1878, submitting copy of a circular letter which he has issued to all magistrates and collectors, with a view to settle the balances of local and municipal funds, and requesting Government to issue a general order to the officers in charge of municipal and local funds for the purpose of ensuring the periodical settlement and verification of such balances.

Read again—

The Government letter No. 3045, dated the 24th July last, to the Accountant-General on the same subject.

SERIOUS discrepancies having been frequently found to exist between the balances of municipal and local funds shown in the books of the Accountant-General and those claimed by the officers administering the municipal and local funds concerned, the Accountant-General was asked to report what measures he would propose for securing a final settlement of all such balances and the regular and periodical verification of them in future.

2. That officer now brings to notice that the local fund balances on 31st March 1872 were settled after a careful investigation extending over several years, and that the municipal balance was adjusted so as to be brought into agreement with the balances shown in the local treasuries on the same date. This settlement of balances was approved by Government in letter No. 1098, dated 15th April 1874. For every year since that date a statement of the receipts, disbursements and balance of each fund has been sent to the Collector of the District to which the fund belonged, but in many cases no action has been taken on these statements and they have not even been communicated to the administrators of the funds concerned.

3. In all cases where the balance communicated to the Collector was not objected to, the Accountant-General assumed that its correctness was admitted by the local officers, but this does not seem to have been the case, and it now appears that numerous discrepancies exist between the balances entered in the Accountant-General's books and those shown in the various local accounts. These discrepancies were brought to notice by the Accountant-General specifically requesting the Collectors to compare the balances shown by him for 31st March 1877 with those claimed by the local officers on the same date, and at the same time it was made evident that the district officers generally laboured under a misapprehension as to the procedure to be followed in reconciling discrepant balances.

4. To remove the misunderstandings which have hitherto prevailed, to ensure that the balances shown by different officers shall be brought into agreement, and to provide for the periodical agreement and verification of such balances in future, the Lieutenant-Governor now directs that the following rules shall be strictly observed:—

I.—As regards all local funds of which the balances were settled by the Accountant-General for 31st March 1872, the balances so settled must be accepted once for all as correct by the officers or persons administering the funds, and their accounts adjusted accordingly. No claim on the part of any fund to open up the accounts of any period prior to that date will be admitted except with the sanction of Government which will only be given on special grounds.

II.—For any period subsequent to 31st March 1872, the statement of the Accountant-General showing the yearly balance of the fund and the receipts and disbursements month by month shall, prima facie, be held to be correct. Any collector or other officer charged with the administration of a fund, who may desire to dispute the correctness of the balance shown by the Accountant-General, can only make good his claim by showing either that receipts paid into the treasury on account of the fund have not been credited to it, or that charges have been taken against the fund which should not have been debited to it. The items of receipt which are claimed must be traced in the treasury accounts, and not merely pointed out in the accounts kept by the local fund. The receipts given by the local treasury afford an easy and conclusive means of establishing such claims.

III.—For all municipalities, the balances as adjusted on 31st March 1872 by a credit to Provincial Reserve shall prima facie be held to be correct, but corrections will not be limited, as in the case of local funds, to transactions that occurred subsequent to that date. Any municipality which can show that money paid into the treasury before 31st March 1872 was not placed to its credit, or that any item was charged to it in the yearly accounts which should not have been so charged, will have its account adjusted accordingly. In such cases the Accountant-General may exercise his discretion as to whether the matter should be reported for the orders of Government or not.

IV.—All disagreements as to municipal balances arising from transactions that occurred after 31st March 1872, will be adjusted by the method prescribed in Rule II for local funds.

V.—The Accountant-General will arrange, with as little delay as possible, to keep a separate account for each municipality, union and station. When the district municipal balance has been settled, the district officers must take immediate steps to distribute it among the various municipalities, unions and stations of that district, and the Accountant-General will, as a rule, accept such distribution without further investigation.

VI.—The Accountant-General should send, once a quarter, to the officer charged with the administration of each municipality or local fund, a statement showing receipts and disbursements on account of the fund as well as its balance at the close of the quarter, and such officer must state in reply whether he does or does not accept the balance, and must lose no time in making good, in the manner already pointed out, any claim he may wish to put forward on behalf of the fund. The sending of this statement by the Accountant-General need not be deferred until a reconciliation of the balances at present shown in the various accounts has been effected, as it is of importance to ensure that current receipts and expenditure are correctly shown in the accounts.

VII.—The Accountant-General is responsible for taking steps to ensure that the treasury plus and minus memorandum for each municipality or local fund agrees with the figures shown in his accounts, and treasury officers may, when required, certify the amount of receipts and disbursements which in their accounts they have credited or debited to any municipality or local fund, but such certificates are open to correction by the Accountant-General in whose office the accounts of balances are kept.

5. Any doubt as to the real balance at credit of a municipality or fund is calculated to affect injuriously its efficient working, and the disagreement of the balances shown for the same fund in the accounts kept in different offices opens a wide door to fraud and is a fruitful source of complication and correspondence which might easily be avoided. The rules now passed are intended to facilitate the reconciliation of existing, and the periodical verification of all future, balances and the Lieutenant-Governor will not fail to take serious notice of the conduct of any officer who may hereafter be shown to have neglected this important part of his duty or to have disobeyed the orders of Government in this matter.

ORDER.—Ordered that copies of this resolution be forwarded to all District Magistrates and to the Chairmen of all 1st and 2nd Class Municipalities for information and guidance, and also to Commissioners of Divisions for information.

Ordered also that a copy of it be forwarded to the Accountant-General in reply to his letter No. 1116B, dated the 16th December 1878.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

D. BARBOUR,

Offy. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

R U L E S .

TRANSPORT, IMPORT, AND EXPORT.

1. No cannon, articles designed for torpedo service, war-rockets, or machinery for the manufacture of arms and ammunition, shall be transported over any part of British India without a license granted by the Governor General in Council under the signature of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department. The license shall be in Form I appended to these rules, and a copy shall be at once communicated to the Magistrate of the District, or to the Political Officer of the State, to which the articles are consigned.

2. No arms, or ammunition, or military stores, shall be transported in any part of British India without a license in Form II appended to these rules. If the articles are despatched from Calcutta, Madras or Bombay, the license will be granted by the Commissioner of Police; in all other cases the license will be granted by the Magistrate of the District. If the articles are to be consigned to a place beyond the jurisdiction of the officer granting the license, the consent of the Magistrate of the District to which the consignment is made must be obtained before the license is issued. Such consent may be obtained by the person applying for the license; or the Police Commissioner, or District Magistrate, to whom application for the license is made, may forward the proposed license to the officer whose consent is required; and on receiving reply should either issue the license to the applicant, or inform him that his application for a license to transport arms, &c., had been refused.

3. Persons lawfully entitled to possess arms, or to go armed, are permitted to transport, in any part of British India, arms or ammunition in reasonable quantities for their own use. Any person abusing this exemption and transporting such articles otherwise than in reasonable quantities for his own use, will be held to have contravened this rule, and will, on conviction, become liable to the penalties under Sections 18 and 19.

4. A license to transport arms or ammunition or military stores, is void if the consignment breaks bulk at any place short of the district for which it may be granted. A license to transport shall ordinarily not be made valid for more than twice the period actually required for the conveyance of the articles to their destination by the intended route.

5. No license shall be granted, save by the special order of the Governor General in Council, certified under the signature of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, for the importation into, or exportation from, British India, by sea, or river, or land, of any cannon, or of any rifles, except rifles of such quality, or in such quantity as may reasonably be held to be intended for bond fide sporting purposes.

6. Licenses to import or export arms, other than cannon or rifles not excepted as in the next foregoing rule, ammunition or military stores by sea, may be granted at the ports of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Rangoon, Calicut, Kurrachee, Aden, and for no other ports. They shall be granted by the Commissioners of Police in respect of each Presidency Town, and by the Magistrate of the District in respect of Rangoon and Kurrachee. The fee payable in respect of each such license shall be ten Rupees, and the licenses shall be in the Forms III and IV appended to these rules. It shall be a condition of such licenses that the arms and ammunition imported shall either be deposited in a warehouse sanctioned in this regard under Section 7 of the Indian Arms Act, or that they shall be at once despatched to their destination under a separate license to transport.

7. Licenses to export arms, or ammunition, or military stores, by land or by river, to any place beyond the frontier, to any place within the limits of a feudatory State, may be granted in Form V by the Commissioner of Police, or the District Magistrate, at the place of despatch. The fee leviable shall be five Rupees for each such license. If the articles are consigned to a place in any feudatory State, the license shall not be issued until the consent of the Political Officer of such feudatory State has been obtained. In the case of despatches to Upper Burma, to Nepal, or to Kelat, or to any other place beyond the external frontier of British India, the consent of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department must be obtained before the license is issued. Consent to licenses to be issued under this rule may be obtained by the officer to whom application for license is made in the manner provided by Rule 2.

8. Persons desirous of transporting arms, ammunition, or military stores, must apply in writing to the officer authorised to grant transport licenses from the place of despatch. The application must specify—

- (a) the place to which the articles are to be transported, the route of transport, and the probable time occupied in the journey;
- (b) the quantity, description, average price, and the purpose of each kind of arms or ammunition; or
- (c) whether the applicant desires that the officer to whom he applies should obtain the consent of the Magistrate or Political Officer of the place of consignment; [if the applicant has obtained such consent, the evidence of such consent must be produced].

9. Persons transporting arms, ammunition, or military stores under a license must write legibly on the cases or packages containing such articles an account of

10. Within six days of the articles reaching their destination the consignee must deliver the transport license to the Magistrate of the District, or to the Political Officer; and in the case of articles crossing the external frontier of British India, to the Magistrate of the District where the consignment crosses the external frontier. The officer to whom the transport license shall be delivered must satisfy himself that the articles transported to his district correspond with the entries in the pass, and that any deficiency is properly accounted for.

MANUFACTURE AND SALE.

11. Licenses to manufacture, convert, keep, and sell arms or ammunition or military stores, may be granted by Commissioners of Police in the Presidency Towns, and by the Magistrate of the District outside those towns. They shall be in Forms VI and VII appended to these rules. The fee payable in stamps shall be twenty Rupees in respect of licenses to manufacture and sell, &c., and ten Rupees in respect of licenses to keep and sell, &c. Every license-holder under this rule shall keep, in such form as the Local Government may from time to time direct, a record and account of all stock, and of all sales of arms and ammunition or sulphur, which he may keep or sell. He shall exhibit his stock and his record, or accounts, of stock and sales to any Magistrate, or to any Police Officer not below the rank of Inspector. Magistrates, and all Police Officers not below the rank of Inspector, are hereby empowered to enter and inspect any premises within their several jurisdictions in which arms or ammunition or sulphur are manufactured or kept, and to examine the stock and accounts of receipts and sales of arms, ammunition and military stores. Any person licensed to sell arms and ammunition shall affix a board on a conspicuous part of his shop, or usual place of business, and shall cause to be painted thereon in large letters in English, or in the vernacular of the district, his name and the words "licensed to manufacture," or "licensed to deal in arms, ammunition and military stores," as the case may be. He shall also have a copy of Section 28 of the Indian Arms Act posted up, in the vernacular of the district or in English, on some conspicuous part of his usual place of business.

POSSESSION OF ARMS AND GOING ARMED.

12. Licenses to possess cannon shall not be granted, save under the special order of the Governor General in Council, certified under the signature of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department. A copy of such license, so certified, must be sent immediately on its issue to the District Magistrate of the place where the cannon is to be kept.

13. Licenses to possess arms and ammunition in reasonable quantities and to go armed for purposes of sport, of protection, or of display, may be granted by the Magistrate of the District in Form VIII. Such licenses shall be liable to a fee of eight annas for each weapon in disarmed districts, and to a fee of four annas for each weapon in districts which have not been disarmed. Such a license will authorise its holder to carry the arms described in the license, on occasions when they may be reasonably required for the purposes named in the license. But the holder, unless specially authorised by the Magistrate, must not go armed in railway carriages, to fairs, religious processions, or other public assemblages. Licenses granted under this rule shall, on countersignature by the Commissioner of the Division, or other officer authorised in this regard by the Local Government where there are no Commissioners, shall be valid for all the districts of the Local Government within the territories of which the license may have been granted.

14. Any Commissioner of Police or Magistrate of the District may grant a license in Form IX for a journey, specifying the direction of the journey and the period it will occupy. Such license will be valid in other jurisdictions only for such journey and for such period, and will be liable to a fee of four annas for each weapon. Political Agents may grant licenses under this rule to natives of the States where they may be serving, and such licenses granted for journeys by Political Agents shall be liable to no fee. Holders of licenses under this rule must not go armed in railway carriages, to fairs, religious processions, or other public assemblies.

15. Licenses to possess arms in districts which have not been disarmed may be granted in Form X without fee. Such licenses will not authorise the holders to go armed, or to carry arms. In districts which have not been disarmed, as well as in disarmed districts, licenses to possess and carry arms (Form VIII) will be liable to fees as stated to Rule 13.

16. Licenses for possession of arms and ammunition may be granted in Form XI without fee, and for a term of five years, to persons who require arms for the destruction of wild animals which do injury to human beings, cattle, or crops. Such license will be valid only in or on the immediate confines of the district for which it is granted. It will be subject to the conditions that the license and the weapon it covers is shown once a year, between the 15th November and the 31st December, to the nearest Magistrate; that the weapon becomes confiscated to Government directly it is sold or seized in execution of any debt; and that such weapon is carried only on occasions when it is to be used bonâ fide for the destruction of wild animals. Holders of licenses under this rule must not go armed in railway carriages, to fairs, religious processions, or other public assemblages.

GENERAL.

17. Applications for licenses, or in respect of licenses, under these rules, if in writing, must bear a court fees stamp of one anna.

18. Fees payable on licenses must be paid in general stamps; they will be affixed to the license and obliterated according to law.

19. All licenses under Rules 11, 13 and 14 shall expire on the 31st December of the year for which they may be issued; licenses under Rule 15 shall expire on the 31st December of the fifth year of their currency. But the currency of a license may be renewed, previous to its expiration, on payment of a second fee by the same authority that granted it.

20. All licenses shall be given and held subject to the conditions endorsed on the reverse, and subject to these rules, and subject to the provisions of the Act. Licenses under Rules 13 and 16 may be granted subject to the observance of a close season in the pursuit of game-birds or animals that do not injure either men or cattle, or crops. The limits of the close season will be decided by the Local Government, and the condition regarding such close season, if imposed, shall be endorsed on the reverse of the license.

21. Any person holding a license, or acting under a license, granted in accordance with these rules, shall be bound to produce the same, when called upon to do so by any Magistrate, or by any police officer in charge of a police station, or by any police officer of higher rank.

22. Licenses granted for use within a district shall be written or printed in the vernacular language of such district. Licenses granted in a Presidency Town, or for use beyond the district where they may be granted, shall be in English and may be in the vernacular as well.

23. The Assistant Resident at Aden shall exercise the powers of a Magistrate in respect of the grant of licenses under these rules.

24. A license granted under these rules will cover only the weapons or other articles, and the persons named therein, unless the officer granting a license under Rule 13 or 14 deems it expedient to include the retainers of any person named in the license; in such case the entry on the face of the license shall declare how many and whose retainers are covered by the license.

25. Any officer empowered to grant a license under these rules may at his discretion refuse to grant, to renew, or to consent to the issue of, a license, or may refer any application for the orders of the Local Government.

26. All Magistrates or other authorities acting under these rules will perform their duties subject to the control of their executive superiors and of the Local Government.

No. 1226.—THE Right Hon'ble the Governor-General in Council has much pleasure in directing the publication of the following despatch received from Major-General Roberts, C. B., V. C., Commanding the Kurum Valley Field Force, announcing the capture of the Peiwar Kotal heights on the 2nd December 1878, and the complete defeat of the Ameer's troops defending the position.

The Right Hon'ble the Governor-General in Council heartily congratulates the force on the signal success which has attended their efforts, and offers his best thanks to the officers and men of all ranks, British and Native, not only for their conduct in action, but also for the excellent spirit displayed by them under exposure to extreme cold and fatigue.

From Major-General F. S. ROBERTS, C.B., V.C., R. A., Commanding the Kurum Column, to the Quartermaster-General in India,—(Dated Camp Zabardast Kila, the 5th December 1878).

IN continuation of my telegram of the 3rd instant, I have now the honor to submit, for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and of the Government of India, a detailed account of the military operations which have led to the capture of the Peiwar Pass by the troops under my command.

2. The force detailed in the margin, marching by separate roads in two brigades, arrived at Habib-kila about 10 A. M. on the 28th instant. Here I received information that the enemy was flying in confusion up the eastern side of the Peiwar Kotal, and that, owing to the difficulties of the road, they had already abandoned twelve guns.

3. I therefore pushed a reconnaissance* in force up the south-eastern flanks of the Peiwar, which elicited the fact that, so far from the enemy having abandoned any guns, they had taken up an extremely strong position on the Pass, and that they were well provided with artillery judiciously placed. I had ordered the camp to be marked out on some dry rice fields, about 2,500 yards from the enemy's position, but as they pitched some shells into the middle of this ground, it was abandoned and the camp removed to a more secure site.

4. This reconnaissance was not accomplished without loss; and I have to regret the occurrence of the following casualties—

29th Punjab Native Infantry—One officer (Lieutenant Reid) severely wounded.

Four sepoy wounded (one severely.)

5th Punjab Infantry—Subadar-Major Aziz Khan severely wounded.

Three sepoy slightly wounded.

No. 1 Mountain Battery—One driver killed.

One mule wounded.

5th Goorkhas— One sepoy dangerously wounded.

5. By the evening of this day I had seen sufficient of the enemy's position to convince me that it could not be carried by an attack in front without incurring very heavy loss.

6. I resolved therefore to halt for a few days; first, with the view of recruiting the men's strength, which had been severely taxed by several days' continuous marching over extremely difficult roads; and secondly, to gain time to ascertain by reconnoitring whether the position could not be turned, or failing that, in what manner it could be most easily attacked in front.

7. It will be convenient for me here to give a short and necessarily imperfect description of the Peiwar Kotal position. I have issued instructions for detailed topographical reports to be prepared; but as these will necessarily take some time to complete, a written description will be better than none.

8. The enemy's position extended from the Spin Gawai Kotal, on their left, to some commanding heights about a mile south of the Peiwar Kotal. It thus had a front of about four miles facing due east, the Peiwar Kotal being about the enemy's right centre. From right to left the position ran along a lofty and rugged range of mountains, mostly covered with dense pine forests. The range was precipitous towards the eastern side, but was known to descend on the western by a succession of upland meadows towards the valley of the Hariab.

9. The position, as thus described, was crossed by only two regular roads, viz., the Peiwar and Spin Gawai Kotal roads or cols. At two or three other points the range was crossed by paths, but these were too narrow and precipitous for the passage of troops.

10. An important military feature in the position was that the successive ridges or peaks, into which it was broken, dominated each other from the left to the right: that is, a force placed on the height to the south of the Spin Gawai col would have a command over each succeeding eminence as it advanced along the ridge towards the Peiwar Kotal.

11. The Peiwar Kotal is a narrow depression in the ridge commanded on each side by high pine-clad mountains. The approach to it from the Kurum Valley, or east, is up a steep narrow zig-zag path, entirely commanded throughout its length from the adjacent heights, and difficult to ascend by reason of the extreme roughness of the road, which was covered with large fragments of rock and boulders. Every point of the ascent was exposed to fire from both guns and rifles, securely placed behind breastworks constructed of pine logs and stones. At the top of the pass was a narrow plateau, which was again commanded from the thickly wooded heights, which rose to an elevation of 500 feet on each side of the valley. On the western side the road passed by a gentle descent through a narrow valley with pine-clad sides for about one and a half miles, when it reached the open valley of the Hariab near the hamlet of Zabardast Kila.

12. The Spin Gawai Kotal, which formed the extreme left of the enemy's line, is a position far less capable of defence, and of an altogether different character from that of the Peiwar. The approach to it is through a comparatively open valley; the ascent is not steep except when close to the summit; and the valley is of sufficient width to admit of the movement of troops. The position does not, in short, possess the natural military advantages which are so remarkable at the Peiwar Kotal.

13. On the 29th November, the approaches to the Peiwar Kotal from both the north and south sides were thoroughly reconnoitred, and plans were drawn up for a direct assault on the enemy's position. A reconnaissance was also pushed through the hills to obtain a view of the Spin Gawai Kotal, and of the upper part of the road leading thereto.

14. The result of these reconnaissances convinced me that a front attack, though it might be successful, would certainly entail great loss, and I formed a design for a secret night march on the Spin Gawai, by which I hoped the enemy's position in our front might be turned.

15. On the 30th I ordered the three guns of G-3rd, Royal Artillery, and two guns of F-A, Royal Horse Artillery, to move up to my camp from the Kurum fort. The 12th Bengal Cavalry were also ordered up from Habib-kila. On this day reconnoitring parties were again employed at the Peiwar Kotal, and every means adopted to induce the enemy to believe that we intended to attack him in front, and to withdraw his attention from his left. A secret reconnaissance, unaccompanied by troops, was also made from the village of Peiwar up the regular road to the Spin Gawai, and the two officers making it (Major Collett, Assistant Quartermaster-General, and Captain Carr, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General) succeeded in reaching a point about one and a half miles distant from the Kotal, and getting a fairly good view of the approaches thereto. On the evening of the 30th I made up my mind to abandon any attempt at attacking the Peiwar Kotal in front, and to undertake the flank turning movement by the Spin Gawai.

16. To render the success of this enterprise possible, it was necessary to maintain the utmost secrecy, and to adopt every means to divert the enemy's attention from my intended attack on his left.

17. On the 1st December ostentatious reconnoitring parties were sent to both flanks of the Peiwar Kotal, and batteries were marked out on the small plain near the hamlet of Turri. These proceedings seemed to have the desired effect; the enemy shelled the working party employed at the battery; placed fresh guns in position on the south side of the pass; and paraded their troops and showed every sign of expecting an attack. In the evening of this day, the half battery G-3rd, Royal Artillery, and the 12th Bengal Cavalry arrived from the rear. I had them marched up in full view of the enemy, and made as great a parade as possible of their arrival. At this time every officer and soldier in camp, and certainly all the natives, were fully persuaded that I intended to attack the Peiwar Kotal the next morning.

18. The general plan of the intended operations, which was explained to Commanding Officers at 4 p. m. on Sunday, the 1st instant, was briefly as follows:—

The following troops were detailed to form the turning force under my immediate command, and were instructed to march at 10 p. m. that night, without noise or bugle sound, in the order mentioned below. No orders of any sort for the march to be given before 9 p. m.—

29th Punjab Native Infantry	} Under Colonel J. J. H. Gordon, 29th Punjab Native Infantry.
5th Goorkhas
No. 1 Mountain Battery
72nd Highlanders	} Under Brigadier-General Thelwall, c. b.
2nd Punjab Infantry
23rd Pioneers
4 guns F-A, R. H. A., on elephants, with two companies of Pioneers as escort.

Each of the above corps was directed to leave their camp standing, with a party of 30 men as a camp guard.

The following troops under the command of Brigadier-General Cobbe were directed to remain in camp:—

 5th Punjab Infantry.
 12th Bengal Cavalry.
 2 Guns F-A, Royal Horse Artillery.
 3 Guns G-3rd, Royal Artillery.
 The Turi and other levies, under command of Major Palmer, 9th Bengal Cavalry.

Brigadier-General Cobbe received general instructions to open fire upon the enemy about 6 A. M.; to get his troops into position in front of the Peiwar Kotal by half past eight, and to storm the place when the flank attack should have become sufficiently developed to shake the enemy's defence.

19. The troops marched at 10 p. m. on Sunday night to the village of Peiwar, where they entered the bed of the nullah which forms the road to the Spin Gawai. This was extremely difficult marching for infantry, as the nullah was nothing but a mass of stones, heaped into ridges and furrowed into deep hollows by the action of the water. The night was fine, but bitterly cold; and we did not get the advantage of the moon after midnight. While on the march I found it expedient to change the order of the leading brigade, which became as follows:—

5th Goorkhas.
 1 Company, 72nd Highlanders.
 29th Punjab Native Infantry.

I had intended to halt the column for an hour or two during the night to rest the men; but owing to the slowness of our progress, and to the distance being greater than was anticipated, the intention had to be abandoned.

20. At a little before six o'clock on the morning of the 2nd December, the head of the column reached the foot of the Spin Gawai Kotal. Day was just breaking; and as the enemy had neglected to place a picquet down the bed of the nullah, our approach had so far been unobserved.

21. At this moment, two shots from the enemy's look-out sentries alarmed his picquet on the Kotal. The advance party of the 5th Goorkhas immediately formed up from column of fours into a company line, and, led by Major

Fitzhugh and Captain Cook, rushed straight at a barricade which now became apparent about 50 yards in their front. The remainder of the regiment extended and swarmed round the flanks of the obstacle, which was carried in very brilliant style, the enemy firing a volley into the Goorkhas as they came up, and being nearly all killed at their posts.

22. At this time the enemy's guns from the stockades or sungas just above us commenced firing shells into our column, but without doing much damage.

23. The Goorkhas and 72nd Highlanders continued to advance rapidly up the steep side of the Kotal, and captured three stockades in quick succession, the enemy defending them in a very obstinate manner, and being mostly killed by the bayonet as our men jumped over the barricades.

24. No. 1 Mountain Battery was of the greatest assistance during this advance, and the guns were fought in the most determined manner, well up in the advanced line. Its gallant commander, Captain Kelso, was shot through the head whilst bringing his guns into action, just beyond the first stockade.

25. I brought up the remainder of the 72nd Highlanders as soon as the firing commenced, and I cannot praise too highly the gallant conduct of this splendid regiment, and the brilliant style in which the men were led by Lieutenant-Colonel Brownlow and the other officers of the corps.

26. Of the admirable conduct of the 5th Goorkhas, I have already spoken. They were not one whit behind their brethren of the 72nd in their eager desire to close with the enemy.

27. The 29th Punjab Native Infantry acted as a support throughout this advance, and successfully repelled an attempted attack by the enemy on our right flank.

28. By half past six o'clock the whole of the Spin Gawai barricades and stockades were in our possession, and the line of the enemy's defence was completely turned.

29. At half past seven o'clock, Captain Wynne established communication with Brigadier-General Cobbe by visual signalling, when I informed him of our progress and instructed him to co-operate vigorously from below in attacking the Kotal.

30. The 23rd Pioneers and 2nd Punjab Infantry having now come up, I continued to press the enemy and hoped to have taken the Peiwar Kotal by a direct advance upon its left flank.

31. But in this I was disappointed, for we found the enemy very numerous in our front, and our progress was slow, owing to the densely wooded hills through which the line of our advance lay, and the determined resistance which we met. During this period of the engagement the fire of the four guns of F-A., Royal Horse Artillery, which had been brought up on elephants, was found very effective. They were brought into action with great judgment by Colonel Stirling, commanding the battery.

32. About noon, under the direction of Colonel Perkins, R. E., Commanding Engineer, two guns of No. 1 Mountain Battery gained a position from which they could see the enemy's camp at Peiwar Kotal. This was shelled with such success that the tents were set on fire, and a regular flight of the enemy from its neighbourhood was witnessed.

33. Having ascertained, at one o'clock, from a reconnaissance, that the Peiwar Kotal was practically inaccessible from the northern side, on which I was operating, I resolved to withdraw the troops from this line of attack altogether, and ordered the following disposition:—

2nd Punjab Infantry to hold the hill on the north of the Kotal; which formed our present most advanced position.

29th Punjab Native Infantry to hold the hill overlooking the Spin Gawai, and protect the field hospital which had been established there.

A column, formed as follows, to march under my command in the Zabardast Kila direction, so as to threaten the enemy's line of retreat, viz.—

5th Goorkhas.

5th Punjab Infantry (this regiment had joined us during the day.)

No. 1 Mountain Battery

72nd Highlanders

23rd Pioneers

4 Guns F. A., R. H. A., on elephants

} Under Brigadier-General Thelwall, C. B.

34. The effect of this movement was almost immediately apparent, for as soon as the march of the troops was perceived, the fire in front of the hill occupied by the 2nd Punjab Infantry slackened, and the enemy on the Peiwar Kotal became so disturbed that Colonel Barry Drew, of the 8th King's Regiment, who then commanded the troops on that side, determined to deliver his attack.

35. This was most gallantly executed, and at 2-30 p. m. the Peiwar Kotal was in our possession, and the enemy in full flight along the Ali Kheyl road, which for some distance was found strewn with abandoned guns, limber boxes, &c.

36. Brigadier-General Cobbe was, I extremely regret to say, wounded during the advance on the Peiwar Kotal, but the particulars of the attack will be found in the accompanying despatch from Colonel Drew of the 8th King's Regiment, who assumed the command of the troops when Brigadier-General Cobbe had to leave the field.

37. The Peiwar Kotal was garrisoned for the night by the 8th Foot.

38. The troops under my immediate command could not get up in time to fall on the retreating enemy, and bivouacked near the village of Zabardast Kila.

39. I annex a report from Major A. Palmer, 9th Bengal Cavalry, who commanded the Native levies during the day, in which his movements are detailed. The levies were detached to operate on the enemy's right flank, with the design of diverting his attention and of committing the Turis and other tribes to the British cause. Major Palmer's observations on the nature of the approaches to the Kotal from the south are very valuable, as entirely confirming the intelligence which I had gained from reconnaissance and information regarding the difficulties which would attend an attack from that direction.

40. An examination of the Peiwar Kotal defences proved it to be a place of enormous natural strength, and that the enemy's dispositions for repelling any attack on it from the front were very complete and judicious. It is also evident from the enormous stores of ammunition and supplies which have been captured, that it was the intention of the Affghan Government that their troops should remain here for the winter, and that they fully expected to be able to maintain their position against the British forces. Their defeat and expulsion by a force of inferior strength from a position of their own choosing and of unusual natural advantages, may, I presume, be expected to have a very beneficial effect upon the population of the Hariab, Kurum, and Khost valleys. It is at all events quite certain that had the Affghan troops succeeded in holding their position on the Peiwar Kotal, we should never have been regarded as having full possession of the Kurum valley.

41. The enemy's strength on the Peiwar Kotal position, on the 2nd December, has been ascertained to be nearly as follows:—About 3,500 infantry, including 3 regiments which arrived from Kushi on the afternoon of the 1st December; 18 guns; and a large number of Jagis, Ghilzais, and other tribes whose exact strength cannot of course be ascertained. There was also a mule battery of six guns, which was coming up to reinforce, but did not get further than Ali Kheyl. A battery of Horse Artillery and a regiment of infantry had been left on the Shutar Gardan, having been unable to cross that pass; a regiment of cavalry was at Kushi. The total strength of the British force employed was as follows:—

Turning force, under my command	43 officers ..	2,240 men.
Co-operating column, under Brigadier-General Cobbe	30 „ ..	838 „
Total	73 „ ..	3,058 „

42. I may be permitted to point out that no similarity exists between the Affghan army of the former war and that which has now been put into the field. The men are now armed with excellent rifles, and provided with abundance of ammunition, bundles of cartridges having been found placed behind trees, &c., in positions intended to be held. Their shooting is good; their men are of large stature and great physical strength and courage, and are well clothed. The Affghan artillery is also well served and efficiently equipped.

43. I enclose a list of casualties, which I deeply regret should be so heavy. Of Captain Kelso I have already written; the other officer killed, Major Anderson of the 23rd Pioneers, fell at the head of his men whilst gallantly charging up the hill-side to attack the enemy. The death of these officers is mourned by the whole force, for both were well known as brave and excellent soldiers. The loss of the enemy cannot be estimated with any accuracy, but is believed to have been large. About 70 dead were counted in the Spin Gawai breastworks, and many more must have been killed in the subsequent fighting, which for the most part took place over thickly wooded hill sides. The inhabitants of the country believe the loss of the Affghans to have been heavy.

44. I enclose a list of the ordnance captured, which has been prepared by the Commissary of Ordnance attached to this column.

45. It now only remains for me to bring to the notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and of the Government of India, the excellent services which have been rendered since the formation of the column by the departmental and staff officers attached to this force.

Brigadier-General Cobbe, of whose services I have unfortunately been temporarily deprived, has invariably carried out to my satisfaction the orders he has received.

Brigadier-General Thelwall, c. b., has conducted the command of the 2nd Brigade with energy and judgment.

Colonel Drew, 8th Foot, who assumed command of the left column on Brigadier-General Cobbe being wounded, conducted the attack on the Kotal with spirit, and my acknowledgments are due to him.

Major Galbraith, Assistant Adjutant-General, is most indefatigable in the discharge of his duties. On the 2nd December Major Galbraith was most forward, and proved himself a cool and gallant soldier.

Major Collett, Assistant Quartermaster-General, is all that could be wished for in a staff officer. It is a great pleasure to me to have this opportunity of acknowledging the able assistance I have received from Major Collett on many occasions.

Lieutenant-Colonel Lindsay, Commanding the Royal Artillery, has endeavoured in every way to secure the efficiency of the important arm under his special charge. He much distinguished himself on the 2nd December by selecting good positions for the guns.

I am under great obligation to Lieutenant-Colonel Perkins, R. E., Commanding Royal Engineer, for the advice and assistance which he has rendered to me. His services were specially valuable during the operations in front of the Peiwar Kotal, viz., from the 28th November to the 2nd instant. He conducted reconnaissances with great energy and intelligence, and was most forward during the attack. He has been zealously assisted by Lieutenant Spratt, R. E.

I requested Colonel Hugh Gough, c. b. & v. c., Commandant of Cavalry, to remain with Brigadier-General Cobbe on the 2nd December, as the only possibility of the cavalry being employed was after a direct attack on the Kotal. Brigadier-General Cobbe has expressed to me his great satisfaction with Colonel Gough, and I am glad to have an opportunity of commending this distinguished officer to notice.

Dr. Allen, c. b., Deputy Surgeon-General, has bestowed great attention on the arrangements for the proper care and treatment of our sick and wounded. His exertions have been successful, and I am much indebted to him for the efficient condition in which the hospitals have been maintained.

The duties of Captain Badcock, Principal Commissariat Officer, have been unusually onerous. The bad roads and the almost entire absence of local resources have rendered the task of keeping the troops adequately supplied of great difficulty, but this has been satisfactorily accomplished, and great credit is due to Captain Badcock and his assistants for the results obtained.

Captain Woodthorpe, R. E., in charge of the Survey Department, has not only performed the duties required of him by the Surveyor-General, but has been most useful to me in reconnoitring, and I am glad to acknowledge the valuable services always willingly rendered by him. He was attached to my staff during the operations of 2nd December.

The Revd. J. W. Adams has performed his duties as Chaplain to the field force with self-denying zeal, to the great benefit and comfort of the soldiers. He was also kind enough to volunteer to act as orderly officer to me on the 2nd December, and was most useful in carrying messages, on several occasions under a heavy fire.

Captain Wynne has been in charge of the army signalling since the commencement of the operations, and has invariably established communications wherever it has been possible. Captain Wynne is most zealous in the discharge of his duties. I also desire to bring to special notice the name of Major McQueen, commanding the 5th Punjab Infantry. This officer has passed his life on the frontier, and has great experience of Pathans, and of the best method of dealing with them. I have on many occasions found his assistance most valuable.

The officers of my personal staff, Captain Pretzman, R. A., A. D. C., and Lieutenant Neville Chamberlain, Central India Horse, Orderly Officer, have been of the greatest service to me, and I am much indebted to them for their able and willing assistance.

Since the troops have been brigaded together Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon'ble George Villiers, Grenadier Guards, has had general charge of the outposts, under my personal superintendence, and has aided me materially.

Lieutenant-Colonel Waterfield, the Political Officer with the column, affords me every assistance, and is endeavouring in every way to administer the country the column has passed through since crossing the Kurum river at Thull. This is no easy task after years of misrule.

46. In conclusion I wish to bear testimony to the excellent military spirit which animates all the officers, non-commissioned officers and soldiers of this force. All ranks have had to submit to privations, and to undergo great fatigues which have been borne with the cheerful spirit of true soldiers.

I have, &c.,

Fort William, the 1st January 1879.

No. 1.—With reference to the G. G. Os. noted in the margin, and with the sanction of Her Majesty's Government, the Right Hon'ble the Governor General in Council is pleased to notify that:—

No. 656, dated the 25th June 1874.
 No. 1, dated the 1st January 1875.
 No. 294, dated the 15th March 1875.
 No. 1, dated the 1st January 1876.
 No. 8, dated the 1st January 1877.
 No. 1, dated the 1st January 1878.

I. During the year 1879 ninety (90) Officers of the Staff Corps, and Cavalry and Infantry of the Indian Army, will be permitted to retire from the service, receiving, in addition to the pension to which they may be entitled by length of service under existing regulations, not exceeding the full-pay pension of a Colonel (£456-5-0 per annum), an annuity representing the estimated value of their prospective claim to the Colonel's allowance, or its capitalized value as they may prefer.

II. This offer is restricted to substantive Lieutenant-Colonels who shall have completed 28 years' service, from the date of first commission, on or before the date from which they apply to retire, who may either, 1st, have been appointed to one of the Staff Corps on or before the 12th September 1866, and can claim the Colonel's allowance under the provisions of G. G. O. No. 808 of the 26th September 1866, or 2ndly, may be entitled, under G. O. G. G. of the 12th September 1862, to the Colonel's allowance after 12 years' service in the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

III. The number allowed to retire under these conditions will be distributed as follows:—

For Bengal	... 40
„ Madras	... 30
„ Bombay	... 20

In the event of the whole of the retirements allotted to a particular Presidency not being taken up in that Presidency, those remaining will be distributed in such manner as may be determined by the Government of India.

IV. Applications to retire will be considered and disposed of successively according to priority of proposed dates of retirement until the number of retirements allotted to the service shall have been accomplished, when retirements under this order will cease for the year. In the event of its becoming necessary to select one from among two or three applicants for retirement on the same day, preference will be given according to seniority from the date of first commission.

V. Officers wishing to retire under the terms of this order must, whether in or out of India, submit their applications to the Office of the Adjutant-General of their respective Presidencies, naming such prospective dates for their retirements, as will admit of the receipt of their applications by the Adjutant-General on or before the date named, such date not to be earlier than the 1st April 1879.

VI. Officers whose applications are accepted, will be gazetted out from the dates named by themselves, but will continue to perform their duties and receive the pay and allowances of their positions until officially informed of

VII. Officers retiring under this arrangement will forego both the good service pension, if they are in receipt thereof, and all claim to bonus compensation under the terms of the despatch of the 8th of August 1866,* No. 160.

* G. G. O. No. 808 of 26th September 1866.

VIII. Applicants to retire must state—

1st.—Their rank and service.

2nd.—Their age (supported by certificate of birth, or in its absence, by a formal declaration).

3rd.—Whether they wish to receive commutation for their prospective allowances in the shape of an annuity, or to capitalize its value. Officers who desire to receive the capitalized value of the annuity must attach to their applications a certificate in the form given in Appendix A. In the case of Officers retiring out of India, the health certificate required will be called for and furnished under instructions from the India Office in London.

4th.—Whether they desire to receive payment, wholly, or in part, in India, or in England.

IX. The table given in Appendix B shows the rates at which the expectation of the Colonel's allowance will be calculated in carrying this order into effect in the case of officers of various ages and service.

X. For the purpose of arriving at the amount payable in each case, whether as an annuity or in a single payment, Officers' ages will be calculated from their birthday next succeeding the date from which they propose to retire, and the number of years they have to serve before becoming entitled to the Colonel's allowance will be calculated from the date of the proposed retirement. When the period to serve contains a fraction of a year, the fraction, if it be six months or under six months, will be excluded altogether; if it exceeds six months it will be reckoned as a complete year.

XI. Payments of the capitalized value of the annuity made in India under this order will be at the rate of 1s. 10¹/₂d. for the rupee. Capitalized annuities of Officers retiring in India, can, on receipt of telegram announcing retirement, be paid to their Agents in England, under power of attorney to be lodged at the India Office.

XII. Officers who elect to receive an annuity in preference to the capital sum, will not, after their retirements have appeared in the Gazette, be allowed to capitalize such annuity under the provisions of this order, and it is to be understood that no separate applications of individual Officers to retire after the present retirements have been allotted will be entertained on the basis of this order.

XIII. Officers of the half-pay list of the Staff Corps will be permitted, if disposed to retire from the service, to avail themselves of this scheme of retirement, provided they are eligible thereto by the fulfilment, previously to their transfer to the half-pay list, of all the conditions required. The time passed by an Officer on the half-pay list of the Staff Corps will not count towards the 12 years in the grade of Lieutenant-Colonel required to qualify for promotion to the Colonel's allowance.

PART IV.

Bills of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 4th January 1879, and was referred to a Select Committee who are to report thereon in one month:—

A Bill to provide for the periodical inspection of Steam Boilers and Prime Movers attached thereto in the Town and Suburbs of Calcutta and in Howrah.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the inspection by competent inspectors of steam boilers and prime movers attached thereto in the Town and Suburbs of Calcutta and in Howrah, with a view to the security of persons and property; It is enacted as follows:—

1. This Act extends to the Town and Suburbs of Calcutta and to Howrah; and it shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

But the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may, by notification to be published in the Calcutta Gazette, extend it to any district within the provinces for the time being under his control; and this Act shall come into force in such district from the date which may be named in such notification.

Repeal of Bengal Acts VI of 1864 and III of 1875.

But all certificates and rules in force at the commencement of this Act which were granted or made respectively under either of the said Acts, shall be deemed to have been respectively granted and made under this Act.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

“Boiler” includes any cylinder or vessel for generating steam under pressure.

“Prime Mover” includes any steam engine, fly wheel, first driving shaft and pulley attached to any such engine.

“Owner” includes any agent or hirer using any boiler or prime mover.

4. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal shall appoint Inspectors for the purposes of this Act, who shall inspect all boilers and prime movers attached thereto in the manner hereinafter provided.

5. No owner of any boiler or prime mover shall use the same, unless a certificate has been duly granted in respect thereof in the manner hereinafter provided; and no owner of any boiler or prime mover shall continue to use the same after the expiration of the period for which such certificate has been granted.

6. The owner of any boiler or prime mover in respect of which a certificate is not in force in the manner hereinafter described, shall, before using the same, give notice to an Inspector appointed under this Act of his intention to use or continue to use the same. The Inspector to whom such notice is given shall appoint a time between sunrise and sunset, and within forty-eight hours after such notice, for the inspection of such boiler or prime mover, and at such time shall carefully examine such boiler or prime-mover, and every part thereof, and the owner or person in charge thereof shall afford to such Inspector all reasonable facilities for such examination, and all such information as may reasonably be required.

7. If on making the inspection the Inspector is of opinion that the boiler or prime-mover requires any alteration or addition for the purpose of strengthening and improving the same, he may order the owner thereof to carry out such alteration or addition, and no certificate shall be granted in respect of such boiler or prime-mover until such alteration or addition has been made in the manner required by the Inspector.

8. If the Inspector is satisfied that such boiler or prime-mover is in good condition, and not so exposed as to be likely to cause injury to any person, and, in case any alteration or addition in such boiler or prime-mover has been ordered under the last preceding section, as soon as he is satisfied that such alteration or addition has been properly made, he shall give to the owner or person in charge thereof a certificate signed by him to that effect in the form in the Schedule hereto annexed, on payment, by the owner or person in charge, of such fees as may be fixed under the rules hereinafter mentioned; and such certificate shall state the period for which such boiler or prime-mover may be used, and shall cease to be in force on the expiration of such period.

9. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or any person authorized by him in that behalf, may revoke any certificate granted under this Act, in any case in which he has reason to believe that such certificate has been fraudulently obtained or erroneously granted, or has been granted without sufficient inspection, or in case he has reason to believe that the boiler or prime mover in respect of which such certificate has been granted has, since the granting of such certificate, sustained injury, or is not in good condition.

10. On such revocation of a certificate, an Inspector, not being the person who granted the revoked certificate, shall again examine the boiler or prime mover in respect of which such revoked certificate was granted, in the manner prescribed in section six of this Act, and, if he is satisfied that the same is in good condition, shall grant another certificate.

No additional fee shall be paid therefor unless, in the opinion of the said Lieutenant-Governor, or person authorized as aforesaid, there shall appear to have been reasonable ground for revoking the certificate.

11. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or any person authorized by him in that behalf, may revoke or suspend any certificate granted under this Act, on the ground that the boiler or prime mover in respect of which it has been granted is not in charge of a person competent to have charge of the same.

12. If the owner of such boiler or prime-mover, or the person so in charge as aforesaid, is dissatisfied with such revocation or suspension, he may apply to some person (not being the person who revoked or suspended the certificate) by general or special order duly authorized by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in that behalf, who may, if he is so satisfied, grant a writing under his signature to the effect that the person so in charge as aforesaid is a person competent to have charge of a boiler or prime mover; and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or the person who has revoked or suspended the certificate, shall accordingly grant a new certificate as far as possible in the form in the Schedule hereto annexed, or shall allow the former certificate to continue in force.

No additional fee shall be paid for a new certificate granted under this section.

13. The owner of any boiler or prime-mover who has obtained a certificate for the same, shall, at all reasonable times during the period for which the same may be in force, be bound to produce such certificate when called upon to do so by any Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place in which such boiler or prime-mover is situated, or by any person authorized in writing by such Magistrate to demand its production.

14. The owner of any boiler or prime mover who shall use the same without a certificate duly obtained and in force in respect thereof under this Act shall be punished with a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees; and to continue to use the same after such fine shall have been imposed shall be held to be a separate offence, and shall be punished in like manner.

No proceeding shall be taken to enforce this penalty before such day after this Act may come into force as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal shall fix by notification in the Calcutta Gazette.

15. This Act shall not apply to any locomotive engine used upon any railway, or to any steam vessel in the port of Calcutta.

16. No charge shall be brought against any person for the recovery of any penalty under this Act after the expiration of six months from the date of the commission of the offence, or without the authority of an Inspector appointed under this Act.

17. All penalties to be levied under this Act shall be disposed of in such manner as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal shall from time to time direct.

18. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal shall make rules consistent with the provisions of this Act for regulating the fees payable for certificates, and the duties of Inspectors appointed under this Act, and may from time to time alter, add to, or repeal the same. Such rules shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

SCHEDULE.

FORM OF INSPECTOR'S CERTIFICATE.

Name of owner.	Description of boiler and age.	Description of prime mover and age.	Power.	When and where made.	When and where last repaired.	Time for which boiler or prime mover is to be used, and certificate to be in force.	REMARKS.

I, the undersigned, certify that I have examined the above-named boiler (or prime mover), and to the best of my judgment the boiler (or prime mover), as shown in the above statement, is in good condition, and is not so exposed as to be likely to cause injury to any person and (in case alterations have been ordered) that the alterations required by me have been properly made.

A. B.,
Inspector.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Acts of the Bengal Council which provide for the inspection of steam-boilers and prime-movers are only in force in Calcutta, the Suburbs, and Howrah. But the increasing number of factories outside these limits now renders it desirable to enlarge the area of inspection. The present Bill, which is a consolidation of the two Acts dealing with the subject, applies in the first place to the old limits, but empowers the local Government to extend the law to any other district in Bengal. Two amendments have been made in the existing law. The Inspector has been authorized to require any alteration to be made which he may think necessary for strengthening a boiler or prime-mover, and is directed not to grant a certificate if the boiler or prime-mover is so exposed as to be likely to cause injury to any person.

The 21st December 1878.

HORACE A. COCKERELL.

FREDERICK CLARKE,

Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal,
Legislative Department.

The 21st December 1878.

FREDERICK CLARKE,

*Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal,
Legislative Department.*

THE following Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons, is, by order of the President, published for general information:—

A Bill to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent and to amend the law relating to rent.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent and to amend in other respects the law relating to rent in Bengal: It is enacted as follows:—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. The provisions of this Act may be extended by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal by notification in the Calcutta Gazette to any districts within the provinces for the time being subject to the said Lieutenant-Governor in which Act X of 1859 or the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, are, or may be, in force, and shall take effect in such districts from the date which may be specified in such notification.

2. Sections 6, 7, 20, and 21 of Act X of 1859; sections 2, 3, 4, and 5 of Bengal Act VI of 1862; and sections 6, 7, 21, 22, 44, 45, 46, and 47 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, are hereby repealed.

This repeal shall not affect any right of occupancy which has accrued before the commencement of this Act.

PROCEDURE FOR SUMMARY REALIZATION OF ARREARS OF RENT.

3. From and after the commencement of this Act all suits for arrears of rent brought within twelve months after such arrears have become due may, in case the plaintiff shall desire to proceed under this Part, be commenced by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, but the summons shall be in the form contained in Schedule A hereto annexed.

In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit unless he obtains leave from the Court as hereinafter mentioned so to appear and defend;

and in default of his obtaining such leave or of appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree for any sum mentioned in the summons, and interest on the same at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum to the date of decree, together with the interest (if any) stipulated for as mentioned in the proviso of section 26 of this Act, and a sum for costs to be fixed by an order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, unless the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum, in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way, and such decree may be enforced forthwith.

4. The Court shall, upon application within the period of fourteen days from the service of such summons, give leave to appear and to defend the suit upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons, or upon his satisfying the Court by his examination upon oath or affirmation that he has a defence, or can adduce such facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application, and on such terms as to security, framing and recording issues or otherwise, as to the Court may seem fit.

5. After decree the Court may, under special circumstances, set aside the decree, and, if necessary, stay or set aside execution, and may give leave to appear to the summons and to defend the suit if it shall seem reasonable to the Court so to do, and on such terms as the Court thinks fit.

6. No appeal shall lie from any decree of the Court under section 3 of this Act on the part of any judgment-debtor unless he deposit the amount of the decree with costs in such Court to the credit of the person who has obtained the decree.

7. On the application of the person who has obtained the decree the money in deposit shall be paid to him; but if the judgment-debtor appeal, and the appeal is decreed in his favor in whole or in part, notice shall be served on the original decree-holder requiring him to pay the money aforesaid, or such portion of it as may be ordered to be refunded, into the public treasury within fourteen days from the service on him of such notice.

8. In default of compliance with such notice the sum referred to therein shall be deemed a demand under Bengal Act VII of 1868, and shall be recoverable from the decree-holder aforesaid as such.

9. No suit shall be entertained under this Part except where it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Court that rent at the same rate as that alleged to be due has been paid in respect of the holding for which it is claimed some time within the three years immediately preceding the period for which it is claimed, or that the tenant has agreed by a written engagement which is still in force to pay rent at the rate claimed.

This Part not to apply to suits for enhancement of rent.

10. Nothing in the seven last preceding sections shall be deemed to apply to suits for rent at enhanced rates.

Provided that when in any case a decree has been given by the Court for rent at an enhanced rate, the decree shall also declare the amount of rent due at the rates current before the institution of the suit; and shall direct that in the event of execution being stayed on account of appeal against the enhanced rates, the decree-holder shall nevertheless be at liberty to execute the decree in respect of the sum so declared to be due at the rates formerly current.

PART III.

RIGHT OF OCCUPANCY AND SUB-LEASES.

11. Every ryot who shall have held land for a period of twelve years, and cultivated the same either with his own hands or by means of hired labourers, shall have a right of occupancy in the land so held and cultivated by him, whether it be held under pottah or not, so long as he pays the rent payable on account of the same.

EXPLANATION.—A person to whom the ryot makes over a portion of the produce by way of payment for his labour in cultivating the whole or a portion of the ryots' lands is a 'hired labourer' within the meaning of this section. A ryot who pays a portion of the gross produce by way of rent to the zemindar or other person from whom he holds his lands is not a 'hired labourer' within the meaning of this section.

Nothing contained in this section or in section 16 of this Act shall be held to affect the terms of any written contract for the cultivation of land entered into between a landholder and a ryot, when it contains any express stipulation contrary thereto.

12. The holding of the father or other person from whom the ryot inherits shall be deemed to be the holding of the ryot within the meaning of the last preceding section, and the tenure of a ryot who has acquired a right of occupancy shall be heritable and transferable, provided that no transfer shall be valid unless the whole tenure is transferred, and that the transferee shall have the right of occupancy only so long as he continues to cultivate the lands either with his own hands or by means of hired labourers in the manner contemplated by the last preceding section.

13. After the commencement of this Act no ryot having a right of occupancy shall, without the consent in writing of the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder to whom his rent is payable, sublet any portion of his holding; and no court shall take cognizance of any such sub-letting.

14. If, after the commencement of this Act, the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder consents to the sub-letting of a portion or the whole of the holding of a ryot having a right of occupancy, the sub-tenant, if he cultivates the lands in the manner described in section 11 of this Act, shall begin to acquire a right of occupancy in the lands sublet from the date of such sub-letting. The ryot who sublets the lands shall be deemed to have become the holder of an intermediate tenure, and shall cease to have a right of occupancy in the lands sublet, but he shall not be liable to be ejected by the zemindar or superior tenure-holder otherwise than for non-payment of arrears of rent, and in execution of a decree or order of Court; and the rent which he pays for the land sublet shall not be liable to be enhanced above a sum which shall, in default of specific agreement to the contrary, in no case be less than ten per cent. below the fair and equitable rates payable for the same land by a ryot having a right of occupancy.

15. Sub-leases for a year or for a term of years given before the commencement of this Act by any ryot having a right of occupancy shall hold good for such year or term but no longer.

16. No right of occupancy shall be acquired by any ryot in khamar, nijjole, or seer lands belonging to the proprietor of the estate or tenure which are held by him as such at the date of the commencement of this Act and let by him on lease for a term or year by year.

17. All ryots having rights of occupancy are required to register in the sherishta of the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder to whom their rents are payable all transfers of their tenures by sale, gift, or otherwise, as well as all successions thereto and divisions among heirs in cases of inheritance, within one month of each such transfer, succession, or division, and every zemindar or superior tenant is required to admit to registry and otherwise give effect to all transfers of whole tenures when made in good faith, and to all such successions and divisions by delivering to the applicant for registration within fifteen days after his application a hukumnama or amulnama declaring the fact of the transfer, succession, or division having been admitted and registered.

Provided that no zemindar or other superior tenure-holder shall be required to admit to registry or give effect to any division or distribution of the rent payable on account of any such tenure, nor shall any such division or distribution of rent be valid and binding without the consent in writing of the zemindar or superior tenant.

18. All ryots claiming to have rights of occupancy in virtue of transfers made before the commencement of this Act are required to register the same within one year from the said commencement, and the provisions of the last preceding section shall apply to all such transfers.

19. Fees at the rate of two per cent. on the annual rent of the interest transferred may be levied by the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder on the registry under this Act of any transfer:

Provided that no fee shall exceed one hundred rupees; and that if the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder fails to deliver the hukumnama or amulnama as provided in section 17 of this Act to any applicant for registration any competent Court may direct delivery of the same free of all charges for fees or costs.

20. The Court may, when passing a decree for arrears of rent, on the oral application of the decree-holder, order immediate execution thereof either against the person, or the moveable property, or the right of occupancy of the judgment-debtor.

21. The provisions of sections 59 to 63 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, shall apply to the sale in execution of decree of the tenure of any ryot having a right of occupancy.

PART IV.

TENDER OF RENT AND DEPOSIT OF RENT WITH COLLECTOR.

22. In any suit hereafter to be brought for rent, if it appears to the Court that the defendant has, without reasonable or probable cause, neglected or refused to pay the amount due by him, and that he has not, on or before the due date of payment of his quarterly rent instalments as fixed under section 26 of this Act tendered such amount to the plaintiff or his duly authorized agent, or in case of the refusal of the plaintiff or such agent to receive the amount tendered, has not deposited such amount with the Collector within ten days of the said quarterly day of payment, the Court may award to the plaintiff, in addition to the amount decreed for rent and costs, such damages, not exceeding twenty-five per centum on the amount of rent decreed, as the Court may think fit. These damages, if awarded, as well as the amount of rent and costs decreed in the suit, shall carry interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum from the date of decree until payment thereof.

23. In any suit hereafter to be brought for rent if it appears to the Court that the plaintiff has instituted the suit against the defendant without reasonable or probable cause, or that the defendant had, within ten days of the due date of payment of his quarterly rent instalments as fixed under section 26 of this Act, duly deposited with the Collector, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, the full amount which the Court shall find to have been due to the plaintiff at the date of such quarterly day of payment, the Court may award to the defendant, by way of compensation, such sum, not exceeding twenty-five per centum on the whole amount claimed by the plaintiff, as the Court may think fit; and such sum, with interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum until payment thereof shall be recoverable from the plaintiff in like manner as sums ordered to be paid by decrees of such Court.

24. If any under-tenant or ryot shall at the mil cutcherry for the receipt of rents or other place where the rents of the land or other immoveable property held or cultivated by him are usually payable, tender payment of what he shall consider to be the full amount of rent due from him on account of any quarterly instalment of rent to the zemindar or other person in receipt of the rent of such land; and if the amount so tendered shall not be accepted, and a receipt in full shall not be forthwith granted, it shall be lawful for the under tenant or ryot, without any suit having been instituted against him, to deposit within ten days from the said quarterly day of payment such amount with the Collector of the district to the credit of the zemindar or other person aforesaid:

And such deposit shall, so far as the under-tenant or ryot, and all persons claiming through or under him, are concerned, in all respects operate as, and have the full effect of, a payment then made by the under-tenant or ryot of the amount deposited to such zemindar or other person.

25. Such deposit shall be received by the Collector on the application of the under-tenant or ryot, or his agent, made in writing, and on the under-tenant or ryot, or his agent, making a declaration in the form, or as nearly as circumstances will admit, in the form set forth in the Schedule (B) hereto annexed, and the Collector shall give a receipt for the same under his seal.

Within twelve days of his receiving the money so deposited the Collector shall issue a notice to the person to whose credit it has been deposited, in the form set forth in the Schedule (C) hereto annexed; and such notice shall be served by the Collector without the payment of any fee, either upon the person to whom it is addressed, or upon his naib gomastah, or other agent; and in the absence of any such agent, it shall be served by sticking up a copy of the

If the person to whom such notice is issued, or his duly authorized agent, shall appear, and apply that the money in deposit be paid to him, it shall be immediately made over to him.

PART V.

MISCELLANEOUS.

26. All rent of land payable by any ryot shall be deemed to be due on the dates specified below that is to say—

What is an arrear of rent.

(1) When the ryot has agreed to pay his rent by specified monthly instalments, the amount of the instalments of the three previous months shall be deemed to be due on the first days of the months of Srabun, Kartick, Magh, and Bysack.

(2) Where no agreement has been made to pay by specified monthly instalments, the rent shall be deemed to be due in quarterly instalments on the first days of the aforesaid months; and the proportion of each instalment shall be fixed by the Collector after local inquiry with reference to the custom of the district, and shall be published by him by notices to be posted up at the court or office of the Judge, the Magistrate, and the Collector of the district;

at the court or office of every moonsiff, sub-divisional officer, and Sub-Registrar of Assurances in such district; and at every police station in such district; and by proclamation to be made by beat of drum at the headquarters of such district; and in every place in which a sub-divisional office is situated; and in such other places as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may direct.

All rent which shall be due as above, and shall remain unpaid by sunset on any of the said quarterly days of payment, shall be deemed to be an arrear of rent, and interest on the same, at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum, shall be awarded by any court giving a decree for the principal amount of the arrear.

Provided that where the payment of interest on unpaid monthly instalments has been stipulated for by any written engagement in force at the date of the commencement of this Act, any such interest which may have become due before the said quarterly day of payment may be included in any suit for arrears of rent, but the plaintiff must set forth a clear account showing the actual arrears and the mode in which such interest has been calculated upon them.

27. Every under-tenant or ryot who shall pay at the mál cutcherry of the person to whom the rent is due any instalment of rent then payable, shall be entitled to have a receipt, of which a counterfoil shall be kept in the cutcherry of the person to whom the payment is made. Every zemindar shall keep forms of such receipts and counterfoils bound together in books of not less than fifty receipts each, and both receipts and counterfoils shall bear the same series of consecutive numbers. Each receipt shall specify the yearly rent of the tenure on account of which payment is made; and when the person, taking the receipt is able to write, his signature shall be taken on the counterfoil thereof. Neglect or refusal to give such a receipt shall be deemed to be a withholding of a receipt within the meaning of section 10 of Act X of 1859, and section 11 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869.

28. In all suits for arrears of rent the plaintiff shall direct some person to accompany the officer who serves the summons, and point out the defendant or the house in which he ordinarily resides. A statement of the service shall be endorsed on the summons and signed by such person and by the village chowkeedar, or, in places where a punchayet has been appointed under the Village Chowkeedaree Act, 1870, by some member of the punchayet; and the service shall not be deemed a good service unless the summons bears such indorsement signed as aforesaid.

29. When a decree is passed for any arrears of rent, whether due at the end of the year or not, against any ryot holding a non-transferable tenure, or holding under a pottah the term of which has not expired, and the plaintiff has included in his plaint a prayer for the ejectment of the defendant, such defendant shall be liable to be ejected from the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the amount of the decree, together with interest and costs of suit, be paid into Court within fifteen days from the date of the decree. But no ryot having a right of occupancy shall be ejected otherwise than by order of Court after the sale of his tenure in execution of decree.

30. Notwithstanding anything contained in Act X of 1859, or the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, all crops or products declared liable to distraint under those Acts shall be liable to distraint whether they belong to the person from whom the arrear of rent is due or to any under-tenant of such person, and no such under-tenant shall institute a suit to try the right to the possession of such crops or products, or to recover damages for the distress and sale of the same under sections 139 or 141 of Act X of 1859, or under sections 96 or 97 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869; but such under-tenant may deduct the value of the crops and products belonging to him which have been so distrained from the rent due from him to such person as aforesaid, or may recover the same by suit from such person.

31. The powers given in this Act to the Court shall be exercised by the Collector in districts where Act X of 1859 is, or may be, in force.

Collector to exercise powers of Court where Act X of 1859 applies.

32. This Act shall be read with, and taken as part of, Act X of 1859, Act X of 1859 and Bengal Act VIII of 1869, where that Act is, or may be, in force, and of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, where the last named Act is, or may be, in force.

B. in respect of the rent of the said lands you must institute a suit in Court for the establishment of such claim or demand within six calendar months from this date, otherwise your claim will be for ever barred.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE chief object of the Bill is to provide a summary procedure for the realization of arrears of rent when the rates are undisputed. The difficulty experienced by landlords in many parts of Bengal in realizing undisputed rents under the ordinary procedure of the civil courts has frequently of late years been the subject of complaint. Now that the zemindars are bound to pay in to Government under penalty not only the land revenue but also the road cess and provincial public works cess, it is necessary that they should have some more speedy and effective mode of recovering their rents, and that portion of the cesses in question which is payable by their under-tenants and ryots. A summary procedure based upon Chapter XXXIX of the Civil Procedure Code has therefore been devised, and is set forth in Part II of the Bill.

The position of the zemindar in respect of the execution of decrees for arrears of rent is improved by making the ryot's right of occupancy transferable and amending the law with reference to ejectment. It is believed that to make the occupancy tenure transferable by law will, in fact, also strengthen the position of the ryot and tend to encourage agricultural improvements. The Bill also proposes clearly to limit the power of acquiring the occupancy status to cultivating ryots, and to prevent a ryot of this class from converting himself into a middleman without the consent of his landlord. It provides for the registry of transfers and other changes in the holders of occupancy tenures in the sherishtas of the zemindar on payment of a trifling fee.

The Bill further amends the procedure in connection with the deposit of rent by under-tenants, and transfers the duty of receiving and dealing with such deposits from the Civil Court to the Collector.

To prevent undue harassment of ryots by repeated suits for rent under either the summary or the ordinary procedure, provision is made for the payment of rent in quarterly instalments; and an attempt is made to render the fact of payment and the rate of rent more capable of proof than at present by insisting on an improved system of rent receipts. The Bill also amends the law of distraint by making the crop of an under-tenant liable for the zemindar's rent, and it provides for the more careful service of process in rent cases.

NEW MEMBER.

The Hon'ble J. B. KNIGHT took his seat in Council.

JUTE WAREHOUSES AND FIRE-BRIGADES.

The Hon'ble MR. COCKERELL asked leave to postpone the motion which in his name, namely, that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to jute warehouses and fire-brigades be read in Council. At the last meeting he stated that it was intended to extend the Act to buildings used for the storage of mineral and other inflammable oils, but he found that a correspondence was still going on between the Government of Bengal and the authorities of the town regarding the best means of bringing such buildings within the scope of the Act; and he therefore proposed, with the permission of the President, to postpone the reading of the Bill.

The motion was accordingly postponed.

STEAM-BOILERS AND PRIME-MOVERS.

The HON'BLE MR. COCKERELL moved that the Bill for the periodical inspection of steam-boilers and prime-movers in the town and suburbs of Calcutta and in Howrah be read in Council. In making this motion, he had little to add to what he stated at the last meeting. Sections 7 and 8 of the Bill contained two amendments which had been introduced on the recommendation of the Steam-boilers' Commission, a body of practical engineers who had had the working of the existing Act in the town and suburbs of Calcutta under their immediate supervision. Section 5 of the old Act only provided that the inspectors should be satisfied that the boilers were in good condition. Now, the object of inspection by competent officers before certificate granted was not only to prevent the use of boilers in bad condition; for, if certificates are only withheld on these grounds, the inspection of new boilers would be almost entirely unnecessary. It was now proposed to give Inspectors under the Act authority to withhold certificates for boilers which, although not unsound, were faulty in construction, and until such alterations as might be considered necessary should be carried out.

The motion was agreed to, and the Bill referred to a Select Committee consisting of Messrs. O'Kinealy, Inglis, Knight, and the Mover, with instructions to report in one month.

PASSENGER BOATS (PORT OF CALCUTTA.)

The HON'BLE MR. MACKENZIE moved that the Bill to place passenger boats plying within the port of Calcutta under the control of the Conservator of the Port be read in Council. The Bill, he said, was a very short and simple one, the object of which was explained on the last occasion.

The HON'BLE BABOO KRISTODAS PAL said he wished to point out one circumstance in connection with this Bill which appeared to have escaped the notice of the hon'ble framer of the Bill. The Bill proposed to repeal sections 63, 64, and 65 of Bengal Act IV of 1866, the Calcutta Police Act. Section 63 of that Act, amongst other things, provided a penalty for a breach of the conditions prescribed by that section. The section said—"The owner or manjee of a boat plying for passengers without being duly registered, or carrying more passengers, or with a less crew than is stated in the register, or not having the prescribed particulars painted on it, shall be liable, on summary conviction before a Magistrate, to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees." As no provision was made in the Bill in regard to penalties, and as section 63 of the Police Act was being repealed, as far as he could see no penalty could be inflicted for any such offences. Section 2 of the Bill provided that "no boats shall ply for passengers in the port of Calcutta unless duly registered at the office of the Conservator of the Port under such rules, and on payment of such fees as the local Government may from time to time prescribe by notification published in the Calcutta Gazette." He did not know whether it was contemplated to confer power on the Conservators of the Port to prescribe penalties in the rules which they were authorised to issue. He did not think it would be consistent with the Parliamentary Statute to delegate the power to provide penalties to the executive authorities: whatever penalties were to be prescribed should, he thought, be the act of the Legislature. He therefore thought it proper to draw attention to what appeared to be an omission in the Bill.

The HON'BLE MR. MACKENZIE said it would have saved the time of the Council if the hon'ble member had stated to him before the Council met the difficulty which had occurred to him. The rules for the regulation of passenger boats would be framed both under this Act and the Indian Ports' Act just as the rules for regulating cargo boats had been passed under both the Custom's Act and the Ports' Act. The Indian Ports' Act provided penalties for breach object of the present Bill was to transfer the jurisdiction from the Police to the Port Commissioners and to enable the latter to levy fees for registration, which they could not do under the Ports' Act by itself.

The motion was then agreed to, and the Bill referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. O'Kinealy, the Hon'ble Ameer Ali, and the Mover.

REALIZATION OF ARREARS OF RENT.

The HON'BLE MR. MACKENZIE moved that the Bill for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent, and to amend the law relating to rent, be read in Council. In doing so, he said—"I could have wished, Sir, that a measure of this magnitude had been entrusted to abler hands than mine. Of all subjects that could come before this Council, there is none more important than the Law of Rent, affecting, as it does, the whole internal economy of the province, and the well-being of the vast majority of its working population. There is at the same time no subject upon which more diverse views are held and enunciated; none upon which it is more difficult to arrive at indisputable conclusions; none around which party prejudices run more high. A discussion about Indian land rent tends generally to become as warm as a debate in Convocation. I shall hope, however, in what I have to say to-day, to deal as fairly as possible with disputed points, and to avoid the raising of any issues save such as are essential to the matter now in hand.

The Bill then which I have the honor to lay before the Council has, speaking generally, two chief ends—first, it is designed to strengthen the hands of the rent-receiver in respect of the recovery of rents really due, and the execution of decrees actually held; and secondly, it attempts to strengthen the position of the cultivating ryot, and to place his tenant right upon a sound and definite basis for the future.

When moving for leave to introduce this Bill, I said something of the difficulties felt by the landholding classes in realising their rents at the present day. I referred, it may be remembered, to the law's delays, and to the special delays experienced by plaintiff landlords in a Bengal Moonsiff's Court. It may perhaps therefore somewhat surprise the Council to find that the measure now submitted for consideration still leaves the Civil Court as the tribunal to which the zemindar must go. Hon'ble Members are doubtless aware that it has frequently been urged upon Government, and was indeed at one time proposed by the Government itself, to remove the cognizance of simple rent-suits from the Civil Courts (to which in all permanently-settled districts they were made over in 1869), and to restore such cases to the Collectors' files. That was the view embodied in the ninth section of Sir R. Temple's draft Bill to amend the substantive law of rent in Bengal, which was circulated and canvassed in 1876. When it was decided to abandon for the present the attempt to regulate by law the economic problem of enhancement, it was still proposed to simplify, as it was termed, the procedure of rent recovery by entrusting to the Revenue authorities the summary disposal of all suits for rent where the claim was undisputed, relegating the parties to the Civil Court whenever it might appear that there was really a dispute between them. Now, Sir, I for one have never been able to see how a double-barrelled procedure of this kind could be described as simple, or how it was likely to facilitate or cheapen the collection of rent. It has always appeared to me that the Civil Court is the proper tribunal to hear and dispose of what are in their essence mere breaches of contract, while the Revenue authorities are those who ought to deal with the difficult local investigations connected with the enhancement of agricultural rents. To say therefore that, where the issue was a mere question of fact as to whether admitted rents had been paid or not, the Collector should try the case, and that, when there were issues as to the capabilities of soils, the prevailing rates of the neighbourhood, the value of produce now and in former times, the Civil Court should try it, was, in the opinion of some of us, to reverse entirely the true theory of jurisdiction in such matters. The view that, if any more summary procedure for realising rent was provided, the Civil Courts should still be left to work it, was in the end formally adopted at a Conference held in July 1877 between His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir Stuart Bayley, long Commissioner of Patna and Secretary to this Government, Mr. Ravenshaw, then a Member of this Council and of the Revenue Board, my hon'ble friend

Mr. O'Kinealy, Legal Remembrancer, the Hon'ble Maharajah Jotendro Mohun Tagore, Rajah Digumber Mitter, and my hon'ble friend opposite—Baboo Kristodas Pal. It was doubtless felt by these eminent authorities that, although there are delays in the disposal of rent-suits in the Moonsiffs' Courts, these are caused in the main by circumstances for which those courts are not themselves to blame. I hope, Sir, that nothing which I have said may have seemed to cast blame upon the subordinate judiciary of this province. For purity of motive, ability, and hardwork, the Moonsiffs of Bengal will bear comparison with any other similar body of Judges in any other country. But they have very often by far too much to do, and they are hampered by a procedure which, however admirable in itself, cannot readily be adapted to the rapid disposal of petty suits. They are, moreover, powerless of themselves to make more effective the execution of decrees. The Government has already done something to increase the numbers of the Moonsiffs. It remains for this Council to provide them with a procedure that shall enable them to dispose more rapidly of the rent-suits that must come before them, and to give the decree-holder substantial assistance in realising his dues.

The Bill, which in this respect follows the suggestions of the Conference already referred to, proposes that, where a landholder has been actually in receipt of rents at a certain rate, he shall be able to recover arrears at that rate, and when they are not more than twelve months old, by moving the Civil Court to put in force a summary procedure similar to that embodied in the Bills of Exchange Act of 1866 (now Chapter XXXIX of the Civil Procedure Code). It will be seen that under this procedure the landlord has only to file his plaint to secure the issue of a notice to the defendant calling upon him to obtain leave from the Court, within fourteen days of the service of the notice, to appear and defend the suit, failing which the plaintiff will at once obtain a decree. Leave to defend will only be given on the defendant's paying into Court the sum demanded, or on his satisfying the Court that he has a defence, and on such terms as to security, framing, and recording of issues or otherwise as to the Court may seem fit. No appeal will lie from the summary decree on the part of the judgment-debtor unless he deposits its amount with costs, though the Court may, under special circumstances, set aside its own decree and go into the merits of the case.

Now, Sir, it is manifest that this is a most summary, and, as it may seem to some, even a severe procedure; and I have heard some doubt expressed as to whether, in applying in their entirety the provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act to the recovery of arrears of rent, there has not been a tendency to overlook a radical distinction between the classes of facts dealt with in either case. A dishonored bill of exchange or promissory note carries, it may be said, its history on its face; and it is only when a defence is raised, which goes absolutely to invalidate the written document itself, that a Court would hesitate about giving a decree for the sums thereby clearly shown to be due. But the mere assertion by a landholder in a plaint that the defendant owes him so many rupees as rent is, it has been urged, hardly a sufficient starting of the case to justify the disabilities under which the defendant is placed by the provisions of this Bill, or to shift so entirely the onus upon the ryot. The Council will, however, observe that by section 9 of the Bill it is now provided that no suit shall be entertained under it except where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Court that rent at the same rate as that alleged to be due has been paid in respect of the holding for which it is claimed some time within the three years immediately preceding the period for which it is claimed, or that the tenant has agreed by a written engagement, which is still in force, to pay rent at the rate claimed. If this section is not sufficient to show that the landlord must, with his plaint, produce prima facie proof of privity between himself and the defendant, the Select Committee will doubtless amend the Bill. It will be open to them also to consider whether prima facie proof of the defendant's indebtedness ought not also to be required.

I have said that the procedure provided by the Bill for the recovery of rent in those cases which it covers is summary and perhaps severe. But I must remind the Council that it is tenderness itself as compared with the powers that the Legislature thought fit to confer upon the landholders of Bengal in years gone by. Regulation XVII of 1793 declared it essential to the prosperity of the country and the punctual collection of the public revenue that landholders and farmers of land should have the means of compelling payment from defaulters, without being obliged to have recourse to the courts of justice at all, or to incur, for the recovery of every arrear, the delay and expense necessarily attending a law process. They were vested, therefore, with the most extensive powers of distress and sale, resistance to which was made severely punishable. By Regulation XXXV of 1795 the procedure in distraint became even more summary and stringent, and fresh provisions were added, making under-tenants owing over Rs. 500 liable to confinement after three days' notice to the defaulter, and a summary inquiry in the civil court. Regulation VII of 1799 carried the matter further by providing for the issue of dustuck, and the summary arrest of defaulters and their sureties, unless they paid the arrear demanded on service of the dustuck. That famous 'Kānūn Haftam' contained various other 'short ways' of dealing with defaulting ryots, to which I need not refer in detail; and Construction 382 of the Sudder Court declared that the zemindar's right of compelling attendance extended to the power of punishing the recusant. Modified slightly by 'Kānūn Panjam' (Regulation V of 1812), this law remained in force up to the passing of Act X of 1859, the only change being that the jurisdiction in summary suits for rent was eventually made over to the Collector; and in all cases (as observed by an hon'ble member now present in one of his divisional reports) the proceedings commenced by a strong presumption in favour of the zemindar, equivalent to a knock-down blow delivered upon the ryot. In 1859 the legislative pendulum swung quite to the opposite extreme. Summary arrest of defaulters was forbidden. Distraint was so fenced in with difficulties as to become quite impracticable. Zemindars were prohibited from compelling the attendance of their tenants to settle accounts or pay their rents, and both parties were relegated to formal suit in the courts, at first in that of the Collector, and since 1869 in that of the Civil Judge. It was the opinion of many competent Judges even at the time that this re-action was too violent; that sufficient consideration was not given to the difficulties of the zemindar's position; that the character of the ryot, say for instance in Backergunge, is not by any means so 'child-like and bland' as to warrant the confidence which the law places in his anxiety to pay his rent as it falls due. As I explained to the Council before, the difficulties of the landlords have become greater year by year, while the pressure put upon them by Government has become heavier, and they stand now urgently in need of assistance from the Legislature. In giving this assistance, however, it is not proposed to revive the process of dustuck in any shape, though I must say in passing that the Rent Law of the North-West Provinces, passed in 1874, contains provisions for arrest before judgment that might be with a very little modification shaped into an efficient and, at the same time, duly guarded procedure for compelling the personal presence of the defendant and bringing rent suits to a speedy issue. Personally I should be inclined to attach the utmost importance to this securing of the actual attendance of the ryot before a decree is given against him. Those who know most of our process-serving peons distrust ex parte proceedings in such cases altogether. Be this as it may, the procedure laid down in the Bill appears to the majority of those consulted sufficient to effect a radical improvement in the position of the zemindar without trenching unduly upon the liberties of the ryot, or raising opposition upon what I may term sentimental grounds. Doubtless it will effect improvement, if it is fairly and intelligently worked by the civil courts, and this we have every reason to expect.

But the zemindar is not to be allowed to turn the summary procedure of the Bill into an engine of oppression and constant harassment. By section 26 we have provided that rent shall fall due only by quarterly instalments, regulated in amount to suit the crops and harvests of each district. Not only does this provision do away with the possibility of recurring suits for petty monthly instalments, but it removes one of the most constant sources of dispute between landlords and tenants. While regulating thus the instalments of the ryot's payments, we have per contra allowed interest to the zemindar as a matter of course upon all overdue instalments. In section 27 we have made compulsory a proper system of rent receipts. Without attaching an overweening importance to this improvement—an improvement advocated, I am bound to say, by the zemindars themselves—I believe that it will to some extent help to make the fact of payment or non-payment of rent more susceptible of satisfactory proof, and diminish materially the possibility of forgery in connection with rent receipts. Section 10 is designed to remedy the hardship felt by zemindars holding decrees for rent at enhanced rates, who are frequently, on the appeal of the judgment-debtor, kept not only out of the enhanced rent, but also out of that portion of their due which represents the former rent of the holding.

Thus far the provisions of the Bill run mainly in favor of the zemindar.

I pass on now to those sections of the Bill which seek to strengthen and define more clearly the position of the occupancy ryot. In connection with the question of improving the procedure in execution of decrees for rent arrears, it was suggested by various zemindars that it would be simpler and more satisfactory to bring to sale the tenure of the occupancy ryot than to put in force the provisions of the law for his eviction on failure to pay what was demanded of him. There can be no doubt whatever that in very many districts the occupancy tenure has, in spite of Act X of 1859, been openly recognised as possessing a transferable character—a fact accounted for, as I believe, by the practical permanence of the rights enjoyed by many cultivators whose only legal title at the present day is that of ryots having rights of occupancy. It was quite certain that to recognize the tenure as transferable by sale in execution for arrears would in course of time have the effect of making it generally transferable by the custom of the district; and the question naturally arose whether, on grounds of policy as well as of convenience, it was not desirable to declare it transferable as well as heritable by direct provision of law. Sir R. Temple wrote thus upon this subject in paragraph 14 of his minute of the 29th August 1876:—

“I find that many zemindars desire that the right and interest of an occupancy ryot shall be liable to be sold for arrears of rent, or for the amount adjudged to be due from him by a decree of court. At present a zemindar can recover such dues by distraint; he can also obtain a decree from the court for evicting the defaulter. I would not have any objection to making the occupancy right liable to sale for arrears of rent, if the zemindars desire it. This would not be prejudicial to the occupancy ryots, for the consequence must be that the occupancy tenure would have to be declared transferable by private arrangement (as well as heritable, which it already is). It has never yet been by law declared transferable, though it is believed that private transfers of the tenure are frequently made in some parts of the country. The result would be a certain strengthening of the occupancy tenure, which would in some degree be matter for satisfaction.”

The Government of India having before its eyes the complications caused in Western and Central India by the relations between the money-lender and the cultivator, felt some doubt as to whether it was politic to recognise or facilitate the transfer of the ryot's rights in the manner thus proposed. But it appeared to the present Lieutenant-Governor that so long as the transfer is only from one member of the cultivating class to the other those objections of the Government of India do not in fact arise. In Bengal, as a rule, the transfers are only of this unobjectionable kind.

The following extract from a letter to the Supreme Government, written in April 1877, explains the position taken up by the Lieutenant-Governor in connection with this question:—

“The Lieutenant-Governor believes that the objections to the sale of land in execution of decrees, though in other parts of India they may be entitled to weight, are altogether inapplicable to Bengal; and in this particular instance he believes that it would be acceptable to both parties interested in the question, if the Legislature were to attach a right of transfer to an occupancy tenure. At present such a tenure is in some few cases transferable by local custom. But in the great majority of cases, if an occupancy ryot is evicted, or gives up his holding, the tenure simply reverts to the zemindar, who can dispose of it as he pleases. To make the tenure saleable would be an undoubted advantage to the ryot, who is at present sometimes compelled to sacrifice a valuable right without receiving any money equivalent. It would raise and strengthen the character of the tenure, and the occupancy ryot would approximate to the position of a small talookdar. On the other hand, it would frequently be a convenience to the zemindar to be able to realize arrears of rent by the sale of the tenure instead of resuming direct possession of the land. It may be added that there appears no ground for apprehending that this measure would have the effect of transferring the land to classes whose ownership it might not be thought desirable to encourage. It is probable that in most cases the occupancy right would be purchased by ryots of the same class and position as the former tenant. The occupancy ryot is, by the nature and terms of his holding, a resident cultivator, and to render his tenure saleable would involve nothing more than the possibility of its transfer from one resident cultivator to another.

“It appears to the Lieutenant-Governor that a decree for rent should cover every right and interest in land of which the judgment-debtor may be possessed, and that the question of the sale of tenures in execution of decrees should rest where it has been placed by the Civil Procedure Code, which has lately passed into law. There seems no valid reason for making the tenure of an occupancy ryot an exception to the ordinary rule.”

The opinions of district officers, Judicial and Executive, and of the Board of Revenue, were sought for, and confirmed with remarkable unanimity the views above set forth, showing at the same time that the custom of transfer was much more general than the Government had supposed. Doubtless contrary opinions were expressed, and are still held by some; but I say that the great majority of all who have hitherto discussed the matter support the view adopted by the local Government. In deference, however, to the doubts felt by some, and especially by the British Indian Association, the Bill submitted to the Government of India in February last provided only for making the occupancy tenure transferable in execution sales for arrears of rent.

The whole question has since then been maturely re-considered. I shall hope to place in the hands of the Council very shortly a selection of papers bearing upon this point, in which will be found, I trust, sufficient vindication of the Government action in now deciding to propose that the tenure shall be generally transferable as well as heritable, provided only that the transferee is a genuine cultivating ryot. I should wish, however, upon this occasion, to be allowed to urge upon the Council, on my individual responsibility, certain considerations which seem to me to support and justify the present policy of the Government in this matter. We are constantly told now-a-days that the occupancy ryot is merely a metamorphosed squatter, an excrescence created by modern law, whose very existence is an encroachment upon the rights of the zemindar, and the recognition of whose tenure amounts to a practical confiscation of zemindari property. Now, I am perfectly willing to admit that the rule of prescriptive occupancy introduced by section 6 of Act X of 1859 had the effect of conferring valuable rights upon a class of ryots who, under the law as it stood up to that time, and under the custom of the country as it had always been, had practically no rights. I am ready to admit that the section was based upon a misconception, and was justified by a reference to a supposed state of things in the North-Western Provinces which had really no existence. But those who press this argument too often forget that, inasmuch as the only other privileged ryots recognised by Act X are those who have held or claim to hold at fixed rates from the time of the permanent settlement, it is clear that all that vast body of resident cultivators who had rights of occupancy in the soil, but who were not protected absolutely from enhancement of rent, are now comprehended within the term "ryots having rights of occupancy." I believe myself indeed that the margin of squatters and tenants-at-will incorporated with this class by the operation of section 6 is in most districts so small as to be actually inappreciable. It is absurd to suppose that all the cultivating millions of Bengal, except the few thousands having maurusi mokurreri rights, went wandering annually over its plains and churs, claiming only the rights of outside paikashts until they were taken up and settled by Act X of 1859. In deciding what the occupancy tenure is, and what the occupancy ryot ought to have, we must consider what position the normal cultivating ryot of Bengal held with reference to his zemindar. Let me define it in the words of Holt Mackenzie written in 1832:—"The great body of resident cultivators (he said) possess a fixed hereditary right of occupancy in the fields cultivated by them, or at their risk and charge, their tenure being independent of any known contract. They cannot justly be ousted so long as they pay the amount of value demandable from them; that being determined according to local usage; sometimes by fixed money rates, or rates varying with the quality of the land, or the nature of the crop grown; sometimes by the actual delivery of a fixed share of the grain produce; sometimes by an estimation and valuation of the same; sometimes by other rules; and what they so pay is in all cases to be distinctly regarded as the Government revenue or rent, whether assigned to an individual or not, and not depending on the mere will or pleasure of another. In Bengal Proper they are usually called khodkasht ryots, and by this class of persons I believe that the greatest part of the lands in the province is occupied."

Again, in Sir W. Muir's admirable 'Notes on Tenant Right in all parts of India,' I find that great authority stating that, after taking a comprehensive and exhaustive view of the question throughout India, excepting the Gangetic valley and adjoining tracts, he felt entitled to draw the conclusion that "over the whole country there exists the general law of ryots' right. The individual occupant is either a proprietor or a permanent holder." "Coming now to Bengal (he continues) a careful retrospect leads to two conclusions—first, that tenant right existed in Bengal very much as it did in Central and Southern India; and second, that the zemindar of Bengal had more the features of an official than of a proprietary origin." "The limitations therefore prescribed in the Bengal regulations upon the authority of the zemindar were entirely in accord with the tenure actually prevailing * * * ." What he means is this, that although by the permanent settlement Government has changed entirely the status of this quondam official zemindar, and given him an estate in the soil, and proprietary rights which it would now be folly to deny, there are still other classes having estates in the soil which no Government measures can justly confiscate, and which every honest Government is bound to recognize. Its duty is to reconcile if possible the rights of all. "The strength of the resident cultivator's title in Bengal (goes on Sir William) assessed though he was at (what are sometimes termed) full market rates, and indeed at rates often higher than those of the non-resident tenant-at-will, is testified on every hand." "I am satisfied (he concludes), both from analogy and evidence, that the khodkasht or resident cultivator of Bengal was the ordinary type of hereditary or proprietary ryot common throughout India." Dealing further on with the state of tenures in Benares, he finds that the ryots' tenure there "originally resembled in its permanency and substantial character that of Bengal." "It is possible (he says) to conceive that the two systems, that of the North-West with a strong proprietary and a weak ryottee title, and that of Bengal with a weak proprietary and a strong ryottee title, met each other in the Province of Benares." What the result was we find in another place. "In Benares (he accordingly tells us) it is common for cultivators not merely to sublet, but to mortgage, and even to sell their holdings. Act X of 1859 seems to have had a rather unexpected effect in checking the practice of sale, the idea gaining currency that under that law the transfer of a cultivating tenure was not valid without the zemindar's sanction." In fact, throughout his argument he takes the strong permanent occupancy right of the Bengal ryot as the standard by which to measure the position of the village proprietors and cultivating ryots in the North-West; and that such a course was warranted, is clear from various papers appended to his minute, which 'seem to show plainly that the right of transferring hereditary cultivating tenures prevailed in most of the permanently-settled districts both of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces.' From these and numerous other passages to which I might refer, and from a careful study of the Regulation Law, it might, I think, very fairly be inferred that Act X by lumping together these permanent resident ryots with the new prescriptive tenants created by its own terms actually did the former a very grievous wrong. The legalised squatter has been come to be taken as the type of the whole. The revenue system of Bengal to a great extent withdrew from the cognizance of Government officers the actual relations between the zemindars and their under-tenants, and we have no means of tracing accurately the history of tenant right during all the years from 1793. There is, however, a mass of evidence with which I shall not trouble the Council, especially in connection with discussions regarding the effect of revenue sales, all tending to show that in spite of the way in which Government neglected him, in spite of Haftam and Panjam, and many other regulations in which Government, fearing for its revenue, ignored his customary rights, in spite of all the grinding of his zemindar, in spite of Act X and its provisions for enhancement and eviction, the resident cultivator has maintained even to the present day a practically permanent interest in his holding, which he has in nearly every district of Bengal been able to sell and transfer. I find in the minutes of the High Court Judges upon the working of Act X (written in 1864) the following passage from the pen of Mr. Seton-Karr: "That ryotee tenures of all sorts are constantly attached in execution of decrees of the revenue and judicial courts; that such holdings, whether of tenants with absolute and hereditary rights, or of tenants with mere rights of occupancy, are put up to sale by scores and hundreds all over the country, is a fact that admits of no question whatever. It is equally certain that they have a positive marketable value and often change hands by private transfer—sometimes with the consent of the zemindar, and sometimes in spite of all his opposition." I hold in my hand returns of sales under civil court decrees which show that in every district in the Lower Provinces sales of occupancy tenures have been effected without dispute. It is true that the rent law does not specifically recognize this right, and that the civil courts interpreting the letter of Act X have frequently denied it. My contention is that, in proposing now to recognize it by law, Government is not running counter to traditional rights and customs, but rather seeking to establish these ; restoring in fact the old common law of Bengal. I discovered only this morning that in 1865 the Government of Bengal had come to identically the same conclusion.

That the proposal is on other grounds desirable is, I think, capable of proof. We are constantly told that the crying want of the country is agricultural improvement. The great zemindars have in so many cases converted themselves into mere annuitants that it is not worth their while to attempt this. The smaller zemindars and intermediate tenure-holders have not as a rule the capital to carry out large schemes of the kind. It is mainly to the cultivators themselves therefore that we must look for the introduction of improved staples and the construction of wells, petty irrigation channels, and the like. At present the ryot has absolutely no inducement to begin any such improvements. Make, however, his holding transferable, and his view of the situation must surely change. He will spend, and even borrow to spend, having now some chance, even if he default in his rent, of recovering by the sale of his tenure some portion of his outlay. If he has to borrow from his mahajun for any purpose, he will do so on better terms, being able to offer more solid security. To those who think that human nature in India is not like human nature elsewhere, and that a cultivating ryot is never likely to seek to improve even a property that he can call in a sense his own, I would cite the facts related by Sir W. Muir of the zemindari of the Raja of Benares. Those Rajas, with far-seeing wisdom, set themselves to foster the occupancy rights of their ryots, recognizing the transferable nature of their tenures. The consequence is thus described—"The ryots' property in the soil (in the Raja's family domains) is so valuable that it fetches sometimes above Rs. 100 per beegha. The occupant expends labor and capital on his holding. The country thrives; no part of the North-West is more prosperous, and the Raja has his reward in a secure and flourishing revenue." The whole history of jungleboorie clearances in Bengal, the condition of vast tracts in Backergunge, Noakhali, Chittagong, and many other districts at the present day, proves incontestably that there is no more zealous pioneer, no more assiduous digger and improver of the soil than the Indian ryot when his tenure is assured, and that too even when his rent seems almost crushing. I need not refer to the mass of evidence showing the working of peasant proprietorship in many parts of Europe. The state of things in Bengal is not identical with that, and the comparison might lead to misconception. I do not, as I have already said, seek to blink the fact that the zemindar has in Bengal been granted an actual estate in the soil, and I should be the last to tamper with any of his known and acknowledged rights. But all history and all legislation goes to show that though an actual, he is not an absolute, proprietor, except as regards his seer or private lands, and my contention is at present that the resident ryot has also an estate in the soil, which it is worth our while to define and worth our while to develop. My belief is that this policy is good both for zemindar and ryot. My hope is that the zemindars will themselves admit this. We have, I say, every reason to believe that to recognize the transferable character of the occupancy ryot's tenure in Bengal will improve his position in many ways, and that he will in turn improve the land. He has now had brought to his door that system of primary education for which the name of Sir G. Campbell will be ever honored. He has throughout many parts of Bengal benefited for some years past by the famines and misfortunes of his neighbours, and by the new and growing demand for a very profitable staple. His standard of comfort bids fair in every way to rise, and it seems the duty of Government to do what it can to help and accelerate his material not less than his moral welfare.

But we hold that it is only the ryot who actually cultivates his own lands with his own hands, or by means of hired labor, who is entitled to occupancy rights. We have no desire to see the money-lender coming in and taking possession of the land, reducing the actual cultivator to the position of a serf. Nor do we wish to see the cultivator following the example of the zemindar and converting himself into an idler by sub-letting his holding to a rack-rented cottier. We believe that an infinity of mischief is being done by the encouragement given to sub-letting, owing to the construction put by the civil courts upon the law as it stands. It is bad enough to have between the zemindar and the cultivator putnidars, durputnidars, seputnidars, howladars, and so on to the tenth degree, without allowing the original cultivator to begin the process over again on his own account. We propose to recognise no sub-letting and no sub-division of a cultivator's holding without the consent of the zemindar or other rent-receiver. And if the latter consents to sub-letting by his occupancy ryot he must accept the latter as a middleman, and the actual cultivator under that middleman will begin to acquire prescriptive occupancy rights. This part of the Bill must, however, be carefully considered in Select Committee in view of the existing practice of sub-letting in certain districts. The sections as now framed are to a great extent tentative only. The Bill also contains a provision for preventing the absorption of ryottee lands into the zemindar's home farm. The resident ryots of the village have historically and legally a preferential right to cultivate the lands within its boundaries. The zemindar is not entitled for the default of one to reduce the area available to all. The very existence of such a thing as khamar or nij-jote, and the fact that many zemindars hold jotes in their own estates without any attempt to convert them to khamar, supports this view. The Bill, however, in fairness to the zemindar, compels the registration of all legal transfers, successions, and divisions of occupancy tenures, and permits him to levy a moderate fee upon such occasions, compelling him at the same time to give due effect to them. This, then, is the gist and scope of Part III of the Bill which is now before the Council.

Sections 22 to 25 of the Bill amend the procedure in connection with rent deposits, limiting the time within which they must be made so as to entail penalties on the zemindar, and transferring the duty of receiving and dealing with them from the Civil Court to the Collector. This will be a relief to the Civil Courts and a boon to the zemindars.

Sections 20 and 21 and section 29 of the Bill are designed to improve the position of the landlord in respect of execution of decrees against both occupancy and non-occupancy ryots, and section 30 remedies what is felt to be a defect in the law of distraint. A section has also been added to make the service of process on ryots more certain and satisfactory than it is at present. If there is to be a summary decree for rent, there must be at least reasonable certainty that the fact of suit has been brought to the notice of the alleged defaulter. This is a point of cardinal importance.

These are the chief provisions of the Bill which I have the honor to introduce. They cover, it will be seen, a good deal of ground, and effect a very important and far-reaching change in the Rent Law as it now stands. It would perhaps have been more satisfactory had we been able to take up that Rent Law as a whole, and had we, leaving the question of the grounds of enhancement to be separately dealt with in the manner indicated by me on a former occasion, amended the rest of the law thoroughly upon all other points. It is felt, however, that this, though a most necessary, would probably be a very lengthy task, and it is deemed better to give as soon as possible assistance to the zemindar in collecting his rents and those legal cesses upon land which are realizable therewith. Next session it may, I hope, be possible to take up effectually the general amendment of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869."

The HON'BLE RAJAH PRAMATHA NATHA ROY observed that this was a very important measure, and the Bill was only circulated on the previous day. There were many provisions in the Bill which required careful consideration, and he would therefore move that the discussion upon the Bill be postponed till the next meeting of the Council.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said he thought the request of the hon'ble member was a very reasonable one, because through unavoidable circumstances the Bill was delayed in preparation, and had hardly been long enough in the hands of members to enable them to give sufficient attention to its provisions, and to read through all the papers which had been circulated in connection with it. He had therefore no objection to make to the motion to defer the discussion upon the Bill to the next meeting of the Council, and he thought that course would meet the views of hon'ble members.

The motion was agreed to, and the further consideration of the Bill accordingly postponed to the next meeting of the Council.

EXTENSION OF BENGAL ACT IV OF 1871 (POOREE LODGING-HOUSES).

The HON'BLE MR. O'KINEALY moved that the Bill to extend Bengal Act IV of 1871 be read in Council.

The motion was agreed to, and the Bill referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Ameer Ali and the Mover.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 11th instant.

THE following is a selection of papers relating to the Bill to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent and to amend the law relating to rent.

No. 945, dated Calcutta, the 12th April 1877.

From—H. J. REYNOLDS, Esq., Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Revenue Dept.,
To—The Secy. to the Govt. of India, Dept. of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce.

THE letter from this Government, No. 2100T, dated the 29th August 1876, submitted, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, the outline of a measure which the late Lieutenant-Governor proposed to introduce into the Legislative Council of Bengal for the amendment of the law for the determination of rent. In the reply communicated in your letter No. 762, dated the 19th October, the President in Council assented to the preparation of a Bill on the subject, but it was added that the section which proposed to make the right and interest of an occupancy ryot liable to sale for default in the payment of rent, and also transferable by private agreement, was considered to be politically inexpedient. A draft Bill was then prepared, and was submitted to the Government of India with my letter No. 3110, dated the 29th November 1876. The Bill was also circulated for an expression of the opinions of the officers of Government and of the non-official community interested in the question.

2. The difficulties which are at present experienced in the administration of the rent law are of a twofold character, being concerned partly with the enhancement of rents, and partly with the procedure for the recovery of uncontested arrears of rents. The Bill proposed by Sir Richard Temple was intended to deal with both these classes of difficulties. But it must be evident that, while there is room for much divergence of opinion regarding the principles upon which, and the extent to which, it is equitable to enhance the rent of a cultivating ryot, there is likely to be a general agreement as to the measures which would be effectual for accelerating and simplifying the existing procedure for the realization of undisputed rents. The two branches of the question, though in some degree connected, are sufficiently distinct to allow of their being dealt with in separate legislative enactments.

3. The replies which have been received to the circular in which this Government invited an expression of opinion on the Bill sufficiently show that, under the present procedure, the recovery of rent by legal process, even when the arrear is not disputed, is so tedious and costly as practically in many cases to involve a denial of justice. If the ryots of a village combine to offer a passive resistance to the landlord by withholding all payments of rent, he can only realize his dues by a suit in the Civil Court against each individual cultivator. It is the object of the ryots to delay a final decision as long as possible, and the procedure of a civil suit affords them many facilities for doing so. In the meantime the zemindar, though thus kept out of his own dues, is compelled to pay the Government revenue on pain of losing his estate; and, under the pressure thus put upon him, he is sometimes obliged to accede to the demands of the ryots and to forego claims which he would have been able to establish under a more expeditious legal procedure, or he is forced to borrow money at ruinous rates of interest to enable him to meet the Government demand.

4. These considerations induced Sir Richard Temple, shortly before he made over charge of the administration of these provinces, to record a Minute,* in which he recommended that the portion of the Bill already submitted to the Government of India which relates to the realization of undisputed rents should at once be proceeded with, leaving the more difficult and intricate question of the enhancement of rents to be considered hereafter. The provisions referred to are contained in section 9 of the Bill which was forwarded with my letter No. 3200, dated the 4th December 1876. A copy of the Minute dated the 5th January 1877 is herewith submitted.

5. The Lieutenant-Governor desires to support this recommendation. While Mr. Eden is not prepared at present to take up the question of defining the principles upon which rents should be enhanced, he is quite satisfied that something must be done without delay to improve the system under which the zemindars can now legally recover their rents. Complaints have reached him from every part of the country of the difficulty and delay which exist under the present procedure, and both officials and non-officials are agreed that the system requires an immediate reform.

6. There is another consideration which appears to the Lieutenant-Governor to afford an additional argument in favour of the proposed legislation. The zemindar is already required to pay into the treasury the amount due as road cess (under Act X (R.O.) of 1871) upon his estate, and he is entitled to recover one-half of the amount from his subordinate tenure-holders and ryots under the procedure in force for the realization of arrears of rent. In the two Bills now before the Bengal Legislative Council, the Bill for the levy of a cess for Provincial Public Works, and the Bill for the levy of a rate upon Irrigation Lands, it is proposed to collect the rates through the agency of the zemindars in the same manner as the road cess is collected at present. But it is clear to the Lieutenant-Governor that, if responsibilities of this kind are thrown upon the landholders, the Government is bound in equity to give them corresponding facilities for realizing the amounts which they are entitled to recover from the ryots.

7. The scheme in question provides for the summary disposal of suits for rent by the Revenue authorities, where the claim is undisputed, and the trial of the suit, as at present, by the Civil Court, where it is contested. Precautions would be taken to prevent false claims being brought forward under the procedure now recommended for adoption. It is to be observed that in the great majority of cases the claims for rent are undisputed; but that even in these cases the ryots frequently refuse to pay, except under process of Court, partly in order to avoid demands for illegal cesses, and partly to secure proper receipts for their payments. It appears advisable to provide that the more summary process now suggested should be applicable only to cases in which former payments at the same rates have actually been made or decreed, and that penalties should attach to the submission of false returns in support of such claims. If, with these precautions against abuse, the procedure recommended in Sir Richard Temple's Minute were adopted, the Lieutenant-Governor believes that the great bulk of the rent suits would disappear from the Moonsifs' files. Some classes of cases which involved questions of title, or of a right to enhance, would still be tried in the Civil Court, which is the proper tribunal for the determination of such questions; but the majority of suits, in which the only issue is the question of fact whether payment of rent at an admitted rate has been made or not, would be decided in the Court of the Collector on the admission of the ryot.

8. The proposal of Sir Richard Temple to make the right and interest of an occupancy ryot liable to sale for default, and also transferable by private agreement, was objected to by the Government of India on the ground that, in the interest of the cultivating classes, it was desirable to place some restriction on the transfer of land, and to prevent the ownership from falling into the hands of those who would not be likely to prove good landlords.

9. The Lieutenant-Governor now desires to ask that this decision may be reconsidered. He believes that the objections to the sale of land in execution of decrees, though in other parts of India they may be entitled to weight, are altogether inapplicable to Bengal; and in this particular instance he believes that it would be acceptable to both parties interested in the question if the Legislature were to attach a right of transfer to an occupancy tenure. At present such a tenure is in some few cases transferable by local custom. But in the great majority of cases, if an occupancy ryot is evicted or gives up his holding, the tenure simply reverts to the zemindar, who can dispose of it as he pleases. To make the tenure saleable would be an undoubted advantage to the ryot, who is at present sometimes compelled to sacrifice a valuable right without receiving any money equivalent. It would raise and strengthen the character of the tenure, and the occupancy ryot would approximate to the position of a small talookdar. On the other hand, it would frequently be a convenience to the zemindar to be able to realize arrears of rent by the sale of the tenure instead of resuming direct possession of the land. It may be added that there appears no ground for apprehending that this measure would have the effect of transferring the land to classes whose ownership it might not be thought desirable to encourage. It is probable that in most cases the occupancy right would be purchased by ryots of the same class and position as the former tenant. The occupancy ryot is, by the nature and terms of his holding, a resident cultivator, and to render his tenure saleable would involve nothing more than the possibility of its transfer from one resident cultivator to another.

10. It appears to the Lieutenant-Governor that a decree for rent should cover every right and interest in land of which the judgment-debtor may be possessed, and that the question of the sale of tenures in execution of decrees should rest where it has been placed by the Civil Procedure Code which has lately passed into law. There seems no valid reason for making the tenure of an occupancy ryot an exception to the ordinary rule.

11. For these reasons the Lieutenant-Governor desires to request the sanction of His Excellency in Council to the introduction into the Bengal Legislative Council of a Bill to provide a more speedy procedure for the realization of rents in uncontested cases. The Bill would be based upon the 9th section of the draft Bill which has already been submitted to the Government of India; but it would contain two additional clauses—one providing that no claims shall be admissible under the Bill except on proof that rents at the same rate have actually been paid in former years, and the other enacting that the right and interest of an occupancy ryot shall be liable to sale in execution of a decree, and shall also be transferable by private agreement.

12. The Lieutenant-Governor wishes to be able to lay this measure before the Legislative Council during the present summer, and he would therefore ask to be favoured with the early orders of the Government of India.

LEGISLATIVE BILL FOR THE REALIZATION OF RENT.

Minute by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, dated 5th January 1877.

In my Minute of the 29th August 1876, I have stated at large the amendments which I consider should be made in the substantive rent law of Bengal. The substance of these amendments has been embodied in a Bill which has been published for general information. Considering, however, the importance of the subject, and the fact that the sanction of the Secretary of State to the formal introduction of the Bill has not yet been received, it is very doubtful whether the Bill could be passed during the present session. But there seems to me to be no reason why the procedure portion of the Bill—that portion which relates to the realization of undisputed rents—should not at once be taken into consideration, as it is perhaps not so important as to render necessary a previous reference to the Secretary of State under existing orders. It appears that about 75 per cent. of the rent suits instituted in the courts of Bengal are undisputed cases, and the zemindars very naturally complain that it is hard upon them that they should incur all the delay and expense of a civil suit in these undefended cases. In the Bill which was published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 13th December 1876, a simple mode of procedure was suggested, which would enable the zemindars to realize rents admittedly due without delay and expense. There seems to me to be no reason why this portion of the Bill should not at once be proceeded with, as it is in no way connected with the more difficult and intricate question of the enhancement of rent.

The introduction of a simple measure to facilitate the collection of rent will be a great boon to the zemindars of Bengal, and one for which they are fairly entitled to ask.

RICHARD TEMPLE.

No. 316, dated Simla, the 28th April 1877.

From—G. H. M. BATTEN, Esq., Offg. Secretary to the Government of India,
Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 945, dated the 12th instant, and in reply to state that the Governor-General in Council is pleased, in anticipation of the sanction of Her Majesty's Secretary of State, to authorize the introduction into the local Legislative Council of a Bill based upon the provisions of section 9 of the draft Bill submitted with your letter of the 8th December last, No. 3200, to provide a more speedy and effectual procedure for the realization of uncontested arrears of rent.

2. I am to request that a copy of the Bill may be furnished to the Government of India as soon as it has been framed in view to its being forwarded to the Secretary of State.

3. With reference to paragraphs 8 to 10 of your letter, I am to state that the Governor-General in Council entertains doubts as to the expediency of including in the proposed Bill a provision making the rights and interests of an occupancy ryot in his land liable to sale in execution of a decree, and also transferable by private agreement. The change proposed on this point in the law as it now stands is a very important one, and should, in His Excellency's opinion, be very fully considered.

4. His Excellency in Council will, however, be prepared to reconsider the opinion expressed in Mr. Hope's letter dated the 19th October 1876, No. 762, in this matter; but, before doing so, would be glad to be furnished with the views of the Board of Revenue and of the Commissioners of Divisions and of any other selected officers whom His Honor may deem it proper to consult on this point.

5. The change in the law in this respect does not appear to be essentially connected with the proposal to provide a more speedy procedure for the realization of rents, and should, in the opinion of the Governor-General in Council, be considered separately.

No. 1180.

COPY of this letter, and of the one to which it is a reply, forwarded to the Secretary to the Board of Revenue in the Land Revenue Department, with the request that the Board, after consulting Commissioners of Divisions and such other officers as they think it desirable to refer to, will favour the Lieutenant-Governor with an expression of their opinion upon the question raised in paragraphs 8 to 10 of the letter to the Government of India.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

CALCUTTA,
The 2nd May 1877.

H. H. RISLEY,
Under-Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

No. 885A, dated Fort William, the 25th October 1877.

From—R. H. WILSON, Esq., Offg. Secretary to the Board of Revenue, L. P.,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department.

WITH reference to Government order No. 1180, dated 2nd May 1877, I am directed to submit the following report on the question discussed in paragraphs 8 to 10 of Mr. Reynolds' letter No. 945, dated 12th April, as to the expediency of making the right and interest of an occupancy ryot liable to sale on default, and also transferable by private agreement.

2. Most of the officers whom the Board have consulted concur completely in the view taken by the Government of Bengal. The Commissioner of Burdwan writes as follows:—

"The proposal to make the right and interest of the occupancy ryot liable to sale for default and transferable by private agreement is one regarding which, as far as the Lower Provinces are concerned, there cannot, I think, be two opinions. In many cases these rights are now sold, and in some recent settlements in the south of Midnapore the Settlement Officer has applied for permission to record in his proceedings the fact that such rights have been accorded to the occupancy ryots of the estate.

"The proposal in question is one which, as pointed out in the 9th paragraph of Mr. Reynolds' letter, would be advantageous both to landlord and tenant: to the former, there is the undoubted convenience of being able to realize his arrears in cash, instead of having a holding thrown on his hands; as regards the tenant, any opposition to the proposal as one bearing hardly on him must be founded, as pointed out by the Collector of Burdwan, on a misapprehension of the facts of the case. 'A right of occupancy is one which only endures so long as the rent is paid [section 6, Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869]. If the rent is not paid, the ryot is by the present law liable to displacement; and it is obviously to the ryot's advantage that this displacement should be effected by a sale rather than by ejectment, because in the former case he gets the surplus sale proceeds (if any), while in the latter case he gets nothing,' and, he might have added, has still the unliquidated decree hanging over him."

He also quotes the opinions of two Collectors of his division—

"As regards the question discussed in paragraphs 8 to 10 of Bengal Government's No. 945 of the 12th April 1877, I would beg to say that I cannot too emphatically urge the extreme desirability of making occupancy rights transferable: I cannot pretend to add anything to the arguments contained in paragraph 9 in the letter referred to. So far as I am competent to judge, it is a measure the advantages of which would all be on one side, for I cannot see a single real and practicable objection to it.

"I would even go further and advocate the provision of a machinery by which occupancy rights in definite tenures might be inexpensively registered, and thereby obtain some additional security, though not any more favourable rates."

"I think the proposal to declare occupancy rights liable to sale in execution of decree a very good one. These rights are now sold constantly, and have been for years past so sold without objection on the part of anyone, and the objections raised by the Government of India in their letter No. 762, dated 9th October last, seem to have arisen from an imperfect apprehension of the facts of the case. A right of occupancy is a right which only endures so long as the rent is paid [section 6, Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869]. If the rent is not paid, the ryot is by the present law liable to displacement; and it is obviously to his advantage that this displacement should be effected by a sale rather than by an ejectment, because in the former case he gets the surplus sale proceeds (if any), while in the latter case he gets nothing."

3. The Commissioner of Bhagulpore expresses substantially the same opinion:—

"As regards the transfer of a right of occupancy by sale in execution of decree, or by private sale or agreement, I do not see any real objection otherwise than as political expediency may require to be taken into account in certain places. For example, political expediency should prevent the extension of such a law (if passed) to such portions of the district of the Sonthal Pergunnahs as are inhabited by a purely Sonthal population. If this be not done, the Bengali and Hindustani money-lending element will very soon supplant the Sonthals, and put an end to their primitive social system, as well as their agricultural arrangements.

"In other places I do not set much store upon the kind of objections that I have heard raised against the free sale of occupancy jotes, namely, that the village system, already weakened, will be destroyed and ill-will perpetuated by the introduction of strangers into villages. The best answer to this, to my mind, is that, according to local custom, occupancy rights are already the subject of transfer in many places. They are distinctly so in Purneah, and I believe frequently elsewhere. I do not see that any extraordinary or evil effects of the system are apparent. I mention what Mr. Kemble says upon this point also—"In this district, and I believe in almost every district in Bengal, occupancy rights are by custom liable to sale in execution of decrees, and are transferable. The law has not declared that they are not saleable, or that they are simply hereditary; so that, if a ryot has a right of occupancy, no one can prevent his creditor from attaching it and selling it for what it is worth; nor can any one prevent the occupancy ryot from selling his right and interests in his tenure.

"A law such as that proposed by Sir Richard Temple and vetoed by the Government is quite unnecessary. It would simply empower persons to sell by special enactment what they have full liberty to sell as citizens of a free country."

4. The Commissioner of Chittagong expresses himself briefly to the same effect—

"In reply, I beg to state that in my opinion, and it is one in which the Collector of Chittagong concurs, to make the sale of such rights for arrears of rent legal would be conferring a boon on both the parties concerned.

"The rights of occupancy ryots are in practice regarded as both transferable and heritable in this division; there can be therefore no objection to this custom receiving legal sanction."

5. The following extract is taken from the Presidency Commissioner's report—

"The Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs states that he sees no reason for doubting that it would be a great advantage to the ryots if all occupancy tenures were by law declared to be saleable. This would at once give a definite money value to every occupancy ryot's land, and so far turn him into a man of substance. He sells his tenure now, but gets a low price, because it is uncertain whether he can legally do so, and the purchaser's title is therefore liable to dispute. If his tenure were declared by law to be saleable, he would be placed in a much safer position, and could command a better price for his land. It may be said, Mr. Wilson remarks, that the ryot's gain must be the zemindar's loss; but in reality a state of uncertainty, such as at present prevails, can hardly be really advantageous to any honest man, whether he be a landlord or a tenant.

"The Collector of Nuddea reports that it is scarcely accurate to say that such tenures are now in some few instances transferable by local custom. The tenures which are transferable and saleable are transferable and saleable independently of Act X of 1859. Since 1874 and the decision passed in the case of Norendro Narain Roy vs. Ishan Chunder Sen (W. R., volume XXII, page 22), the fact has been recognized that an occupancy right arising solely out of Act X is merely a personal privilege, and not a tenure.

"On looking at the proposed change which is contemplated in the law as it will affect the ryot, Mr. Stevens states that he can see nothing in it except gain to him. At present a right of occupancy has exchangeable value only as regards the landlord; he is the only person with whom an exchange can be made, and such exchanges are rare. The proposed change will give the ryot the power of exchanging with all the world, and must therefore in this respect confer a great advantage on him. Mr. Stevens considers that it has been quite correctly stated in the Government letter that rights of occupancy, when sold, would generally be bought by ryots of much the same class as those who originally held them. Where this might not be the case they would usually be bought by the zemindar under whom the tenure is held. The objection of the Government of India would, Mr. Stevens thinks, apply with infinitely greater reason to the case of zemindars, putnee and other superior tenures, which are now by law freely transferable. From what he has seen of Bengal he has not perceived much reason to believe that the persons who are now purchasing land are likely to make worse landlords than their predecessors; but unless this be so the objection has no weight. In regarding the measure from the landlord's point of view, Mr. Stevens states that it is necessary to consider how it will affect them with respect to (1) occupancy rights now existing, and (2) occupancy rights to accrue hereafter. In the case of occupancy rights accruing hereafter there is no difficulty whatever: any landlord who may not wish occupancy rights to be saleable and transferable will have the remedy in his own hands; occupancy rights will not be acquired by his ryots against his will; under section 7 of the law they may be barred by express stipulation. The future can therefore take care of itself. In the case of existing rights the landlord will derive the advantage pointed out in paragraph 9 of the Government letter. It will frequently be more convenient to him to realize his rents by sale of the tenure than to resume direct possession of the land. It is, moreover, an advantage to him to attach his ryots more firmly to their holdings, while he loses no power of enhancement which the law has given him. On the other hand, he will lose the advantage which he now possesses of resuming lapsed rights and making fresh settlements of the lands subject to those rights. This is a distinct loss to the landlord, and must be set against the advantages. In Mr. Stevens' opinion they nearly balance each other, and he believes that the landlords as a body will raise little or no objection.

"The Collector of Jessore writes that the saleable character of the occupancy tenure has been times without number recognized by the act of the zemindar in bringing it to sale for his dues. No doubt in doing so he has not acted of his own accord, but has only accepted, perforce, the decision of the courts; but as between himself and the ryots who purchased at the sales held at his instance, we can hardly now intervene and say the tenure is not saleable. Mr. Smith is of opinion, therefore, that no great harm will now result from making the right saleable, and some convenience may follow in the facility it will give for realizing rents.

"The Collector of Moorsshedabad is of opinion that it is not desirable, either in the interests of the zemindar or that of the ryots, to make the occupancy right transferable by private agreement. In Mr. Hodgkinson's opinion no change in the character of this right is necessary. The most that can be firmly done, he thinks, is to make it saleable for its own arrears, provided the zemindar is left a free choice whether he will pursue that course for the realization of his rents, or enter upon the land after ejecting the occupancy holder. The convenience of realizing his rents by selling the tenure will thus be assured the zemindar. As this course will be optional, and in addition to his present remedy, no right of his will be sacrificed.

"Mr. Hodgkinson has written a very full and able report on the subject, and he has advanced some cogent reasons in support of his views. I do not think, however, that the result of the proposed measure will be to add an intermediate link in the chain of sub-infeudation, or to transfer the occupancy tenures from the hands of actual cultivators into those of petty money-dealers, as apprehended by Mr. Hodgkinson. The nature of the tenure itself, as well as competition, would, I think, obviate any such consequence."

"On the whole, I concur with the views expressed by the Government of Bengal in paragraphs 8 to 10 of their letter to the Government of India, and with the opinion of the majority of the district officers in this division, that to make the right and interest of an occupancy ryot liable to sale for default, and also transferable by private agreement, will be advantageous to the interests of both landlords and tenants, and will be acceptable to both parties."

* No. 440G., dated 24th June 1877.

A copy of Mr. Hodgkinson's letter* is appended to the present report, and his views are considered below.

6. The Commissioner of Rajshahye and Oooch Behar fully agrees with the opinions already quoted—

"I am entirely in favour of making occupancy tenures transferable by sale at the will of the ryot, and liable to sale by the zemindar on failure of the ryot to pay the rent of the tenure. I can add little or nothing to what is said in paragraphs 9 and 10 of Mr. Reynolds' letter. Though the measure will certainly increase the value of these tenures

The Commissioner of Rajshahye and to the ryot, it is still more wanted in the interest of the zemindar, and would prove a more effectual means of realizing his dues than the other proposal, which affects uncontested cases only. Indeed, I think the latter by itself would be a very insufficient measure, and that, if we are to give the zemindar any real assistance in return for the work of collecting all these cases for us, we ought to make the occupancy tenures liable to sale.

"The measure is, in fact, Mr. Westmacott reports, in actual operation in Dinagepore by established local custom. It originates in the fact of there being more land than ryots to cultivate it, and in the ryots selling their tenures by private arrangement to their own advantage. To this the zemindars were either afraid to object, lest they should get no ryots to rent their lands, or they saw no reason for doing so as long as they received their rents from some one. The custom is now thoroughly established, and is in full force in both its phases, no zemindar objecting to a ryot selling his tenure, and the ryots both admitting the zemindar's right to sell in default of payment of rent, and claiming their own right to sell when and to whom they choose. The right is equally valued by both parties, and not long ago an incidental decision of a civil court refusing to recognize the transferable character of a tenant's right created quite a ferment, as depriving tenures of much of their value.

"I think the fact of the measure being in force by local custom in the Dinagepore district for many years, to the satisfaction of both parties, is a strong argument in favour of the view that its general introduction could do no harm whatever."

7. The Commissioner of Orissa takes substantially the same view—

"In Orissa the practice of zemindars bringing to sale the holdings of occupancy (thani) ryots in execution of decrees for rent is not uncommon. The holding, when put up to sale, is bought in by the zemindar himself.

"Occupancy ryots also sell their holdings to other persons not unfrequently, and the right of the buyer is not disputed.

"These practices are rendered possible by the extreme ignorance of the law which so strongly characterizes the people of this province. I am of opinion that it matters little what law may be passed on this subject, as the people will go on in their old customs the same as before, and as they are averse to litigation, the courts will have no power to touch them.

"On the general question, apart from local peculiarities, I am, and have always been, in favour of rendering the holding of a thani ryot transferable, believing that the position of this class would be much improved thereby, and feeling that any measure which tends even indirectly to create a stable middle class among the rural population would be beneficial."

8. Mr. Monro, the Inspector-General of Police, expresses himself as follows—

"On the advisability of making a right of occupancy saleable I entertain no doubt. To make the tenure saleable, as proposed, would be an advantage both to ryot and zemindar, and the village bunnia is not a political danger in Lower Bengal, as he appears to be in the North-Western Provinces."

Mr. Monro.

And Mr. Field, Judge of Burdwan, writes much to the same effect—

"The settlement and history of the land in Bengal, the character of the people, and the internal relations of the community are radically different from those of the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, and Oudh. So far as I am competent to form an opinion, I think there are strong arguments against the unrestrained sale of land in execution of decrees in those provinces. But these arguments have little application in Bengal to the sale of estates, or even of valuable tenures, and to the question of the alienability of raiya holdings I think that they are wholly irrelevant. This question ought in my opinion to be decided upon other grounds."

Mr. Field.

9. Mr. Towers, Judge of Nuddea, writes as follows—

"With regard to the question treated of in paragraphs 8 to 10 of the Government of Bengal's letter No. 945, dated 12th April 1877, I think it would be well to declare the transfers in question legal. I believe that practically they are so already by custom in many districts, but since the Full Bench ruling in Narendranath Roy's case, XXII, W. R., 22, local custom is all that the parties to the transfers have to rely on, and if this cannot be proved the zemindar may refuse his assent, and in fact eject the transferee without compensation."

Mr. Towers.

"I think the proposed change in regard to this point would be much more in the interest of the cultivating class than in that of the landlords. In districts where land was at a premium, and competition for it brisk, it would, of course, be advantageous to the landlord to refuse sanction to a transfer by sale (as he can do by the present law if the custom is not proved) except on payment of a fine to himself; or, on the death of the ryot without heirs, to be able to confiscate the jumma and let it out to another cultivator on his own terms. The ryot would in fact, as remarked in paragraph 9 of the Government of Bengal's letter, be raised to the status of a dependent talookdar. I quite agree with the opinion expressed in the same paragraph that there is no reason for apprehending that the measure would have the effect of transferring the land to a different class. In the great majority of cases no doubt the occupancy right would be purchased by people of the same class as the former tenant.

"The change would certainly be advantageous to the ryot; it will confer on him something in the nature of the Ulster tenant-right. That it would also be advantageous to the landlord would depend on circumstances. If it happened to be in a neighbourhood where the demand for land was in excess of the supply, it would certainly not be for his advantage, for he could always make better terms with the in-coming than with the out-going tenant, and the same would probably be the case if the landlord was a man who carried on much cultivation himself as in the nij-abad of indigo-planters.

"Cases of this kind are, however, I believe, comparatively few in the districts of which I have any experience. I know that occupancy rights, or jote jummahs, are sold every day by private sale and in execution of decree, and it is very seldom that the zemindar objects; and the fact that such objections are so rare is a proof that the landlords do not consider themselves much aggrieved by the practice.

"If the contemplated change is made, rights of occupancy should, I suppose, be added to the tenures mentioned in section 26 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869. Perhaps this is in contemplation, but I have not seen a copy of the draft Bill.

"In conclusion, it appears to me that the enactment of the proposed change in regard to occupancy rights would have very much the same effect as the passing of the Irish Landlord and Tenant Act, 1870.

"In Ireland there was the custom, protected by public opinion alone, that mere tenants from year to year (a grade lower than occupancy ryots) might sell the interests in their farms to an in-coming tenant who entered on the same condition. That custom received by the Act the full force of the law.

"In Bengal there is a very prevalent custom that the holder of a right of occupancy can dispose of it in the same way, but that right depends upon custom only, and has been declared by the highest authority not to be sanctioned by law independent of custom. The proposed Bill will legalize the custom. In what light it will be viewed by the zemindars I do not know; but they have ample means of bringing their views on the subject before the Government. In the interest of the ryots, I have no doubt the change will be a very desirable one."

10. In the Dacca Division, where the ryots are probably better off than in any other part of Bengal, opinions are more or less divided. The Commissioner writes as follows—

"Both the Collectors of Backergunge and Tipperah are of opinion that the sale of occupancy rights to satisfy debts due by ryots should not be legalized. It would introduce all kinds of confusion.

The Commissioner of Dacca.

Mr. Barton thinks that in Eastern Bengal at least ryots need no further protection nor further immunities than they have at present. In many cases, as it is, the ryots are the masters and the zemindars the servants.

"Mr. Lyall regrets that he has to differ from the view entertained by the Government of Bengal. A provision in the proposed Bill, making the rights and interests of an occupancy ryot in his land liable to sale in execution of a decree, and also transferable by private agreement, will, according to the view he takes, encourage the creation of a number of under-tenures exactly of the nature of shikmis. The result which is apprehended is that the whole land will be tied up in a number of infinitesimal tenures, incapable of redistribution, with the object of adjusting the amount of a man's holding to his family. Zemindars will thus have still less to do with their ryot, and become more than they are now, mere annuitants on the soil, defeating thereby one of the main objects of the permanent settlements.

"The proposed system will, he further considers, tend to increase the imposts on the actual cultivator of the soil, for every middleman tries to extract as large a margin of profit as possible. Mr. Lyall has found the ryots of talookdars paying two to four annas more than those of zemindars of adjoining fields, and he is of opinion that, in the ordinary course of events, the proposed new class of holders of transferable occupancy rights will dispose of their tenures not to cultivating ryots, but to those who will sub-let at a higher rate, and thus the occupancy lands now to be created will practically become small tenures, the ryots of which will be paying rack-rents. It is doubted whether the occupancy right would, as assumed by Mr. Reynolds, be purchased in most cases by ryots of the same class and position as the former tenants. Experience opposes such a probability, as it found that in many places occupancy ryots are even now sub-letting their tenures at enhanced rates. The jotedars of the Panchashazari chur, in the district of Furreedpore, have been found to be sub-letting lands which they have been paying rent for to Government at 8 annas for Re. 1-8 and Re. 2, and, as the law now stands, they cannot be ousted in favour of the bona fide cultivator. If this be possible now, how much more common is it not likely to be when tenures are saleable?

"Moreover, if ryottee rights are made transferable, they will come under the laws of the inheritance conveyance of real property, and will prove a fruitful source of litigation. Land will become fearfully sub-divided, which will re-act upon the ryots themselves.

"Another argument which the Collector has adduced against this proposal is that the right to a large sum as salami which the zemindars would now receive in the event of his creating a number of saleable tenures would, by the proposed law, be taken from them and given to the ryot, the equity of which Mr. Lyall ventures to question. So far, then, from allowing an occupancy ryot to sell his rights and interest, Mr. Lyall would not allow him even to sub-let his land, for, if this power is conceded, those under him must be rack-rented more or less.

"Before deciding on a step such as is now proposed, Mr. Lyall thinks that the whole history and effect of under-tenures in Bengal should be fully considered, and the question determined whether the enormous sub-infeudation which has gone on in many districts has been on the whole for the prosperity of the country or not. Until this be done, he does not think such a sweeping change as that contemplated should be entertained."

Mr. Peacock's own view is expressed thus—

"The proposal discussed in paragraphs 8 to 10 of Mr. Reynolds' letter, viz. to make the right and interest of an occupancy ryot liable to sale for default, as well as transferable by private agreement, is one with regard to which much may be said on both sides. The question must be regarded from two points of view—the ryots and the zemindars. So far as the ryot is concerned, there is no question that the proposal is one that would often be a material benefit to him, as it would ensure his being able to obtain a consideration in money for the rights he possesses. It might also, as pointed out in the Government letter, be a convenience to the zemindar to realize his arrears of rent from an occupancy ryot by the sale of his tenure, rather than by resuming direct possession of the land. I confess I do not follow the Collector of Dacca through all his objections to the proposal, nor do I think with the Collectors of Backergunge and Tipperah that its adoption would give rise to all kinds of confusion.

"I do not see that necessarily the power of selling their occupancy rights will 'create millions of new tenures.' It will not create anything that does not exist now, the power of the ryot to sell alone excepted. The Collector admits that now 'nearly all ryots have occupancy rights, and those who have not are gradually acquiring them.' If so, the zemindar would seem to be little prejudiced by this extension of the privileges attaching to a right of occupancy, because the ryots will simply have the right of selling that which, if they had not sold, would have remained in their own hands. I am speaking now of the sales by private agreement, not of sales for default. On the other hand, there is no doubt that, if the zemindars were to create a saleable as well as a transferable tenure, he would get a considerable sum for doing so, and that by the proposed change in the law the possibility of his being able to do this with lands from which he has dispossessed an occupancy ryot is taken away from him and transferred to the ryot. For, with the power of sale that the ryot will have, he will of course, when driven to it, sell his tenure in preference to being evicted from it without gaining anything.

"I must say that I do not feel assured of the probability referred to in paragraph 9 of the Government letter, viz. that in most cases an occupancy right would be purchased by another resident ryot in the same village as the vendor. It is just as probable that these rights would frequently be purchased by mere speculators, who would of course proceed to make the most they could out of their bargain, and sub-let the land at the highest procurable rent. On this point, however, it is impossible to speak with any certainty till some experience has been gained.

"Having given the subject my best consideration, I am on the whole inclined to recommend that occupancy rights should be liable to be sold in execution of a decree for rent when the judgment-creditor applies for execution to issue against such right. It will then rest with the zemindar to adopt this course, if such a sale would be more convenient than the direct resumption of the holding, and not otherwise. As regards the sale by private agreement of such a holding, I see no objection to the ryot being allowed to do so with his zemindar's consent. This would prevent the latter's interests from being prejudiced in cases where he was opposed to such a sale, and, on the other hand, it would not debar such sales from being effected in cases where the zemindar was willing that this should be done.

"I have said above that it is impossible to say what the effect of conferring such a power on the ryot would be, and it is useless to speculate upon it. In the face, however, of the clear gain that it would be to the ryot, and the occasional convenience it would be to the zemindar, I am not prepared to say that such an authority ought not to be conferred, because there is a chance that the lands would pass into the hands of those who would probably impoverish the actual cultivators by a system of rack-renting. As a matter of fact, I believe the experiment to the extent mentioned above might safely be tried. I doubt much if execution would often be taken out against a ryot's occupancy rights and interests, and I think that it would be in very rare instances that a zemindar would consent to a ryot's transferring those rights and interests by private agreement."

11. Mr Edgar, Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling, also draws a distinction between sales for arrears and sales by private agreement—

"I am strongly in favour of making the occupancy right liable to sale in satisfaction of a decree for arrears. As the law stands at present, a suit may be brought to eject the occupancy tenant for arrears of rent. If the tenure be a valuable one, the tenant, if able, will not fail to pay up the amount, in order to save his right; but there may be cases in which for some reason the tenant is unable to pay the rent, though much less than the letting value of the tenures. One often sees such a case when a man dies leaving a widow and young children, and debts which have to be paid by the sale of moveable property. His occupancy right might be a valuable one, and still the widow have no means of paying the rent, as under the present law she could not pledge the tenure as security for a loan. The landlord would of course bring an action to eject, and as the widow would be unable to defend the suit, a decree and execution would probably be obtained without much delay, and the widow and children deprived of everything. Now, if the tenure were made liable to sale for arrears, they would get the difference between the arrear of rent and the market value of their occupancy right. I have frequently seen cases analogous to this both here and in Cachar, where the position of the landholders in many respects resembles that of ryots with occupancy rights in a big zemindari.

"It seems to me that there would be no injustice to the landlord in taking away the right of ejecting occupancy tenant for arrears of rent and making the tenure liable to sale:

when he ejects a tenant he hopes to re-let the tenure at a higher rent, and so get back the amount of arrears in the course of time. If the tenures were sold he could bid up to the amount of the arrears, and, if no higher bid were made, buy the tenure in, putting himself in the same position in which he would have been if he had ejected the tenant. On the other hand, the substitution of sale for ejectment would be a distinct benefit to the very class of ryots whom we ought to be most anxious to protect, i.e. those who for some reason are unable to pay the rent due on valuable occupancy tenures.

"The sale of the occupancy tenure should be well advertised, and in cases decided ex parte a notice should be served on the judgment-debtor, who should be allowed to save the tenure from sale by paying up the amount of decree previous to the date of sale, which should never be less than 15 days from the date of service of notice. In cases decided on appearance of the ryot, if the application for sale were made in his presence, he should be warned verbally by the court, and the 15 days might run from that date. If application were delayed till after the ryot had left the court, notice should be served as in ex parte cases, but at the cost of the decree-holder. In any case in which a tenure had been sold after written notice, I should allow the ryot to bring a regular suit to annul the sale on the ground that notice had not been served on him, but for no other reasons. He should not be allowed to dispute the sale if he had received the verbal notice in court.

"It seems to me that the question of making occupancy rights transferable by private sale differs in many respects from that of making them liable to sale instead of to ejectment for arrears of rent. The latter, with proper safeguards against fraud on the part of the landlord, would be, I think, an unmixed benefit to the ryot and no injury to the zemindar, while I do not see how in practice it could have a tendency to transfer the land to undesirable classes. I have much more hesitation about the former measure. There can be no doubt that the arguments in its favour contained in paragraph 4 of Bengal Government's letter No. 945 of the 12th of April are very strong—on the whole, I believe, stronger than the objections; still there seems to be some force in the objections, and it may be possible that the results would not be equally good in different parts of Bengal. Speaking from my own personal experience, I should say that in East and North Bengal the results would be decidedly good, and that there would be little danger of its having the effect feared by the Government of India. Even should the objection to making occupancy rights transferable by private sale be held to preponderate, I hope this should not be allowed to effect the question of making them liable to sale for arrears of rent."

12. Mr. Field, Judge of Burdwan, in a long and able report, questions the expediency of what are known as the occupancy clauses of the present rent law, and briefly sums up as follows the view which he takes of the question now immediately under consideration—

"The conclusion, then, to which I am led, is that a right of occupancy might, and would in all probability be beneficially made transferable if the following propositions were enacted into law:—

- I.—Declare that, in passing Act X of 1859 and Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869, it was not the intention of the legislature to alter or interfere with any usage or custom of holding of land, or with any tenure, or the incidents of any tenure, founded on such usage or custom, further or otherwise than is expressly enacted in the said Act.
- II.—Declare that all such usages, customs, tenures, and incidents thereof, proved to have existed since the time of the permanent settlement, and not opposed to any Regulation or Act, or to the common law of the country, shall have the force of law.
- III.—Repeal the section which gives a right of occupancy to persons holding or cultivating and for twelve years, saving all rights required under the section before its repeal.
- IV.—Give the zemindar a right of pre-emption where the raiyat desires to transfer his rights by private sale.
- V.—Declare that a right of occupancy acquired under Act X of 1859, independent of any such usage or custom as aforesaid, and every holding let to a cultivating raiyat for the purpose of actual cultivation shall be voidable on proof that the tenant has converted himself into a middleman.
- VI.—Declare that, in the event of the sale of an estate for arrears of Government revenue, a right of occupancy, acquired under Act X and not accruing to a holding otherwise protected against avoidance upon a revenue sale, shall be voidable on proof that the tenant owed half a year's rent to his landlord and had not tendered payment thereof. This may prevent combination for the non-payment of rent.

If the above changes were made in the law, I think that the enhancement difficulty could be much more easily settled. If the question be whether, the law remaining unaltered, it be desirable to make a right of occupancy transferable, my opinion is against the expediency of such a measure."

The present state of the law with respect to the sale of occupancy rights is very clearly stated in another paragraph of his letter:—

"That a right of occupancy per se is not transferable is settled law,—see the case just quoted, and also Narendro Narain Rai vs. Eshan Chandra Sen, XXII, W. R., 22, both which cases* were decided by a Full Bench. But though the right is not transferable per se,

* Ajudhya Persad vs. Mussamut Imam

there are many cases in which it has been decided that a right of occupancy may be transferable according to the custom of a particular district, estate, or locality. Now, I think, if all these cases be examined, it will be found what is transferable is not the right of occupancy, but the jote jumma or other holding, which was transferable by previous custom, and to which Act X annexed a fresh incident of protection against eviction. It is only eighteen years since the Act was passed and the right of occupancy created, and this period is too short to create a custom under any system of law. It is quite possible that some rights of occupancy, the creatures of the Act, and having no previous origin, have come to be regarded as transferable; but I am tolerably certain that this has happened only in those districts in which there were raiya interests transferable by custom before the Act was passed, and the creature of the Act came to be assimilated to, and confounded with, these. I say nothing about those cases in which the land with the right of occupancy has been transferred with the consent of the zemindar or at his instance by an execution sale. As to the latter class of cases, it has been remarked that they cannot be evidence of any right on the part of the raiya to transfer without the assent of the zemindar (per Phear, J., XX, W. R., 141), and the same remark applies with greater force to the former class."

13. Mr. Ravenshaw has no doubt that the occupancy sections of Act X of 1859 were intended to protect old tenures rather than to create new ones, and he feels strongly that, especially in dealing with interests in land, legislation is a clumsy and dangerous instrument compared with the gradual action of competent courts developing, defining, and asserting rights and customs of natural growth as they insensibly change to meet the changing requirements of the various classes interested. But he cannot admit that legislative change, possibly involving loss to some and gain to others, is under no circumstances desirable; and in the present case there are, he thinks, special reasons justifying interference with existing interests and relations. If our civil courts are not perfect, they are on the whole wonderfully successful in reconciling English ideas and Indian facts; but it is far from certain or probable that they have preserved and asserted all old customary rights. It was as a rough substitute for such rights—difficult to ascertain and still more difficult to prove—that Act X was intended, and it is too late now to go back from the policy of 1859. It should not be forgotten, too, that the proprietary rights of zemindars in their present unconditional form are as much the creation of English legislation as the occupancy rights of the ryot. In both cases the hard, sharp line which we have laid down has undoubtedly in many cases modified previous relations; and the right to legislate for the protection of the ryot, which must in any case have existed, was expressly reserved in the first Regulation of 1793.

14. But while maintaining the right to legislate for the protection of the ryot even at the expense, if necessary, of a certain amount of loss to the zemindar, Mr. Ravenshaw believes that in reality landlords would seldom or never lose more than they would gain from the change now proposed; for in many parts of the country, as is evident from the reports quoted above, ryottee tenures are now by custom transferable. It is said that, if occupancy rights are made transferable by law, zemindars will lose the salami which they now receive for recognizing their transfer; but Mr. Ravenshaw doubts whether this will altogether be the case, for whenever the rent is liable to enhancement the good-will of the landlord will be of very great value to the in-coming tenant; and in the present constitution of society in rural Bengal there can be little doubt that he will have to pay for it. It may be that a legal recognition of the right to transfer occupancy rights would to some extent lessen the power of the zemindar and increase the independence of the ryot. But Mr. Ravenshaw is convinced that the only practicable summary procedure for the realization of rents is one involving the sale of defaulting tenures; and he has no doubt that the gain to zemindars from a summary rent law would far outweigh any possible loss from making occupancy rights saleable where they are not so already. They would doubtless prefer a summary rent law with the option of recognizing tenures as saleable, since this would furnish a convenient machinery for realizing benevolences or raising rents; but it is certainly for their advantage to accept both the proposed measures rather than to get neither of them.

15. The gain to the ryot is a matter about which Mr. Ravenshaw sees no room for doubt. Mr. Hodgkinson is the only one among the officers consulted who has seriously questioned it, and a sufficient answer to his argument lies in the fact that, in the districts where occupancy rights are by custom recognized as saleable, the bad effects which he apprehends have not as a matter of fact resulted. Behar no doubt differs widely from other parts of Bengal, but Mr. Worsley's letter, quoted at page 45 of the Board's Land Revenue Report for the year 1876-77, shows clearly that even in Tirhoot the cultivators are not now so entirely devoid of intelligence in matters which concern their interests as Mr. Hodgkinson represents. Moreover, the poverty of Behar is undoubtedly in part the result of over-population, if the over-population be not rather the result of thriftlessness begotten by poverty and dependence. In either case the numbers of the people must be thinned by emigration or other means before any very great improvement can be hoped for, and it should certainly not be our object to tie the peasantry more closely than at present to the land. To strip a man naked is no doubt an effective means of preventing him from pawning his clothes, but the process is not necessarily to his advantage. It may be that in some cases petty capitalists will buy up occupancy rights and let out the land at a higher rate of rent to men of the class which now owns those rights; but in Behar, where alone such a result need be apprehended, the present tenants are too often so rack-rented that a holding when sold up by the landlord for arrears fetches a very low price. The ryots' profits are so small that there is, generally speaking, no room for the speculative mahajun whom

Mr. Hodgkinson fears. At all events, if Behar is likely to suffer from the change proposed, this does not seem to Mr. Ravenshaw a sufficient reason for shrinking from its introduction in happier and more advanced districts.

16. In the Dacca Division, where it is feared that to make occupancy rights saleable would introduce all kinds of confusion and still further separate the landlord from the land, the people themselves appear to be of a different opinion from the officials, as they have for some years past been exchanging in enormous numbers written engagements, not only recognizing the right of transfer, but fixing the ryots' rent permanently. It is clear, therefore, that permanent and well-defined relations between landlord and tenant, with considerable independence on the part of the latter, are found to be practically convenient. As occupancy ryots already possess the power of sub-letting, there seems to be no reason why a legal recognition of their power to sell should lead to an increase in the number of tenures intermediate between the zemindar and the cultivator; and any restriction on the right of sub-letting would be much more likely to turn the korfa ryot into a day-laborer than to result in his attaining the position of a permanent occupant.

17. To make occupancy rights saleable under decree for arrears, but not transferable by private contract, would clearly be impracticable, because the ryot who wished to transfer his holding to another could always do so by allowing his rent to fall into arrear. The landlord would be in no way better off than if the tenure were admittedly saleable, but the tenant would get a lower price. Moreover, if the landlord is to have a summary and rigorous rent law, it is both wise and just to strengthen at the same time the legal position of the ryot. It has also been suggested that occupancy rights should only be saleable with the landlord's consent; but as they are so saleable at present, this merely means that the law should remain as it is. On the whole, therefore, Mr. Ravenshaw has no hesitation in recommending that the law should be amended as proposed.

No. 440G., dated Berhampore, the 24th June 1877.

From—G. J. S. HODGKINSON, Esq., Offg. Collector of Moorshedabad,
To—The Commissioner of the Presidency Division.

I HAVE the honor to acknowledge the receipt, on the 9th instant, of your circular memorandum No. 15R.L., dated 2nd instant, and to submit a report on the subject of the proposed amendment of the rent law.

2. I will first deal with the proposal to make the right and interest of an occupancy ryot—

- (1) liable to sale for default;
- (2) transferable by private agreement.

3. After full consideration of the very important change which this proposal involves, I am led to express a strong opinion that it is not desirable that the proposal should be carried into effect; and as to my regret I find that I have the misfortune to differ with high authorities, it is only respectful to them that I should place on record with very great deference the reasons which have led me to this conclusion, not indeed with any expectation of the views crudely set down by me having or deserving much weight with those who have studied the questions more deeply and by the light of far greater experience than I can claim, but in order to show that I really have gone into the subject.

4. It is believed that to make the tenure saleable would (1) be an undoubted advantage to the ryot, and (2) on the other hand it would frequently be a convenience to the zemindar to be able to realize arrears of rent by the sale of the tenure, instead of resuming direct possession of the land.

5. I join issue with both these conclusions.

6. That ryots who at the present moment hold land under occupancy rights will immediately gain by the proposed enactment it would be vain to deny. But the enactment is not intended for the present only; and for the ultimate effect of it on the ryot we must look ahead to a time not less than a generation distant. Will the general condition of the cultivator be improved in 1910? Will the pressure of rent on the cultivating class generally be more or less tolerable than it is at present? Will the number of ryots holding these transferable occupancy tenures be proportionately larger or smaller than the number of occupancy tenants is now? Will many of the then occupancy holders be strictly speaking cultivators at all?

7. If I can show that in the short space of one generation the general condition of the cultivator is likely to be worse than now, the pressure of rent less tolerable, the number of occupancy tenants fewer, and of these many not strictly speaking cultivators at all, I do not think it can be contended that an enactment making occupancy rights saleable will be advantageous to the ryot.

8. It is an error to suppose that occupancy ryots as a class are superior in wealth, intelligence, and worldly wisdom to the ordinary run of ryots. They now form a very large and increasing proportion of the ordinary agriculturists. In the district of Moorshedabad there is often little or no difference between the rates at which they hold their land and those imposed on the less favoured class of ryots at will. The ordinary characteristics of the ryot are equally observable in their mode of life. They are imprudent, living from hand to mouth; always in debt to the mohajun; whatever savings they may make on occasions is quickly squandered on a marriage or festival, or perhaps lavished on some gew-gaw for the female members of the family. The mohajun's debt once incurred is seldom or never wiped off.

9. But it may be urged the effect of making their tenure saleable will be that the ryot in want of money will be able to borrow it on the cheaper terms. That he will be able to get money on the security of his land is certain. When the mohajun knows he has that security to offer, he will probably find the pledge of that security is made a condition of the loan. It may be at first that the rate of interest at which he obtains the loan is somewhat less than he is paying at present; but when the mohajun has once got lien on the tenure, I very much doubt if the ordinary ryot will be able to insist on the continuance of this lower rate. There is practically little or no competition amongst mohajuns for constituents; they play into one another's hands, and (at least in Behar) it is almost a point of honor for a mohajun to refuse a loan to a ryot the constituent of another to whom he is still in debt, unless indeed he has a personal grudge against the latter. I take it that the saleable right of occupancy will be incredibly soon mortgaged up to its full value; and after that the transfer of the tenure to the mohajun follows as a matter of course, the ryot probably remaining on the land as his gofur tenant.

10. But (it will be said) this picture is altogether overdrawn. It is likely enough that in a few instances something of the sort may take place; but in an essentially agricultural community too much value will be set upon so important a right as it is now proposed to confer, to make it likely that the ryot will readily part with it. India is a country of which custom is the principal governor. The right of occupancy, as defined by Act X of 1859, is a most valuable right, particularly where there is much competition for land. Then how is it that up to date in Sarun and Tirhoot, two of the most densely-populated districts of this presidency, this right is actually dormant—the ryot hardly knows that he has it, or, if he does know, cares not to assert it. There are of course other reasons for this remarkable apathy; but the fact which underlies all the others I take to be this—that everything of the nature of a right of occupancy had entirely died out in these districts long before Act X of 1859 was passed, and now that this valuable right has been re-enacted and defined by law, eighteen years have not sufficed to make it customary to claim it. In the same way the immediate appreciation of the proposed change by the bulk of the people in its full bearing must not be looked for. The native mind will not become familiarised at once with the idea that the increased value given to the right entails increased responsibility and increased possibilities of losing it altogether. But mohajuns and the more intelligent few will very soon take in the advantages the change has for them. The first feature of the change which will be made apparent to a body of cultivators, nine out of ten of whom are in debt, is the increased facility with which they can borrow money—a feature not calculated to arrest improvidence among an improvident class. The mohajun will then take care that no other feature is allowed to present itself.

11. I believe I am guilty of no exaggeration when I say nine out of ten of the class are involved in debt, and half of these without any reasonable hope of ever escaping from it. Under these circumstances I am strongly of opinion that by the process which I have above described it will be found thirty years hence a very large number indeed of these occupancy tenures is no longer held by the cultivating classes. The capitalist will be the owner: the real cultivator his serf. The rent of the cultivator, now regulated by a law which imposes restrictions on enhancement, will then be dependent upon the will of an irresponsible master, and too often limited only by the endurance of the tenant. I fear that the change which it is now beneficially proposed to enact in the interest of the ryot will then be proved to have introduced the seeds of his undoing, and have thereby led to a grave political misfortune.

12. Nor, if the proposed change is looked at from the landlord's point of view, do I think that it has any valid recommendation. The convenience accruing to the zemindar from the ability to realize arrears of rent by the sale of the tenure, instead of assuming possession of the land, will be in most instances more specious than real, and the value of the tenure to the ryot, and the value of the land to the zemindar after the destruction of the occupancy tenure, are both alike governed by competition. Each is practically represented by the capitalized amount of the difference which exists between the rent paid by the tenure and what would be the rent of the same land if governed by competition. Under the present law, whatever that value is, the whole of it falls to the lot of the zemindar on transfer of the land by ejectment of the tenant. But by the proposed enactment anything in excess of the zemindar's dues under his decree will, after the transfer of the land by an execution sale, belong to the late tenant. This will be a distinct loss to the zemindar—a loss for which he can hardly be considered to obtain a sufficient equivalent in the convenience which will be afforded him in the immediate realization in hard cash of his rents and costs, when covered by the money value of the tenure. For at present, where competition is brisk, the zemindar in want of ready cash can always, after ejecting the former tenant, obtain a bonus by letting the land for a term at something less than full rates, and it is only where there is brisk competition that the anticipated convenience will exist. When land is not at a premium the value derived from the sale of the tenure will go as short a way to cover the rent due as the zemindar may find difficulty in letting it on favourable terms.

13. I think I have fairly shewn that the proposition to make the occupancy tenure saleable involves in certain cases a distinct loss to the zemindar. But is it not entirely at his expense that the character of the tenure is to be raised and strengthened? Whatever accession of right is given, the tenant represents a corresponding diminution of the powers of the landlord. If this is to be effected by legislative enactment, I submit that, in order to justify the measure, it ought to be shewn that there will be a corresponding advantage at least equivalent to the sacrifice, or that a change in the terms of the existing contract between the parties is a public necessity. No reasons for the latter alternative have been suggested; the change is proposed as likely to be acceptable to both zemindars and ryots, because advantageous to both.

14. What advantage is likely to accrue to the zemindar? I have already given reasons for considering the convenience he will have of recovering rents by sale of the tenure to be generally a specious rather than a real advantage, counterbalanced as it is by the possibility of a distinct loss. But it must be conceded that in proportion as the character of the tenure is raised and the money value of it enhanced, the zemindar will in all probability find less difficulty in collecting his rents. This so far is a distinct advantage; but if I am at all correct in my expectation of seeing the tenures one by one pass out of the hands of the actual cultivator into those of the capitalist, the zemindar will no longer have to deal with a poverty-stricken class, but with men who are in a position to know and value their rights. They will indeed pay up their rents, but the power in the village exercised by the zemindars will pass out of his hands—so far (looking to the mode in which it is too often abused) a desirable circumstance enough—only to be exercised over the actual cultivator by pettier and perhaps more unscrupulous and rapacious masters. The result of the change will, I believe, merely be to add an intermediate link in the chain of sub-infeudation, already too long and strong for Bengal zemindars in districts where it exists, and regarded with suspicion and dislike in districts where (as in most parts of Behar) it has not been introduced. Thus, although the zemindar may be able to recover his rents more readily from the intermediate tenure-holder, the realization of rent from the actual cultivator will be eventually but little affected by the change.

15. In districts where industries are carried on by European or native capital, requiring for the production of the subject-matter of the industry an amount of land more or less under the control of the capitalist, there would be a great danger of his becoming a large monopolist of land in neighbourhoods where he required it, were occupancy tenures transferable. In the three principal indigo districts of Behar tenures would be bought up all around the factories, the good land put into indigo, the bad land made over to cultivators at comparatively high rates. There would be thus no small advantage, that the planter would get his land legally instead of by oppression or undue influence, as is now too often the case; but the zemindar would distinctly be a loser of the advantages which the ticcadaree system enables him to secure from the factory. It may be—it is—that the zemindar has no right to these advantages; he is paid for a power and influence which he ought not to have did the ryot know his rights; and very desirable it is that this power and influence should be curtailed. Teach the ryot to know his rights; confirm and strengthen him in them by placing him in a position to prove them; the zemindar has no valid reason to complain of this. But extend and enhance these rights at the zemindar's expense by legislative enactment, and he has at once a grievance which there is nothing in the present state of the country to justify, and may be a source of political danger.

16. In the important questions of enhancement which have lately been brought up I am by no means an advocate on the zemindar's side; the unearned increment should in my opinion as a matter of economy be made to find its way, not into the pockets of the upper few, but into a course of expenditure beneficial to the lower classes, the multiplication of whom has been the main cause of existence. But as I would show no favour to the zemindar in matters unsettled, so in justice to him I am disinclined to see any curtailment of his defined rights, even though in some respects abuses may have arisen in his relations to his ryots. By all means let the causes of the abuses be eradicated as far as may be; but I do not think the causes are to be found in the rights themselves, but rather in the ignorance and apathy of the ryot to his own rights, his poverty and state of utter dependence, and the exorbitant cost of litigation.

17. The proposal to make the right of occupancy transferable by private agreement for the above reasons (somewhat loosely expressed I fear) appears to be undesirable both as regards ryots and as regards zemindars. In my own opinion no change in its character is necessary. The most that can fairly be done is to make it saleable for its own arrears, provided the zemindar is left a free choice whether he will pursue that course for the realization of his rents, or enter upon the land after ejecting the occupancy holder. The convenience of realizing his rents by selling the tenure will thus be assured the zemindar, as this course will be optional, and, in addition to his present remedy, no right of his will be

No. 503, dated Calcutta, the 22nd February 1878.

From—H. J. REYNOLDS, Esq., Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Revenue Department,
To—The Secy. to the Govt. of India, Dept. of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce.

In your letter No. 316, dated the 28th April 1877, the Government of Bengal was informed that the Governor-General in Council had been pleased to authorize the introduction into the local Legislative Council of a Bill to provide a more speedy and effectual procedure for the recovery of uncontested arrears of rent. It was requested that a copy of the Bill might be furnished to the Government of India, and it was added that His Excellency in Council entertained doubts as to the expediency of including in the Bill a provision making the rights and interests of an occupancy ryot liable to sale in execution of decree or transferable by private agreement. Upon this point it was desired that an expression of the opinion of the Board of Revenue and of Commissioners of Divisions should be submitted for the consideration of the Government of India.

2. The delay which has occurred in replying to this letter has been caused by the anxious wish of the Lieutenant-Governor to frame a measure which, while it should carefully maintain the just rights of all parties interested in the question, should at the same time be generally accepted by the landholding class as a satisfactory settlement of the difficulties which they now experience in realizing their just dues. That in a large portion of the Lower Provinces, and especially in Central and Eastern Bengal, this class of the community have substantial grounds of complaint against the present system, is a fact which it is at once painful to admit and impossible to deny. The ordinary procedure of the courts of law, admirable as it is where questions of right and title are concerned, admits of many obstacles being placed in the way of a plaintiff who has to recover a number of small debts from a numerous body of defendants who have a common interest in resisting the claim. For the recovery of other classes of debts, the machinery of the Small Cause Court affords a cheap and speedy procedure; but the Small Cause Court is not open to the landlord. When a combination of ryots is formed against him, and such combinations are now not uncommon, the zemindar, even if he has succeeded in obtaining a decree, finds it difficult to get his decree executed; every advantage is taken of the technicalities of the law to raise objections and to interpose delays, and in the end he is often compelled to abandon the prosecution of his claim, or to effect a compromise by the surrender of a portion of his rights. The mischief produced by this state of things is of a very serious character. It is not too much to say that the present system tends to bring the administration of justice into contempt, that it is a hindrance to true economic progress, and that it keeps alive feelings of mutual animosity between different classes of the community—feelings which occasionally find vent in acts of lawless oppression on the one side, and of vindictive retaliation on the other. To these evils it is hoped that the Bill now submitted will in some measure afford a remedy.

3. It appears unnecessary to trouble the Government of India with a detailed account of the suggestions and consultations which have led to the elaboration of the Bill in its present form. The question has been very fully considered and discussed, and reports on it have been furnished by two committees which were successively convened to consider in what manner the accepted principles of the measure could be best embodied in a legislative enactment. The Lieutenant-Governor desires, however, to submit, for the consideration of the Government of India, copies of the communications noted in the margin, the former of which may be taken as expressing the views of the landholding class upon the points which are defective in the existing law, while the latter gives the opinion, called for in your former letter, of the Board and some selected officers on the question of making the occupancy tenure of a ryot liable to sale in execution of decree and transferable by private agreement.

4. It will be seen that the procedure for the hearing of cases under the Bill is partly based upon the Act (No. V of 1866) which provides a summary procedure for dealing with bills of exchange. This appears to be well adapted to secure a trial of the case upon the merits to the exclusion of technical and frivolous defences; while, if proper precautions are taken for the service of the summons, there is no reason to apprehend that any substantial answer which the defendant may have to offer to the claim will fail of being duly considered. The sections regarding quarterly days of payment, and the granting of counterfoil receipts, have been introduced in accordance with the suggestions of the British Indian Association. The special procedure of the Act is confined to cases in which rent has previously been paid, or has been agreed to be paid, at the rate claimed in the suit, and arrears of more than one year's standing are excluded from the operation of the Bill.

5. The sections which provide for the registration of transfers of occupancy tenures are regarded by the landlords as of great importance, while at the same time this registration will afford a valuable and permanent record of the rights of this class of ryots. The registration will be an acknowledgment by the zemindar of the validity of the tenure, and if he refuses to register, the law will enforce registration.

6. The procedure with regard to the execution of decrees is a matter upon which the British Indian Association lay more stress than upon any simplification of the procedure for the hearing of the suit. It has been sought to render the procedure in execution cases more speedy and efficient by providing that execution may issue on verbal application; that ejectment may be directed for arrears other than those at the end of the year; that an occupancy right may be sold in execution of decree; and that crops belonging to subordinate tenants shall be held liable to distraint. The Lieutenant-Governor has, with some reluctance, withdrawn the proposal that the occupancy right shall be generally transferable by private sale or other agreement. The weight of opinion is in favour of this proposal as will be seen by a reference to the letter of the Board of Revenue, and His Honor is satisfied that such transfers would not have the bad effect which has been sometimes apprehended, and that they would not tend to transfer the land to classes whose ownership it might not be thought desirable to encourage. He believes that such a right of transfer would be much to the benefit of landholder and ryot. It appears, however, that the landlord class are strongly opposed to the concession of any general right of transfer, and the Governor-General in Council has expressed serious doubts as to the expediency of including such a provision in the Bill. The Bill therefore only proposes to recognize sales of occupancy tenures at the request of the landlord in execution of decrees of court, and to this the Lieutenant-Governor believes that no objection will be made.

7. The Lieutenant-Governor is advised that it is expedient that the Bill should be introduced in the Legislative Council of the Governor-General and not in the local legislature. He therefore requests that, with the approval of the Government of India, the measure may be introduced into the Legislative Council of the Governor-General. The Hon'ble Mr. F. R. Cockerell would, as His Honor thinks, be the Member who should have charge of the Bill.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

CALCUTTA,
The 22nd February 1878.

H. J. REYNOLDS,
Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

A Bill to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent: It is enacted as follows:—

1. The provisions of this Act may be extended by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal by notification in the Calcutta Gazette to any districts within the provinces for the time being subject to the said Lieutenant-Governor in which Act X of 1859 or the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, are, or may be, in force, and shall take effect in such districts from the date which may be specified in such notification.

Extent and commencement.

2. All rent of land payable by any ryot shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be due on the dates specified below, that is to say—

What is an arrear of rent.

(1.)—When the ryot has agreed to pay his rent by specified monthly instalments, the amount of the instalments of the three previous months shall be deemed to be due on the first day of the months of Srabun, Kartick, Magh, and Bysack.

(2.)—Where no agreement has been made to pay by specified monthly instalments, the rent shall be deemed to be due in quarterly instalments on the first days of the aforesaid months of Srabun, Kartick, Magh, and Bysack; and the proportion of each instalment shall be fixed by the Collector after local inquiry with reference to the custom of the district, and shall be published by him by notices to be posted up at the Court or office of the Judge, the Magistrate, and the Collector of the district;

at the Court or office of every Moonsif, Sub-Divisional Officer, and Sub-Registrar of Assurances in such district; and at every police station in such district; and by proclamation to be made by beat of drum at the head-quarters of such district; and in every place in which a sub-divisional office is situated; and in such other places as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may direct.

All rent which shall be due as above, and shall remain unpaid by sunset on any of the said quarterly days of payment, shall be deemed to be an arrear of rent, and interest on the same, at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum, shall be awarded by any Court giving a decree for the principal amount of the arrear in a suit on application under this Act.

Provided that where the payment of interest on unpaid monthly instalments has been stipulated for by any written engagement, any such interest which may have become due before the said quarterly day of payment shall, on the application of the plaintiff or applicant under this Act, be added to the interest awarded under the last preceding clause of this section.

Proviso.

3. Every ryot who, on or before such quarterly day of payment, shall pay, at the māl cutcherry of the person to whom the rent is due, any instalment of rent then payable, shall be entitled to have a receipt, of which a counterfoil shall be kept in the cutcherry of the person to whom the payment is made.

What kind of receipt to be given.

Such receipts and counterfoils shall bear consecutive numbers, and shall be bound together in books of not less than fifty receipts each. Neglect or refusal to give such a receipt shall be deemed to be a withholding of a receipt within the meaning of section 10 of Act X of 1859, and section 11 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869.

4. From and after the commencement of this Act all suits for arrears of rent brought within twelve months after such arrears have become due may, in case the plaintiff shall desire to proceed under this Act, be commenced as hereinafter is mentioned. (that is to say) the plaint shall be in the form prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, but the summons shall be in the form contained in the Schedule to this Act; and in any case in which the plaint and summons shall be in such forms respectively, it shall not be lawful for the defendant to appear to defend the suit unless he shall obtain leave from a Judge as hereinafter mentioned so to appear and defend; and in default of his obtaining such leave or of appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree for any sum mentioned in the summons, and interest on the same at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum to the date of decree, together with the interest (if any) stipulated for under section 2 of this Act, and a sum for costs to be fixed by an order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, unless the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum, in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way and such decree shall be enforced forthwith.

5. The Court shall, upon application within the period of fourteen days from the service of such summons, give leave to appear and to defend the suit upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons, or upon his satisfying the Court by his examination upon oath or affirmation that he has a defence, or can adduce such facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application, and on such terms as to security, framing and recording issues or otherwise, as to the Court may seem fit.

6. After decree the Court may, under special circumstances, set aside the decree, and, if necessary, stay or set aside execution, and may give leave to appear to the summons and to defend the suit if it shall seem reasonable to the Court so to do, and on such terms as to the Court may seem just.

7. No appeal shall lie from any decree of the Court under section 4 of this Act, unless the judgment-debtor deposit the amount of the decree with costs in such Court to the credit of the person who has obtained the decree.

8. On the application of the person who has obtained the decree the money in deposit shall be paid to him; but if the judgment-debtor appeal, and the appeal is decreed in his favour in whole or in part, notice shall be served on the original decree-holder requiring him to pay the money aforesaid, or such portion of it as may be ordered to be refunded, into the public treasury within fourteen days from the service on him of such notice.

9. In default of compliance with such notice the sum referred to therein shall be deemed a demand under Bengal Act VII of 1868, and shall be recoverable from the decree-holder aforesaid as such.

10. No suit shall be entertained under this Act, except where it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Court that rent at the same rate as that alleged to be due has been paid in respect of the holding for which it is claimed for the year immediately preceding the period during which it is claimed, or that the tenant has agreed by a written engagement which is still in force to pay rent at the rate claimed.

11. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to apply to suits for rent at enhanced rates.

12. Notwithstanding anything contained in Act X of 1859, or in the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, the tenure of any ryot having a right of occupancy shall be liable to sale in execution of a decree against such ryot for an arrear of rent.

13. All ryots having rights of occupancy are required to register in the sheristah of the zemindar, or superior tenant to whom the rents of their lands are payable, all transfers of their tenures by sale, agreement, or otherwise, which have been made after the commencement of this Act. Every zemindar or superior tenant is required to admit to registry and otherwise give effect to all transfers of whole tenures when made in good faith; and no ryot claiming a right of occupancy which has accrued after the commencement of this Act shall be entitled to prefer his claim unless the transfer of the tenure has been registered under this section.

14. Fees at the rate of two per cent. on the annual rent of the interest transferred may be levied by the zemindar or superior tenant on the registry under this Act of any transfer: provided that no fee shall exceed one hundred rupees.

15. In the execution of any decree for arrears of rent due in respect of the tenure of a ryot having a right of occupancy, if satisfaction of the judgment cannot be obtained by execution against the right of occupancy or the person or the movable property of the debtor within the district within which the suit was instituted, the judgment-creditor may apply for execution against any immovable property belonging to such debtor.

Sections substituted for sections 44, 45, 46, and 47 of Act VIII of 1869.

16. For sections 44, 45, 46, and 47 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, the following sections shall be substituted:—

“44. In any suit hereafter to be brought for rent under the provisions of this Act, if it shall appear to the Court that the defendant has, without reasonable or probable cause, neglected or refused to pay the amount due by him, and that he has not, before the institution of the suit, tendered such amount to the plaintiff or his duly authorized agent, or in case of the refusal of the plaintiff or such agent to receive the amount tendered, has not deposited such amount with the Collector before the institution of the suit in manner hereinafter mentioned, it shall be lawful for the Court to award to the plaintiff, in addition to the amount decreed for rent and costs, such damages, not exceeding 25 per cent. on the amount of rent decreed, as the Court may think fit. These damages, if awarded, as well as the amount of rent and costs decreed in the suit, shall carry interest at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum from the date of decree until payment thereof.”

The Court may in certain cases award to the plaintiff additional damages not exceeding 25 per cent.

“45. In any suit hereafter to be brought for rent under the provisions of this Act, if it shall appear to the Court that the plaintiff has instituted the suit against the defendant without reasonable or probable cause, or that the defendant had before the institution of the suit duly deposited with the Collector, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, the full amount which the Court shall find to have been due to the plaintiff at the date of such deposit, it shall be lawful for the Court to award to the defendant, by way of compensation, such sum, not exceeding 25 per cent. on the whole amount claimed by the plaintiff, as the Court may think fit; and such sum, with interest at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum until payment thereof, shall be recoverable from the plaintiff in like manner as sums ordered to be paid by decrees of such Court.”

The Court may award compensation not exceeding 25 per cent. on the amount sued for to a defendant improperly sued.

“46. If any under-tenant or ryot shall at the māl cutcherry for the receipt of rents, or other place where the rents of the land or other immovable property held or cultivated by him are usually payable, tender payment of what he shall consider to be the full amount of rent due from him at the date of the tender to the zemindar or other person in receipt of the rent of such land; and if the amount so tendered shall not be accepted, and a receipt in full shall not be forthwith granted, it shall be lawful for the under-tenant or ryot, without any suit having been instituted against him, to deposit within ten days from the date of the tender such amount with the Collector of the district to the credit of the zemindar or other person aforesaid; and such deposit shall, so far as the under-tenant or ryot, and all persons claiming through or under him, are concerned, in all respects operate as, and have the full effect of, a payment then made by the under-tenant or ryot of the amount deposited to such zemindar or other person.”

Under-tenant or ryot may, after tender, &c., pay into Court, without any action being brought against him, what he admits to be due to his zemindar, &c.

Payment into Court to have effect of payment to zemindar or other person entitled.

“47. Such deposit shall be received by the Collector on the application of the under-tenant or ryot, or his agent, made in writing, and on the under-tenant or ryot, or his agent, making a declaration in the form, or as nearly as circumstances will admit, in the form set forth in the Schedule (A) hereto annexed, and the Collector shall give a receipt for the same under his seal. If the declaration shall contain any averment which the person making the declaration shall know or believe to be false, or shall not know or believe to be true, such person shall be subject to punishment according to the law for the time being in force for the punishment of giving or fabricating false evidence. Upon receiving the money so deposited, the Collector shall issue a notice to the person to whose credit it has been deposited in the form set forth in the Schedule (B) hereto annexed; and such notice shall be served by the Collector without the payment of any fee, either upon the person to whom it is addressed, or upon his naib, gomastah, or other agent; and in the absence of any such agent, it shall be served by sticking up a copy of the same in the Collector's Court, and another copy upon the māl cutcherry for the receipt of rents, or other place where the rents are usually paid for the land in respect of which the money has been deposited. If the person to whom such notice is issued, or his duly authorized agent, shall appear and apply that the money in deposit be paid to him, it shall be immediately made over to him.”

Proceedings on making a payment into Court and drawing out the money.

17. The Court may, when passing a decree for arrears of rent, on the oral application of the decree-holder, order immediate execution thereof either against the person, or the movable property, or the right of occupancy of the judgement-debtor.

Execution may issue on verbal application of decree-holder.

18. No order for the sale of a right of occupancy shall be made in execution of a decree passed in any suit for arrears of rent when a warrant of execution has been previously issued in the same suit against the person or movable property of the judgement-debtor, so long as such warrant remains in force.

Right of occupancy not to be sold so long as warrant against person or movable property remains in force.

Sections substituted for section 21 of Act X of 1859 and section 22 of Act VIII of 1869.

19. For section 21, Act X of 1859, and section 22 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, the following section shall be substituted:—

“When a decree is passed for any arrears of rent, whether due at the end of the year or not, and the plaintiff has included in his plaint a prayer for the ejection of the defendant, such defendant shall be liable to be ejected from the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the amount of the decree, together with interest and costs of suit, be paid into Court within fifteen days from the date of the decree: provided that no ryot having a right of occupancy, or holding under a pottah the term of which has not expired, shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree or order under the provisions of this Act.”

20. Notwithstanding anything contained in Act X of 1859, or the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, all crops or products declared liable to distraint under those Acts shall be liable to distraint whether they belong to the person from whom the arrear of rent is due or to any under-tenant of such person, and no such under-tenant shall institute a suit to try the right to the possession of such crops or products, or to recover damages for the distress and sale of the same under sections 139 or 141 of Act X of 1859, or under sections 96 or 97 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869; but such under-tenant may deduct the value of the crops and products belonging to him which have been so distrained from the rent due from him to such person as aforesaid, or may recover the same by suit from such person.

21. The powers given in this Act to the Court shall be exercised by the Collector in districts where Act X of 1859 is still in force.

22. This Act shall be read with, and taken as part of, Act X of 1859, where that Act is in force, and of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, where the last-named Act is in force.

No. 3060, dated Calcutta, the 11th December 1878.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Revenue Department,
To—The Secy. to the Govt. of India, Dept. of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce.

WITH Mr. Reynolds' letter No. 503 of the 22nd February last, the Lieutenant-Governor laid before the Government of India the draft of a Bill to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent. This was a measure the grounds of proposing which had been fully explained to the Government of India in a previous letter, No. 945 of the 12th April 1877; and the Lieutenant-Governor had hoped that in giving his consent to the preparation of such a Bill,* the Governor-General in Council had been convinced of its necessity and of the pressing call which existed for its very early enactment. No reply has, however, been received to the communication of February last, and, so far as this Government is aware, no steps have yet been taken for the introduction of the Bill in the Legislative Council of the Governor-General. This Government is pledged to very early legislation on the subject of increased facilities for the recovery of rents. The policy of Government has been to throw on the landholder the responsibility of collecting the cesses and taxes which have of late been imposed on the agricultural classes: and in introducing these measures, the Lieutenant-Governor has promised from time to time to pass an Act for the purpose above referred to. It is only just and reasonable that this should be done. Unfortunately the Local Council is held now to have no power to deal with such matters.

* In Mr. Batten's letter No. 316, dated 28th April 1877.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor, while regretting the delay that has taken place in dealing with a measure which is anxiously looked for by the whole landed interest in Bengal, has taken advantage of it to elicit further opinions upon the details of the Bill as laid before the Government of India, and further discussion of one important question of principle, referred to in paragraph 6 of Mr. Reynolds' letter of the 22nd February, viz., the propriety of making the occupancy tenure generally transferable by sale or otherwise.

3. Taking the last-mentioned matter first, I am directed to forward, for submission to the Government of India, a copy of a letter addressed to the British Indian Association, and of that on re-consideration the majority of the Association are disposed to agree with the view taken by the Lieutenant-Governor, and by almost every officer of Government who has been consulted on the subject, that the occupancy tenure might be made generally transferable with advantage both to the ryot and the zemindars, provided the actual transfers be restricted to members of the cultivating class. The Association naturally view the question chiefly from the point of view of the landlord, and therefore devote a considerable amount of preliminary argument to minimising the strength of the cultivator's position before the passing of Act X of 1859, and the extent and value of the local custom which already recognizes in very many districts the transferability of the occupancy right. The Lieutenant-Governor does not propose to follow them into either of these arguments, on the first of which there always have been, and probably always will be, great and irreconcilable differences of opinion, while the contention involved in the second is sufficiently met for present purposes by the testimony of the local officers, embodied in the Board's letter of the 25th October 1877, already quoted.

No. 250T, dated 18th May 1878.

4. In paragraph 9 of their letter the Association urge with great fairness the considerations which toll in favour of the legal recognition of the rights of transfer, and express themselves in favour of such a recognition on condition that the transferee shall always by law be a person who will cultivate the land either with his own hands or by hired labour. The Lieutenant-Governor has always recognized the danger of allowing the occupancy tenures to pass into the hands of non-cultivating middlemen or into those of the zemindar himself. In connection with this part of the question the Association point out, in paragraph 10 of their letter, that, under the present Rent Law, as interpreted by the courts, the practice of subletting for rent by the occupancy ryot has grown up and is extending. The sub-tenant of such a ryot has no rights, though he has often all the risk and all the labour of cultivation, and the occupancy ryot becomes really, where such sub-tenants exist, a mere middleman or petty talookdar. The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that the law on this point should be amended, and should only recognize as a ryot the man who, paying rent for his holding, either cultivates the soil with his own hands, or with the assistance of his hired labourers, or who, while paying rent himself for his land, sublets a part or the whole of it in such manner as that he still retains a direct risk and interest in the outturn of the crop. (This last provision seems necessary to meet the case of ryots having no capital, or where the widow of a ryot is left with a young family unfit to work themselves and too poor to pay for labour. Such a sub-tenant of a ryot is in fact only a hired labourer receiving a deferred wage in kind.) No undertenant subletting his lands at a fixed rent, to be paid irrespective of vicissitudes of season, should be looked upon as a ryot. Only cultivating ryots as above defined should be able to acquire occupancy rights. Transfers of occupancy tenures should only be recognized when the transferee is, or consents to become, a ryot of this class, and his rights should depend on his continuing to hold that position. The sub-tenant of a middleman, or of any ryot who converts himself into a middleman, should always be able to acquire occupancy rights so long as he remains a cultivator in the sense above described. The Lieutenant-Governor would in fact forbid all subletting for rent by an occupancy ryot without the consent of the zemindar or other superior landlord. If an occupancy ryot sublets his whole tenure without such consent, he should be held to have transferred it absolutely. If he sublets part of it, he should be held to have transferred his rights in that part of it; but as the landlord should not be bound to recognize any division of the rent of an entire holding, the transferee in this case would in effect become a co-parcener of the original ryot, unless the zemindar consented to admit him to separate registration. If an occupancy ryot sublets with the consent of the zemindar, he should be held to have become a middleman; but some provision of law is required to protect him from ejection and to determine the rent which he should pay, this being necessarily something less than the full, fair and equitable rates demandable from an occupancy ryot. (The absence of any definite rule in the Rent Law for enhancing the rents of middlemen is a source of constant inconvenience to superior landlords.) The last thing necessary to protect and establish the occupancy tenure is that the zemindar himself should be barred from absorbing ryotee lands into his own seer, khamar, or nij-jote.

5. The Lieutenant-Governor would strongly urge upon the Government of India the advisability of taking up seriously this question of making occupancy tenures transferable in Bengal and Behar. The only districts in which it might be undesirable to recognize such a right are the Sonthal Pergunnahs and similar tracts, where it is, for political reasons, necessary to exclude Bengali or alien settlers. Elsewhere the measure would be a boon to the cultivators, and would in the end benefit the landlords. It seems to the Lieutenant-Governor the only way in which to secure any real and permanent improvement of the status of the cultivating classes from which Bengal derives all her wealth. What is much required in Bengal and Behar is a well-defined tenant-right, under which the actual cultivator shall have a direct interest in the improvement of the land, while the landlord has, at the same time, every facility given him for collecting his just dues and sharing in the unearned increment of the profits of the soil.

6. In paragraphs 12 seq. of their letter the Association state the objections that are still urged against the proposal by a small section of their body. The objectors contend that the occupancy ryot has practically even now a permanent tenure, being liable to eviction only if he fail to pay his rent, while his tenure cannot be sold-up for ordinary debts. The result of the proposed recognition of the transferable nature of the tenure would be, in their opinion, that the ryots would be sold-up for debt by the mahajuns and converted into mere labourers, their lands being taken over and worked through hired labour either by the mahajuns themselves, or by indigo-planters, or by the zemindars.

7. There are various considerations which seem to the Lieutenant-Governor to rob these objections of much of their apparent force. The transferability of his tenure will in the first place improve the financial position of the ryot, enable him to raise money when he requires it on easier terms, and go some way towards delivering him from his present state of indebtedness. He will have some security to offer which will enable him to get into the market and obtain on favourable terms such advances as are at times absolutely necessary for his maintenance, and will thus be relieved of the exorbitant conditions on which he now has to borrow from his landlord or the mahajun. He will, in any case, be no more at the mercy of his landlord than he is at present, for, as the law now stands, if he is so overwhelmed with debt as to be unable to meet the landlord's demand, he can be evicted without receiving anything whatever for the right which he loses; while, if his tenure were transferable, he would get something which might perhaps set him free of debt altogether, and enable him to start again in some other pursuit or in some other village. On the other hand, the encouragement which would be given to a thrifty and judicious ryot by an improvement in his status and position, and the introduction into the cultivating class of men who having learnt carefulness in trade wish to acquire rights in land, would be decidedly advantageous to the country at large. The idea that large mahajuns and indigo-planters would take up ryottee tenures generally, and work them through hired labour, appears to the Lieutenant-Governor to be very far-fetched. If the definitions by which it is above proposed to limit the meaning to be attached to the term occupancy ryot be accepted, this danger would be practically non-existent. The moment a planter or mahajun began to take rent from a cultivator, the latter would begin to acquire occupancy rights; and it would be perfectly impossible, as a general rule, for any large capitalist to work to a profit by means of hired labour lands scattered all over an estate or district. Planters, moreover, do not care to undertake general cereal cultivation on an extensive scale. Their one object is to have a power of selecting lands fit for indigo, and they would get this on easier terms by dealing with a well-to-do peasantry, independent of the zemindars, than by taking over the whole of the ryots' lands, and being compelled to work the whole through hired agency, or on the system of sharing the risks of seasons. But it is urged that the zemindars themselves would buy up the occupancy tenures in order to convert the ryots into tenants-at-will. This supposition is not, however, warranted by the facts of experience. Zemindars can even now, if they choose, prevent the accrual of occupancy rights and evict defaulting occupancy ryots, replacing them by tenants-at-will holding under special written agreements so framed as to bar the accrual of occupancy ryots. But they seldom ever dream of doing so. A zemindar does not object to substantial permanent tenants, provided it is possible to enhance, and easy to collect, their rents. (Hence it is that transfers of occupancy tenures are in fact already so generally recognized.) A zemindar buys up any permanent tenures held at fixed rents that he can, because it is his interest to do so, but he has not the same motive for resuming mere occupancy tenures. Again, if it is clearly laid down that land formerly or usually let on ryottee tenure cannot be incorporated with a zemindar's nij-fote, khamar, or seer, the ryot to whom a resumed occupancy tenure is let will begin at once to acquire fresh occupancy rights, and will generally be allowed to perfect these without interference on the part of the zemindar.

8. It has been suggested above that an occupancy ryot might be allowed to cultivate his lands not merely with his own hands, or by ordinary hired labour, but also on the system of sharing the risks of season with a sub-tenant, always provided that he did not take a fixed rent from such sub-tenant. It was said that the sub-tenant of a ryot might be in fact looked upon as a hired labourer, receiving for his labour deferred payment in kind, and having no rights of his own in the soil. In some parts of Behar the zemindar or his subordinate talookdars and thikadars often take rent from their ryots on the dana-bundee or bhatai system of sharing the actual crop. It might be feared that, under this system, there would be some danger of all ryots being looked upon as mere sub-tenants of the lowest middleman, who might claim therefore to be regarded as absorbing the occupancy ryot's rights. There would, however, be no difficulty practically in discriminating between a ryot and a middleman under these circumstances. The first person in the descending chain of sub-infodation who pays a rent either in cash or kind, which is assessed field by field, is the ryot who may acquire occupancy rights, and who may divide his own share of the produce with any other, without injuring his own position as the ryot recognized by law.

9. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that the weight of opinion is entirely in favour of the suggestions made by the majority of the Association, which, as already noticed, have the strong support of the Board, and of nearly all the Commissioners and district officers in Bengal. I am to submit with this letter a draft of those modifications in the Rent Law and in the draft Bill now before the Government of India, which would seem to meet the foregoing proposals. They are of course in their present shape merely tentative, and have not been subjected to any professional scrutiny. But this appeared a convenient way of exhibiting the general drift of the suggestions now laid before the Government of India.

10. Coming now to the further detailed criticisms of the provisions of the Bill laid before the Government of India in February last, I am directed to forward a copy of a letter from the British Indian Association, of the 26th August last,* and of a letter from the Board, No. 796 of the 7th November,* commenting upon the same, and to submit the following remarks of the Lieutenant-Governor upon the points raised in this correspondence:—

- (1.) Section 1 of the Bill.—The Association object to the provision enabling the Lieutenant-Governor to extend the Bill to such districts as he may think fit. The law should, they urge, be universally applicable. The section was framed in this way, because it is doubtful whether the provisions of the Bill relating to the summary recovery of rents are altogether suited to the circumstances of Behar. The question of legislating specially for rent questions in Behar is now under the consideration of this Government, and the Lieutenant-Governor agrees with the Board that the section should stand as at present framed. If the Bill becomes law, it will certainly be extended to all districts, to the circumstances of which it is really applicable.
- (2.) Section 2, clause 1.—The Bill provides for monthly instalments of rent and quarterly latest days of payment. The Association would save the terms of written agreements as to instalments. The Lieutenant-Governor agrees with the Board that it is of great importance to maintain the principle of the Bill in its entirety. The object of the Bill is twofold, to give the zemindar increased facilities for recovery of rents, but at the same time to limit his opportunities of harassing his ryots by suits. The quarterly accrual of arrears is a cardinal point in the Bill. In the close of this section it is provided that when interest in monthly instalments is stipulated for by written agreement, the Court shall, on plaintiff's application, add this to the penal interest awarded under the Bill on unpaid quarterly arrears. The Association desire that the zemindar may be allowed to include such interest in his plaint, and there can, as the Board say, be no objection to this so long as the items of his account are clearly set forth and distinguished.
- (3.) Section 16 of the Bill makes the Collector, instead of the civil court, the recipient of deposits of rent. With reference to sections 45 and 47 of Act VIII, which are modified by this section, the Association urge that the date before which the ryot must make the tender to his landlord should be fixed, and that then a limitation should be put on the time within which he must subsequently make the deposit, and also on the time within which the Collector must issue notice. They would allow no ryot to plead a tender made after the due date of the quarterly instalment, would recognise no deposit unless made within ten days of that; and would cause notice to be served on the zemindar within five days of deposit. Failing compliance with all this, the landlord should not, they say, be liable to damages. The sections, as they stand, compel the tenant to deposit within ten days from the date of tender, and tender may be made any time before the institution of the suit. The Board are disposed to make the concession sought for by the Association, extending, however, to 12 days, the term to be allowed for service on the zemindar of the notice of deposit. The Lieutenant-Governor has no objection to these proposals. He does not, however, agree with the Board in their further suggestion to allow deposits at the Moonsiff's and other civil courts. It was the opinion of all consulted in framing the Bill that it was better that all deposits should be made at the Collectorate. No fee for the service of notices of deposits is charged under the existing law, and there is no necessity for imposing one, as suggested by the Board.
- (4.) Section 4 restricts the special procedure of the Bill to suits for arrears not more than 12 months due. The Association propose to extend it to the full three years of the Rent Act, i. e., to make it apply to all arrears of rent, and the Board are inclined to agree with them. The Lieutenant-Governor, however, adheres to the principle of the Bill. The object of the Bill is to compel zemindars to more method and smartness in the management of their estates, and to bring their disputes with their ryots to speedy issue and decision. This may bring more suits into court at first, but it will reduce litigation hereafter. When ryots know that they must pay up quickly, the chances are that they will so pay. Any conflict of limitation between the wording of this Bill and the Rent Act can be overcome by proper drafting.

- (5.) Section 6.—The Association next object to the power of the court, under special circumstances, to set aside a decree already made. They would only allow appeal after deposit of the amount of decree. The Board very rightly support in this respect the provisions of the section as it stands. These are absolutely necessary to prevent injustice.
- (6.) Section 7.—This section provides that no appeal will lie until the judgment-debtor deposits the amount of decree with cost. The Association ask if the plaintiff is not to have a right of appeal against the decree or order? It was of course not intended to take away this right. The drafting of the section should be amended.
- (7.) Section 10.—It is here provided that rent at the rate claimed must be shown either to have been paid in the year preceding the period of claim, or to have been excepted by written agreement. The Association urge that difficulty would arise if the rent of the year previous had not been collected, and would prefer that the annual rent, as determined by the collection papers of three years, should be made the criterion. The Bill is meant to help the recovery of rents where rates are undisputed. Actual payment by the tenant of the rate claimed, or his written engagement to pay it, must, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks, be insisted on. But the section may be modified so as to allow the zemindar to sue if he can show that the tenant had actually paid at the rate claimed any time within the three years preceding the institution of the suit.
- (8.) Section 11.—The Association ask that provision should be made authorising the Court in suits for arrears at enhanced rates to decree immediate payment of the current (and admitted) rent to mitigate the effect of delays caused by appeals with reference to the enhanced rate. The Board support the Association's proposal, and the Lieutenant-Governor has no objection to its adoption.
- (9.) Section 13.—The Association propose a procedure for registration of transfers of tenures, and their proposals are reasonable. The Lieutenant-Governor recommends that their suggestions be incorporated in the Bill.
- (10.) Section 19.—The Association point out correctly enough that the proviso to this section is, as the section has been altered, surplusage. But the proviso should be re-enacted as a separate section. It is a most important right of the occupancy ryot.
- (11.) Lastly, the Association say that the Bill does not provide a procedure to be followed if the defendant takes the plea of non-service of summons. If the defendant does not appear, and service is proved to have been made, the Court, under section 4, will give a decree ex parte. If the defendant comes in afterwards and says no summons was served, the onus is on him to show this before the Court can take action under section 6. The Board's suggestions upon this head, in paragraph 13 of their letter, have the Lieutenant-Governor's concurrence. As regards the mode of service of summons, the Lieutenant-Governor has no objection to the proposals made by the Association in the last paragraph of their letter.

11. I am to take this opportunity of suggesting that section 3 of the Bill should be amended so as to make it necessary for the receipts to specify the yearly rent: and that the signature of the person to whom the receipt is given should be taken on the counterfoil, if he is able to write. Again, if the transfer of occupancy tenures is not to be recognized generally, section 13 should be worded so as to show that the zemindar is then only bound to register transfers when valid by custom or made in sales under the Act. If ejection is to be the penalty for non-payment of arrears, some provision is also necessary with reference to crops on the ground. The outgoing tenant should be declared entitled to cut the crop when ripe, and to retain the surplus after payment of the landlord's demand.

Draft of modifications in the Rent Law (Bengal Act VIII of 1869) and in the draft Bill submitted with Bengal Government's letter No. 503, dated 22nd February 1878, to meet suggestions in Bengal Government's letter No. 3060, dated 11th December 1878.

I.—For section 6 of Act VIII (B.C.) of 1869 the following sections shall be substituted:—

VIA.—Every ryot who shall have held land for a period of twelve years, and cultivated the same either with his own hands or by means of hired labourers, shall have a right of occupancy in the land so held and cultivated by him, whether it be held under pottah or not, so long as he pays the rent payable on account of the same.

EXPLANATION.—A person to whom the ryot makes over a portion of the produce by way of payment for his labour in cultivating the whole or a portion of the ryot's lands is a 'hired labourer' within the meaning of this section. A ryot who pays a portion of the gross produce by way of rent to the zemindar or other person from whom he holds his lands is not a 'hired labourer' within the meaning of this section.

VIB.—The holding of the father or other person from whom the ryot inherits shall be deemed to be the holding of the ryot for purposes of the last preceding section, and the tenure of a ryot who has acquired a right of occupancy shall be heritable, and transferable by sale, gift, or otherwise, provided, in case of transfer, that the whole tenure is transferred, and that the transferee is a person who will bond fide cultivate the lands either with his own hands or by means of hired labourers in the manner contemplated by the last preceding section.

VIC.—After the commencement of this Act no ryot having a right of occupancy shall, without the consent in writing of the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder to whom his rent is payable, sublet any portion of his holding to a sub-tenant at a fixed rent payable either in cash or kind, or make over any part of his interest in the produce of such holding otherwise than by way of payment for assistance rendered in the cultivation of the same.

Any ryot having a right of occupancy, who shall, after the commencement of this Act, sublet the whole or any portion of his holding to a sub-tenant without the consent as aforesaid of the zemindar or superior tenure-holder, shall be deemed to have transferred all his rights in the lands sublet to the said sub-tenant.

VII.—If, after the commencement of this Act, the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder consents to the sub-letting of a portion or the whole of the holding of a ryot having a right of occupancy, the sub-tenant, being the actual cultivator, shall begin to acquire rights of occupancy in the lands sublet from the date of such sub-letting. The ryot who sublets the lands shall be deemed to have become the holder of an intermediate tenure, and shall cease to enjoy any rights of occupancy in the lands sublet, but he shall not be liable to be ejected by the zemindar or superior tenure-holder otherwise than for non-payment of arrears of rent, and in execution of a decree or order of Court; and his rent shall not be liable to be enhanced above a sum which shall, in default of specific agreement to the contrary, in no case be less than 10 per cent. below the fair and equitable rates payable for the same land by a ryot having a right of occupancy.

VIE.—Any ryot having a right of occupancy, who may have sublet the whole or any portion of his holding to a sub-tenant before the commencement of this Act, may terminate such sub-tenancy by six months' notice given at any time within one year from the date of the said commencement, and no sub-tenant holding from before the date of the commencement of this Act shall begin to acquire rights of occupancy under the last preceding section until after the expiry of one year from the date of such commencement. After the expiry of one year from the said date, and in default of any such notice, the provisions of sections VID and VIE shall apply to the case of such sub-tenants.

VIF.—No rights of occupancy shall be acquired by any ryot in khamar, nij-jote or seer lands belonging to the proprietor of the estate or tenure and let by him on lease for a term or year by year. But no lands which have been held by a ryot having a right of occupancy shall on any pretext be amalgamated with the khamar, nij-jote or seer lands of the proprietor of the estate or tenure so as to prevent the acquisition of a right of occupancy by any ryot to whom they may subsequently be relet.

II.—For section 13 of the draft Bill, submitted to the Government of India in February 1878, the following sections should be substituted:—

XIIIA.—All ryots having rights of occupancy are required to register in the sherishta of the zemindar or superior tenant to whom their rents are payable all transfers of their tenures by sale, gift, or otherwise, as well as all successions thereto and divisions among heirs in cases of inheritance, and every zemindar or superior tenant is required to admit to registry and otherwise give effect to all transfers of whole tenures when made in good faith, and to all such successions and divisions. Provided that no zemindar or superior tenant shall be required to admit to registry or give effect to any division or distribution of the rent payable on account of any such tenure, nor shall any such division or distribution of rent be valid and binding without the consent in writing of the zemindar or superior tenant.

XIIIB.—All ryots claiming to have rights of occupancy in virtue of transfers made before the commencement of this Act are required to register the same within six months from the date of the passing of this Act, and the provisions of the last preceding section shall apply to all such transfers.

No. 250T., dated Darjeeling, the 18th May 1878.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in charge of the Revenue and General Departments,

To—The Secretary, British Indian Association.

In your letter No. 62 of the 8th October last, objections are taken to making a ryot's occupancy tenure generally transferable, on the ground that to do so would "vest the ryot with the status of co-proprietor;" but it is proposed by the Association to legalize the sale of occupancy tenures in satisfaction of decrees for rent at the option of the zemindar; and it is suggested that, where a zemindar does adopt this remedy, a tenure once so sold should be declared to have become a transferable tenure. I am to ask for a further expression of the views of the Association in connection with this question.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor will not enter into a discussion of the theory enunciated by the Association, to the effect that the creation of the occupancy tenure by Act X of 1859 was an encroachment upon the rights of the landlords under the permanent settlement, though he considers this open to question, both historically and legally: but he desires me to point out that, as a matter of fact, the transferable character of these tenures has been affirmed by local custom in very many districts; nor has it ever been held or alleged that such a transfer implies the recognition in the ryot of any rights amounting, as the Association put it, to co-proprietorship. The tenure is transferred as an occupancy tenure, and the landlord has the same remedies against the new tenant, and the same powers of enhancement that he had against the old.

3. The Lieutenant-Governor does not understand that the Association propose to interfere with local custom where this has recognized the transferable character of occupancy tenures; but they propose to limit the recognition in other cases to tenures sold in execution at the request of the zemindars. Now, apart from the fact that the existence in many places of a local custom of wider application than the direct provisions of the law is likely to lead to conflicts of evidence in the courts, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks that the suggestions of the Association are open to question from another point of view. It is probable that in most instances occupancy tenures sold in execution of decrees will be bought in by the decree-holder, the zemindar himself. In that case the tenure would practically lose its characteristics and lapse into the residuum of the zemindar's "khamar" or "nij-jote" being broken up and relet in portions on such terms as the zemindar chose to exact. A large landlord persistently following out the policy of buying up such tenures would probably very soon change the whole face of his property, and reduce his tenantry generally to the condition of mere tenants-at-will. The Lieutenant-Governor is not satisfied that this is a policy which the Government can properly be asked to support. In many parts of the country the consequences might be serious both for Government and the zemindars.

4. On the other hand, it does not appear that the general recognition of transferability of the occupancy tenure would have any injurious effect upon the position of the zemindars, while it would certainly tend to improve the condition of their tenantry, and to give them a greater interest in the improvement of their lands. The Lieutenant-Governor can imagine nothing so calculated to improve the system of cultivation and the value of an estate as permanency and security of the ryot's tenure. The zemindars fully appreciate the value of security of their own tenure, and justly attribute to it the most beneficial results, but appear to be unable to see the advantage of extending it to the lower grades of holding. The provision that all such transfers must be registered in the zemindar's sherista, and that no transfer of a fractional part of a jote need be recognized, would protect the landlord's legitimate rights, while, as before remarked, the transfer would carry with it all the liabilities and incidents of the occupancy tenure.

5. If, after securing transferability of tenure to the occupancy ryot (a right which he already possesses by custom in many parts of the country), provision were made in the law to prevent his converting himself into a mere middleman, and for strictly regulating the character of the subletting to which an occupancy ryot must limit himself, it would seem that a great improvement would be effected in the law of tenant right in Bengal, such as would tend to raise the value of property and increase the landlord's security for his rent.

6. I am to ask that the Association will reconsider the last part of their letter under notice with reference to the foregoing remarks.

Dated Calcutta, the 20th November 1878.

From—The HON'BLE MAHARAJAH JOTENDRO MOHUN TAGORE, BAHADOOR, Honorary Secretary to the British Indian Association,

To—The Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal, Revenue Department.

I HAVE the honor to acknowledge, by desire of the Committee of the British Indian Association, the receipt of your letter No. 250T, dated the 18th May last, inviting a further expression of the views of the Association in connection with the question of the transferability of the occupancy tenure.

2. The Committee have carefully considered the question, and desire me to submit the following in reply.

3. As His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor does not wish to enter into a discussion of "the theory enunciated by the Association, to the effect that the creation of the occupancy tenure by Act X of 1859 was an encroachment upon the rights of the landlord under the Permanent Settlement Regulations," the Committee will abstain from it, as such discussion is not calculated to lead to any practical result. His Honor is, however, pleased to remark that the theory is "open to question both historically and legally." On this point the Committee venture to think that it is sufficient for them to invite the attention of His Honor to the opinions recorded by eminent judges of the High Court and revenue officers, who take objection to section 6 of Act X of 1859 creating the occupancy right, because, in the words of Sir Barnes Peacock, it "interferes with the just rights of the zemindars, at least in the permanently-settled districts, by vesting rights of occupancy in the ryots which had no previous existence."

4. It is true that under section 105, Act X of 1859, and section 59, Act VIII of 1869 (B.C.), an under-tenure, "which by the title-deeds or the custom of the country is transferable by sale," may be attached and sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent. But the "custom" referred to was what existed before the year 1859, and what could not fairly be construed to apply to the occupancy tenure, inasmuch as the occupancy ryot, as defined by Act X of 1859, according to high judicial and revenue authorities, had no previous existence. There could have been no "custom" when the substantive right to which it relates had no existence. The "custom" had reference to khoodkast kudmee ryots, or to tenures of hereditary resident ryots, which were recognized prior to the permanent settlement. It is true that tenures other than khoodkast used also to change hands before Act X of 1859 came into operation; but that practice obtained only through the sufferance of zemindars. These did not object to such transfer, inasmuch as they had the power to oust any tenant after due notice, except khoodkast ryots, istomrardars and lease-holders. The transferability of tenure, so far as it obtained before 1859, did not thus affect the rights of the landlord. In 1859 the legislature, with a view to benefit the cultivating classes, created for the first time the occupancy tenure; it was declared heritable, but not transferable; but owing to conflicting decisions of the courts as to the significance of the "custom" adverted to above, the original intentions of the legislature have been departed from, and the transfer of the occupancy tenure is proceeding apace. A custom to have the validity of law, the Committee respectfully submit, ought to be equitable in its nature and one of a long standing to have the assent of the class or community which it affects, and to be of such authority as not to admit of dispute. When the occupancy tenure was for the first time created by Act X of 1859, the antecedent condition of "custom" could not apply to it. Whatever the practice in some districts, it has not had the sanction of a sufficiently long time, which would command public respect; it has frequently been the subject of dispute; it has in not a few cases been recognized under special conditions, such as the payment of a consideration to the landlord or some particular advantage to him.

5. It has been repeatedly ruled by the highest court in the land that the occupancy right is heritable, but not transferable, except under special agreement. The judgment of the Full Bench of the High Court, Surendranarayan Roy versus Eshan Chunder Sen, is, the Committee submit, conclusive. As Chief Justice Couch remarks—"It is a right to be enjoyed by the person who holds or cultivates and pays the rent, and has done so for a period of twelve years. It does not speak of his acquiring a right which he might, having acquired it, transfer or make use of as a subject of property; but it seems intended to secure to a ryot, who has cultivated or held for twelve years as continuance of his cultivation or holding as long as he pays the rent." Where an individual landlord has given his consent to the transfer, it is his own act which cannot bind others. Even where a court, having regard to particular circumstances, has judicially recognized such transfer, that decision, the Committee respectfully submit, cannot alter the positive law on the subject.

6. Such being the case, the stress laid upon custom in regard to the transferability of the occupancy tenure is necessarily not well grounded. At the same time, the Committee admit that the practice of the sale of the occupancy right is extending from various causes, that is to say, from the negligence of the landlord, collusion with the zemindar's amlah, imperfect evidence as to "custom," and conflicting decisions of the courts. In this way many middlemen have taken possession of occupancy tenures, and the decisions of the High Court recognizing the subletting of such tenures, to which the Committee will refer immediately, have facilitated the creation of middlemen with occupancy rights.

7. The uncertainty which at present exists on the subject, owing to conflicting decisions of the courts and the haziness surrounding the "custom" relied upon, is a source of insecurity for both the landlord and tenant, and it is therefore highly desirable, as His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor seems to think, to remove that uncertainty; and it would, they submit, be consistent with the original intentions of the legislature, and just to both parties, to restrict the transfer of the occupancy tenure to the cultivating class. The object of the legislature in creating the occupancy right was to protect the actual cultivators of the soil from wholesale or arbitrary eviction; it provided that, so long as the ryot with the right of occupancy paid the rent, he would not be liable to ejectment from his tenure, nor to enhancement of his rent, except under certain conditions specified in the Act. The position of the occupancy ryot was thus assured, and the intention of the legislature to protect the cultivating class was fulfilled. Although the legislature, as the Committee believe, did not then contemplate that the occupancy right should be transferable, they are of opinion that, if this concession is to be made, it ought to be strictly confined to the cultivating class for whose sole benefit the right was created. To make it generally transferable would be inconsistent with the intentions of the legislature and detrimental to the interests of both the landlord and tenant.

8. Looking at the question from the landlord's point of view, a general recognition of the right of transfer, it cannot be denied, is open to objection. It will, the Committee submit, be admitted that the landlord ought to have the right to choose his own tenant; but, if the transferability of the occupancy right be legalized, he will be deprived of this inherent right. He might be put to no end of trouble if a wicked tenant should come in. His position as a landlord might be jeopardized by the proposed law. His tenants might combine and set up men of straw, and thus drive him into court in every instance of default. Again, designing persons might give them bad counsel, or take their position by benami transfer, and thus put the landlord to the greatest inconvenience, hardship, loss and trouble. Rival landlords might also play against each other with this weapon.

9. But there are considerations which ought to have due weight with a considerate landlord. There are many circumstances which may compel a ryot to part with his tenure. Providential visitations, ill-health, domestic afflictions, hopeless poverty or prospects of improvement elsewhere, may lead the ryot to think of relinquishing his holding, and if he has not the power of transfer, he loses the value which his tenure undoubtedly possesses. Under the operation of the law as it stands, if he cannot pay rent, he is liable to be ejected. In the case of ejectment he will of course get nothing for the land, but if his right of transfer be recognized, he is sure to get something. Then, again, under the law of inheritance, the holding may be sub-divided into small fragments, so much so that it will not pay any one to cultivate each small fragment; for when it is remembered that the area of an occupancy tenure generally ranges from 10 to 30 beegahs of land, the sub-division of such small quantity of land under the Indian law of inheritance can hardly leave in one or two generations a sufficient margin to any one shareholder for profitable cultivation. There may in all likelihood be left some member of the family with means and inclination to carry on cultivation, but the lands being infinitesimally sub-divided under the partition law and no separate piece being worth cultivation, even hereditary agriculturists must give up the profession of their forefathers, because the lands so divided could not be transferred and thus made a compact block, not to say that occupancy tenures not being saleable other lands will not be available to him. If the ryot could transfer his right, the evil of the partition law would be avoided. But, in conceding this right, it is necessary that it should be so guarded as not to prove injurious either to the landlord or the tenant. If the transfer were not restricted to the cultivating class, middlemen would come in and take away the land from the cultivating class, which would be a disaster to the country. It might be said that such a restriction would not give the ryot the advantage of an open market. The Committee are of opinion that this advantage may be more imaginary than real, for it is well known that in almost every district there are many ryots who are well-to-do and have acquired capital, and among them there is sure to be competition in the case of the sale of a tenure. This competition is already observable when a settlement of a tenure is made by the landlord. But when the Committee suggest that the transfer should be confined to the cultivating class, they do not mean that persons who are not cultivators at the time of the transfer should be shut out. The condition should be that the transferee should cultivate the land either with his own hands or by hired labour, and that if he does not fulfil that condition, he should forfeit his right to the land. It is said that, if the right of transfer be recognized, money-lenders and persons of that class will take possession of the land; but the Committee cannot conceive what reasonable objection could there be to a money-lender or a small capitalist betaking himself to agriculture. The possession of land always gives a status to the holder among his own class; it is also considered the safest mode of investment of money. A man does not think that he has made some provision for his children if he does not leave some lands to them; and if by the proposed mode of transfer small capitalists could be attracted to the profession of agriculture, the land would certainly rise in value and the country would decidedly gain. By making cultivation a condition of transfer, a direct interest in the improvement of the soil would be created in the tenant. It would stimulate cultivation, and as struggle for existence is becoming keen among the middle classes, perhaps many among them may be induced to invest their small capital in land with a view to maintain themselves by cultivation, which they may carry on with hired labour. A class of gentlemen agriculturists, if the Committee may so express themselves, would thus arise, who would find a fitting scope for their small capital, and would be able to bring their knowledge and intelligence to bear upon the improvement of agriculture. On the other hand, the recognition of the right of transfer, though restricted to the cultivating class, would, as observed above, increase the marketable value of land, and would consequently tend to lower the rate of interest when money might be raised upon it. At present the ryot has to pay a high rate of interest, because the land is not transferable and the crop is hypothecated for rent; but if it be declared transferable, the security will be greater, and the market value of money upon such security will be necessarily lower. And if the rate of interest could be thus affected, a new incentive would be held out to poor agriculturists to borrow money for the improvement of their lands.

10. The Committee have already stated that the conflicting decisions of the courts have been the cause of the uncertainty as to the transferability of the occupancy tenure. The vague wording of the present law has also been a source of much mischief. Thus the law says that "every ryot who shall have cultivated or held for a period of twelve years shall have a right of occupancy;" but the occupancy right has been recognized in many cases in which the ryot does not cultivate the land with his own hand or by hired labourers. This, as the Committee conceive, is a reversal of the order of things contemplated by the legislature in creating the occupancy right. Its object was to confer the right on the cultivating ryot, but the effect of the decisions of the High Court has been that a ryot who has acquired an occupancy right may sublet his tenure, and that, though the actual cultivator may hold it for twenty years, he will not derive the benefit of the law on the principle that two persons possessing the same tenure cannot acquire equal right. The subletting of a tenure, it has been held by the High Court, does not necessarily make a ryot a middleman. A ryot who holds land under cultivation by others holding under him is not a middleman (7, W. R., 7, Ramgopal Ghose versus Luckhynarain Shaha; T. W. R., 15, Hurrolal Thakoor versus Luchmiput Doogar). Again, no right of occupancy is created by a sub-lease from a ryot of occupancy (7, W. R., 81, Moonshee Abdool Jubbar versus Kally Churn Dutt). By holding for twelve years a ryot does not acquire a right of occupancy if the land has been sublet to him for a term, or year by year, by a ryot having a right of occupancy (15, W. R., 469, Nilcomul Sen versus Dannesh Shaik; Gop. No. W. R., Act X, 72, Gilmore versus Surbessaree Dasse; 7, W. R., 114, Hurry Churn Mookerjee versus Jodunath Ghose;..

6, W. R., 168, Ketal Gain versus Nudar Mistree; 18, W. R., 19, Issan Chunder Ghose versus Hurrish Chunder Banerjee; 19, W. R., 95, Unnopoorna Dasse versus Radhamadhub Patra). A ryot with a right of occupancy does not by subletting his land lose his right, nor does the sub-lessee thereby gain the right (9, W. R., 344, Kally Kishen Chatterjee versus Ram Churn Shaha). In other words, subletting of the occupancy tenure is recognized by judge-made law, though the Committee believe that, in creating the occupancy right, nothing was further from the intentions of the legislature than to deprive the zemindar of his just right and to confer it upon middlemen. A ryot who sub-lets his land and lives upon the rent necessarily becomes a middleman, whether the High Court chooses to give him that name or not. It would be, therefore, quite consistent with the original intentions of the legislature if the present complications could be prevented by restricting the transfer of the occupancy right to the cultivating class, as proposed by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

11. While the Committee concur with His Honor that the transfer of the occupancy tenure should be restricted to the cultivating ryot, they consider it highly necessary that the actual cultivator should be accurately defined. The absence of such an accurate definition has, as the Committee have already remarked, been the primary cause of dispute and litigation. The actual cultivator is he who tills the land with his own hands or by hired labour, and has an immediate connection with agriculture and the produce of the soil by taking part in agricultural operations. But the question is—If, the status of the occupancy ryot were defined in this sense would it prevent him from converting himself into a middleman? His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor remarks—"If, after securing transferability of tenure to the occupancy ryot (a right which he already possesses in many parts of the country) provision were made in the law to prevent his converting himself into a mere middleman, and for strictly regulating the character of the subletting to which an occupancy ryot must limit himself, it would seem that a great improvement would be effected in the law of tenant-right in Bengal, such as would tend to raise the value of property and increase the landlord's security for the rent." It is not explained how subletting by an occupancy ryot would be regulated. Should he be allowed to sub-let his tenure and to live upon the rent of his lands and not require to establish his position as an actual cultivator by his immediate connection with the tillage of the soil, either with his own hands or by hired labour, then he would become to all intents and purposes a middleman, and in that case the objections which are taken to the absolute transfer of the occupancy right would remain in full force. Further, the sale of the land would not then be restricted to the cultivating class. The Committee make no doubt that His Honor in framing the law will guard against the possible conversion of the cultivating ryot into a middleman. With proper safeguards the Committee have no objection to the proposal that the transferability of the occupancy tenure, restricted to the cultivating class, should be recognized by law.

12. In submitting these remarks, the Committee deem it due to observe that there are some members of their body who do not subscribe to the above. As the subject is one of vital importance affecting the mass of the population, and as it is surrounded by many practical difficulties, they think it right that both sides of the question should be placed before His Honor. They will therefore give below the views of the minority.

13. If the object of the proposed measure be to hold out to the ryot stimulus to cultivation by conferring on him permanency and security of tenure, that object, the minority maintain, is already attained under the existing law. As the law stands, the occupancy ryot can hold his tenure as long as he wishes, and can transfer it from generation to generation, if he and his successors continue regularly to pay the rent. The liability as to payment or enhancement of rent His Honor does not propose to alter. Even if the transferability of tenure be recognised, the transfer, His Honor remarks, "would carry with it all the liabilities and incidents of the occupancy tenure."

14. Thus the cultivator practically enjoys the advantages of permanency which the decennial settlement assigns to the zemindar only—the one is liable to sale, and the other to eviction, in default of payment of his dues. He has also another advantage which the zemindars would be only too happy to obtain, and that is perfect immunity under the law from sale for debts. His tenure, being non-transferable, cannot be sold either voluntarily or by order of a court. He may be sent to jail, but his tenure remains with his family, and he enjoys the fruits thereof, subject, as His Honor remarks, to "all the liabilities and incidents of the occupancy tenure." By making the tenure saleable, this advantage will be withdrawn from him, and, instead of bettering his condition, he will be deprived of an advantage which cannot but seriously lower his position. The incentive to improved agriculture cannot prove very effectual where the property in the tenure is made more easily liable to transfer than it is now. However indebted ryots may be—and as a matter of fact the majority are indebted—they know that improvements made by them at their own expense in their fields will always remain with them; but by making the tenure saleable, the indebted ryots will know that the benefits derivable by such improvement will most probably go to their creditors, who will sell them out. Doubtless the desire to hold land will induce many to come forward to buy, and by making the tenures transferable more land will be brought to the market to meet their wants; but the permanency which His Honor wishes to bestow refers to the present class of holders and not to outsiders, who are to replace them in the right of occupancy and convert them into mere labourers. Such outsiders might become gentlemen agriculturists and improve the land more effectively than what the present class of ryots can do; but the good cannot be secured without converting the present class of ryots into day-labourers.

15. The other advantage expected from the proposed measure is the increase of the marketable value of the tenure; but this cannot result if the sale be open only to cultivating ryots. Persons who have no capital, and the majority of whom are more or less indebted, cannot possibly bid so high as money-lenders and other propertied classes. There are unquestionably some well-to-do ryots who are able and willing to buy occupancy rights, but their number is small, and they can never compete with capitalists and money-lenders, and sales under the restriction proposed cannot, under any circumstances, realize the full market-value of the tenures. The object can be attained by making the sales open to all classes, and as this is not contemplated, the effect of the proposed change in the law cannot be in the interest of the ryot. He would be exposed to the imminent risk of losing his permanent, heritable, inalienable property, and being reduced to the condition of a tenant-at-will.

16. It would be a serious matter if the proposed law should thus prove an engine for the pauperization of ryots. In this country the land maintains the people; there are so few manufactures or remunerative industries that the bulk of the population depend upon agriculture; the legislature seems to be so well alive to this fact that it has exempted implements of husbandry from attachment from debt, but if the land goes, there will be no room for the employment of those implements. The ryot would be then reduced to the position of day-labourer, or at least kurfa ryot or tenant-at-will—a result much to be regretted. With periodical drought and famine in the land this evil would be greatly intensified. Two consecutive seasons of scarcity or famine would suffice to transfer one-half of the ryots' occupancy tenures to money-lenders, not to say that the lands could never be expected to be so well cultivated by ticca men as they would be by those who had permanent interest in them as occupancy ryots. The Government has lately taken steps to establish a famine insurance fund by imposing new cesses and taxes; but that is intended as a provision for a calamity which may occur at long intervals. Its responsibility, however, will be seriously increased if the people be reduced through the action of the law to a state of chronic pauperism, and that such would be the case the minority greatly apprehended. At present the money-lenders support the ryot in the time of difficulty, knowing that his only security is the crop of the ryot; he advances him money and rice when the ryot has none of his own for his support, provides seed-grain for cultivation, defrays the cost of cultivation, and helps him on through every difficulty till the crops are ripe for division. This aid is extended in many cases to two or three consecutive bad years, and the ryot preserves his self-respect, his homestead, and his field. In Bengal he is rarely driven to seek the support of the Government or of the public in times of scarcity. This money-lender helps him through sheer self-interest to protect what he has already advanced in times of prosperity to enable a ryot to celebrate a marriage or sradh; but remove that self-interest, let the money-lender know that he need not wait for years and make further advances to protect his first venture; let him be but once satisfied that he can sell out a ryot in three months and at once recover his dues, the ryot's doom would at once be sealed. From an owner of a permanent farm he will soon become a pauper. The majority are aware that the sale of occupancy tenure is taking place here and there contrary to the strict interpretation of the law, but they are of opinion that in the interest of the peasantry such sale should be prohibited and not facilitated. A law which would give such facility would necessarily be detrimental to the best interests of society.

17. It has been urged that it would be a hardship to oblige a man to give up his occupancy right when he is incapacitated by providential visitation, ill-health, domestic affliction, helpless poverty, or other causes to enjoy it. As an expression of sentiment, the minority respect the feeling which has prompted this expression of opinion, but legally they fail to see its weight. A right accrues under certain conditions, but the person to whom it accrues is unable from causes utterly unconnected with the right from enjoying it, and, as a matter of course, he must forego it. A man is condemned to three years' imprisonment for some cause or other, and being unable to pay the usual rent is ejected, losing thereby his occupancy right, and the fault in the case is his own, not of another. The misapprehension in the case arises from supposing that there is an inherent right in the soil, which there is not, but which it is proposed to award to him. A man may have a right of passage over another's property, but he leaves his village for his own good, and after twelve years' stay in another village loses his right of way; but no one under the circumstances thinks it a hardship, or insists upon his having the power of selling the right of way. The mistake in such cases arises from confounding a right with property. Similarly, when, the right becomes valueless from extreme partition under the Hindoo law of inheritance, it ceases to be a right worth having, and no hardship whatever is entailed by a person being obliged to forego it. If it is a hardship, it is common to the Hindoo and the Mahomedan communities, and the remedy, if required, lies in changing the law of inheritance. As a matter of fact, however, the difficulty is overcome by joint cultivation, until by lapses the whole field or large tracts of it come back to the possession of single owners.

18. Supposing that the right of transfer were restricted to the cultivating class, the question is—how could the difficulties which beset the measure be fairly avoided? In the first place, if a tenure be declared to be saleable, it would be apparently inconsistent to say that it would be saleable only to a particular class and no other, and that class the least able to bid the full marketable value of the property. It is true that in the Civil Procedure Code a mortgagee is debarred from bidding for a property mortgaged to him without the permission of the court, but that only partially shuts out one and leaves the public at large to bid; whereas in the proposed measure all those who are to pay high prices are put out and only those who have no capital, and will have to borrow at a high rate of interest the money wherewith to buy occupancy tenures, will have to be declared fit to bid. In the next place, it would be extremely difficult to prevent other than cultivating ryots retaining the tenures. A person, for instance, might purchase an occupancy tenure and comply with the conditions of the law either by cultivating the land with his own hand or by hired labour, but in the course of years he might lift himself above the position of a mere cultivator; he might become a capitalist and, instead of cultivating the land himself, might let it to others. The question is—how would the legislature deal with such a case? Of course, logically, when a person acquires a statutory right under certain conditions, he forfeits that right the moment he fails to fulfil those conditions. Again, the desire to have tenants-at-will, instead of men who have a legal permanent right to the soil, cannot but be general among land-owners. In the one case they can claim no enhancement except under very grave restrictions; whereas in the other they derive the full market value of their land every season, while the contingency of a deterioration in the value of the land invariably falls on him, for he cannot prevent a ryot from throwing up his lease. Under these circumstances, a zemindar, talookdar, teccadar, gantidar, or planter, disposed to resume all occupancy tenures, has only to buy them up to reduce all his ryots to the position of tenants-at-will, and he will be enabled to do so at the cheapest cost, for he will have no capitalist to bid against him. Khoodkast and other permanent tenures are now being so bought in, and the practice will readily extend to occupancy tenures to the utter pauperization of the cultivating classes. The opportunity would be particularly used by indigo-planters and other large capitalists engaged in cultivation or manufacture of the agricultural products, and in their hands the law will prove a powerful weapon to convert occupancy ryots into hired labourers. It is well known that nizabad is infinitely more beneficial to planters than contracts with ryots for cultivation; but under the present law the system of nizabad cannot be carried out. All the good lands are in the hands of ryots, and they cannot be ousted; consequently planters are obliged to have recourse to diverse expedients for the purpose of acquiring landlord-power from cultivators, and they do not always succeed to get it. Let it but be known that permanent occupancy right may be easily acquired, and they will not be slow in acquiring it. Indigo ryots, as a class, are all more or less heavily indebted to planters. It would not be difficult to find inhabitants of entire villages in the books of the planters, and that in such a way as they can never get out. With the proposed law on his side, a planter so disposed would be able to sell out every one of such inhabitants from his house and ancestral occupancy tenure and reduce the ryots to mere labourers. The ryots would no longer be free agents, for, deprived of the lands, they must have some means for making their livelihood, and they would consequently take what they can get. The planters, who will thus acquire occupancy tenures, will bring themselves within the purview of the law as recommended above by carrying on cultivation by hired labour or by contract, and the law, which is intended for the furtherance of the independence of the tenantry, will practically eventuate in the reduction of indigo ryots and other tenants in their position to pauperization and serfage. It is true that money-lenders, as a class, are not given to employ hired labour in the cultivation of land, but there is nothing to prevent their adopting that course. Profit from land is not high, but the prestige of a landowner is sought by all classes, both in India and England, and to secure it they will agree to have recourse to hired labour, and thereby defeat the object of the law and hasten the transfer of all occupancy tenures to themselves. They have now to look to crops as their security for the money they have advanced to the ryots, but if they can get the land which bears those crops, they will naturally seek its transfer, and try their utmost to obtain this end. Such a consummation cannot be looked upon with other than the greatest disfavour by all who wish for the good of the cultivating classes, and yet it will be brought on under the operation of the proposed law. It has been suggested that money-lenders may be permitted to buy if they agree to cultivate the land themselves or by hired labour; but this would bring in a discord which should never be permitted. It will enable a zemindar to harass the purchaser whenever so disposed by bringing actions against him on the ground of his having let a portion of his land instead of cultivating it himself. Besides, the principle of giving absolute proprietary right, and then declaring that a man may cultivate his own land, but never let it out for a pecuniary consideration, or a rent in kind, cannot be consistent. It would, moreover, be in direct opposition to the arguments urged in paragraph 8. A moneyed man, cultivating through hired labour, may prove quite as troublesome as he who lets out his land. It is not the mode of cultivation, but the means at the command of the cultivator that can make him an unwelcome tenant.

19. The policy of the Government in other parts of the country has been quite different from what is proposed to be laid down for Bengal in this respect. There the utmost discouragement is shown to the transfer of landed property, large or small. In the new Bill for the relief of the indebted ryots of the Deccan the same policy is recognized. The ryots in Bengal, though they are in many districts now better off than before, are still much in the hands of the mahajun or the money-lender, and the greater the facility given to the transfer of their tenure, the more readily will they fall into the grip of the money-lender. There are also other capitalists who would be only too glad to have the opportunity of buying up ryottee tenures of this kind, and form large estates by small accretions. The greatest security against general pauperization in this country lies in the circumstance that the people, being for the most part agricultural, have, in the majority of cases, lands which they can call their own, subject to the payment of rent, which they can cultivate from generation to generation, and which do not, as a rule, admit of alienation. But if facilities be offered to the sale of the tenure, it is not at all unlikely that, poor and ignorant as the ryots are, they will be tempted to fall into debt deeper and deeper, and will be ultimately doomed to lose their lands. Such a law will also offer a facility to designing and fraudulent men to prey upon those ignorant persons.

The difference of 29,971 maunds is due to the receipt of revised figures from the Collector of Pooree. This amount was wrongly shewn as manufactured returns for the last quarter.

It will be seen from the above that the total clearances or sales of excise salt during the quarter under review amounted to 1,29,215 maunds 36 seers 11 chittacks, against 90,055 maunds 1 seer in the previous quarter and 1,17,372 maunds 11 seers in the corresponding quarter of the previous year.

4. The subjoined Table II shows comparatively the total importations into the port of Calcutta and the total clearances of sea-imported salt during the quarter under review and the corresponding quarter of the previous two years.

CONDITIONS OF THE ADMISSION OF NATIVE APPRENTICES TO THE CENTRAL FOREST SCHOOL IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.

The 2nd January 1879.—The Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to order the publication of the following Resolution for general information :—

A. MACKENZIE,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

CIRCULAR No. 70F.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India in the Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce, dated Calcutta, the 14th December 1878.

[FORESTS.]

READ—

Paragraphs 4 and 8 of the Resolution by the Government of India, in this Department, No. 34F, dated the 1st July 1878, relating to the establishment of a Central Forest School in India.

Paragraph 45 of a report by the Inspector-General of Forests, dated the 1st September 1877, on the establishment of a Central Forest School in India.

RESOLUTION—The Hon'ble the President in Council deems it expedient now to state, for general information, the conditions under which native apprentices will be admitted to the Central Forest School established in the North-Western Provinces. They are stated in the Memorandum of Conditions for the admission of native apprentices to the Forest School, which is appended to this Resolution.

2. Ordinarily, Conservators should not forward applications from any candidate to whom they have not been able to give a trial of at least six months in a subordinate post, during which time his intelligence, active habits, and general fitness for out-door and active forest duty should be observed and tested, and as much insight as possible into practical work in forests, plantations, and timber depôt should be given. If this time of preliminary probation can be extended beyond the minimum of six months, it will be an advantage. Attention to this will prevent disappointment both to the candidate himself, who will thus be under no mistake as to the nature of the work he will have to do, and to his employers, who will be enabled to judge practically of his aptitude and taste for the work.

3. It will be in the power of Conservators generally to appoint promising candidates on the occurrence of vacancies in their sanctioned subordinate staff. When such a vacancy is not available, the Conservator may apply to the Government to which he is subordinate to appoint any qualified candidate under the rules regulating the entertainment of temporary establishments.

4. When sending up the application, the Conservator should submit a report to the Government of the province regarding the results of the trial given to the candidate, and this report must shew that in point of physical activity, intelligence, and general capacity, the applicant is likely to profit by the course of the Forest School, and eventually to become a useful forest officer in the grade of forest ranger.

The application must also be accompanied by a certificate from the Civil Surgeon, stating that the candidate has good eyesight and bodily health, fitting him for the active duties of a forest ranger.

5. All applications should be submitted by Conservators to Local Governments, who will, if they deem fit to do so, instruct the Conservators to communicate with the Director of the Forest School regarding the admission of candidates, and with the Inspector-General of Forests regarding the grant of scholarships.

Memorandum of conditions for the admission of Native Apprentices to the Forest School at Dehra Dun.

Candidates for appointments in the subordinate staff of the Forest Department, who desire to be received as apprentices at the Central Forest School will be selected by Conservators of Forests acting under such orders as may from time to time be given by the Local Governments or Administrations under which they are serving.

2. As a rule, no apprentices will be received at the Forest School who have not proved their fitness for forest work by service in the subordinate staff of the Department during a period of not less than six months.

3. Successful apprentices who have received a forest ranger's certificate at the close of their course of instruction will, as a rule, return to and be employed in the province from whence they were sent to the Forest School.

4. The minimum standard of general education required of candidates for admission to the school will be as follows :—

- (i). Ability to read fluently and write correctly their own language.
- (ii). Arithmetic, including vulgar and decimal fractions.
- (iii). A good knowledge of vernacular accounts.

A knowledge of English is considered an advantage.

The above are the attainments which are at present considered indispensable for each candidate, but it is intended gradually to raise the standard of educational requirements.

5. Candidates for admission to the School must be not less than 18 or more than 25 years of age; and, as a good constitution and active habits are indispensable, each candidate will be required to furnish a certificate of sound health, good vision, and hearing, from the Civil Surgeon of the station nearest to his place of residence.

6. Candidates who are annually selected for admission to the School will commence their course of duties on the 1st June in each year.

During the course of training, apprentices will be employed in practical forest work, and will be instructed in forestry and surveying and in other subjects connected with their profession.

The course of training will extend over two years; and at the close of the course, qualified apprentices will receive a certificate stating that they are competent to hold the position of a forest ranger.

7. Apprentices who have obtained the certificate will, in the first instance, be appointed within three months of the date of their certificate to the class of foresters; and will, if they give satisfaction, and on the occurrence of vacancies, be promoted to the class of forest rangers. As a rule, apprentices who have obtained the certificate will be appointed in the province from which they were sent; but in the event of there being no vacancies available in that province, they may be required to commence their career in some other province.

8. The Director of the School has power to dismiss any apprentice for misconduct, and a man thus dismissed will not again be admitted to the School.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the local Governments

39	Dalasore, „ 3 „	Nil	Weather—cool and seasonable. The rice crop is now seen to be a decidedly fair one, but the late and untimely rains in November and December have prevented it from being a bumper harvest as was at one time expected.
JOTA NAGPORE.
South-West Frontier Agency.
40	Hazareebagh, Jan. 3 '79	Nil	Weather—fine and cold. The rice crop has been cut. The outturn is about 12 annas. The prospects of the rubbee crops are satisfactory.
41	Lohardugga, „ 4 „	Nil	Weather—seasonable. No change to report. The cold-weather crops promise well.
42	Singbhoom, „ 3 „	Nil	Weather—inclining to change and warmer than last week. The paddy is all harvested. The rubbee crops are doing fairly. Prices are high owing to exportation. Fever is prevalent in the interior.
43	Manbhoom, „ 4 „	Nil	Weather—seasonable. Nothing new to report. If the weather keeps up, a good mohwa harvest may be expected a month hence.

NOTE.

Barometric Pressure.—The pressures in column 2 of the above table for all stations below 500 feet are reduced from those given in column 3 of the table on the previous page, by adding the weight of a column of air of the temperatures given in column 18. For stations above 500 feet elevation the reduction is made by Captain Allan Cunningham's table, "Prof. Papers on Indian Engineering, No. CXIII." The temperatures at the sea-level are taken from column 3 of the above table.

Temperature.—The temperatures in column 3 are reduced from those in column 18 on the preceding page, by adding 1° Fahrenheit for every 450 feet.

Wind Resultant.—The resultant wind direction and its comparative predominance are calculated from the whole number of wind observations recorded during the month. The relative predominance in the direction of the resultant is given as percentage of the whole number of observations. The direction is computed in the usual way by Lambert's formula.

Cloud.—This column gives the average proportion of clouded sky, a cloudless sky being indicated by 0, and one completely overcast by 10.

The above, being all comparable, afford the data for constructing a meteorological chart for the month, which will show the isothermal lines and the resultant wind directions, which last may be represented by arrows of varying length, proportioned to the prevalence of the wind. To these may be added the rainfall from the previous tables.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., and 22h.; the maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction and movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

2. Any person desirous of competing at this Examination must produce to the Civil Service Commissioners, before the 1st of April, 1879, evidence showing :—

(a) That he is a natural-born subject of Her Majesty.

(b) That his age will be above seventeen years on the 1st of June, 1879, and under nineteen years on the 1st of January, 1879.† [N. B.—In the case of Natives of India this must be certified by the Government of India, or of the Presidency or Province in which the Candidate may have resided.]

He must also pay such fee as the Secretary of State for India may prescribe.§

3. Should the evidence upon the above points be prima facie satisfactory to the Civil Service Commissioners, the Candidate will, upon payment of the prescribed fee, be admitted to the Examination. The Commissioners may, however, in their discretion, at any time prior to the grant of the Certificate of Qualification hereinafter referred to, institute such further inquiries as they may deem necessary; and if the result of such inquiries, in the case of any Candidate, should be unsatisfactory to them in any of the above respects, he will be ineligible for admission to the Civil Service of India; and if already selected, will be removed from the position of a Probationer.

6. The marks assigned to Candidates in each branch will be subject to such deduction as the Civil Service Commissioners may deem necessary, in order to secure that "a Candidate be allowed no credit at all for taking up a subject in which he is a mere smatterer."

7. The Examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by viva voce Examination, as may be deemed necessary.

8. Should any of the selected Candidates become disqualified, the Secretary of State for India will determine whether the vacancy thus created shall be filled up or not. A selected Candidate, declining to accept the appointment which may be offered to him, will be disqualified for any subsequent competition.

9. Selected Candidates, before proceeding to India, will be on probation for two years, during which time they will be examined periodically, with a view of testing their progress in the following subjects:—*

The Examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by viva voce Examination, as may be deemed necessary. The last of these Examinations will be held at the close of the second year of probation, and will be called the "Final Examination," at which it will be decided whether a selected Candidate is qualified for the Civil Service of India. At this Examination Candidates will be permitted to take up any one of the following branches of Natural Science, viz.—Botany, Geology, and Zoology, for which 350 marks will be allowed.

10. Any Candidate who, at any of the periodical Examinations, shall appear to have wilfully neglected his studies, or to be physically incapacitated for pursuing the prescribed course of training, will be liable to have his name removed from the list of selected Candidates.

11. The selected Candidates who, at the Final Examination, shall be found to have a competent knowledge of the subjects specified in Regulation 9, and who shall have satisfied the Civil Service Commissioners of their eligibility in respect of age, health, and character, shall be certified by the said Commissioners to be entitled to be appointed to the Civil Service of India, provided they shall comply with the regulations in force, at the time, for that Service.

12. Applications from persons desirous to be admitted as Candidates are to be addressed to the "Secretary to the Civil Service Commissioners, London, S. W.," from whom the proper form for the purpose may be obtained.

ARTICULO V.

En los Estados de Su Majestad el Rey de España, con excepcion de las Provincias ó Posesiones de Ultramar, el procedimiento para pedir y obtener la extradicion sera el siguiente:

El Representante Diplomático de la Gran Bretaña dirigirá al Ministro de Estado, con la demanda de extradicion, una copia auténtica y legalizada de la sentencia ó del auto de prision contra la persona acusada, estableciendo claramente el crimen ó delito por el cual se procede contra el fugitivo. En virtud de dicha Real Orden, el Ministro de la Gobernacion adoptará las medidas oportunas para el arresto del fugitivo, y, verificado que sea, será este puesto á disposicion del Representante Diplomático que pidió su extradicion y conducido

Diplomatic Representative who has demanded his extradition, and he shall be taken to the part of the frontier or to the seaport where the Agent appointed for the purpose by Her Britannic Majesty's Government is ready to take charge of him.

In case the documents furnished by the said Government for the identification of the person claimed, or the information obtained by the Spanish authorities for the same purpose, should be considered insufficient, immediate notice thereof shall be given to the Diplomatic Representative of Great Britain, and the person under arrest shall be detained until the British Government shall have furnished fresh evidence to prove his identity or to clear up any other difficulty relative to the examination and decision of the affair.

ARTICLE VI.

In the dominions of Her Britannic Majesty, other than the Colonies or Foreign Possessions of Her Majesty, the manner of proceeding, in order to demand and obtain extradition, shall be as follows:—

(A.) In the case of a person accused—The requisition for the surrender shall be made to Her Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs by the Diplomatic Representative of His Majesty the King of Spain. The said demand shall be accompanied by a warrant of arrest or other equivalent judicial document, issued by a Judge or Magistrate duly authorized to take cognizance of the acts charged against the accused in Spain, and duly authenticated depositions or statements taken on oath before such Judge or Magistrate, clearly setting forth the said acts, and containing a description of the person claimed, and any particulars which may serve to identify him.

The said Principal Secretary of State shall transmit such documents to Her Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, who shall then, by order under his hand and seal, signify to some Police Magistrate in London that such requisition has been made, and require him, if there be due cause, to issue his warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive. On the receipt of such order from the Secretary of State, and on the production of such evidence as would, in the opinion of the Magistrate, justify the issue of the warrant if the crime had been committed in the United Kingdom, he shall issue his warrant accordingly.

When the person claimed shall have been apprehended, he shall be brought before the Magistrate who issued the warrant, or some other Police Magistrate in London. If the evidence to be then produced shall be such as to justify, according to the law of England, the committal for trial of the prisoner, if the crime of which he is accused had been committed in the United Kingdom, the Police Magistrate shall commit him to prison to await the warrant of the Secretary of State for his surrender; sending immediately to the Secretary of State a certificate of the committal and a report upon the case.

After the expiration of a period from the committal of the prisoner, which shall never be less than fifteen days, the Secretary of State shall, by order under his hand and seal, order the fugitive criminal to be surrendered to such person as may be duly authorized to receive him on the part of the Spanish Government.

(B.) In the case of a person convicted—The course of proceeding shall be the same as above indicated, except that the warrant to be transhasta el punto de la frontera, ó hasta el puerto de mar, donde, para hacerse cargo de él, se halle el comisionado al efecto por el Gobierno de Su Majestad Británica.

En el caso de que los documentos suministrados por este Gobierno para la identificación de la persona reclamada, ó de que los datos obtenidos por las Autoridades Españolas con el mismo fin se considerasen insuficientes, se dará inmediato aviso de ello al Representante Diplomático de la Gran Bretaña, quedando detenida la persona arrestada hasta que el Gobierno Británico haya suministrado nuevas pruebas para establecer la identidad de aquella ó para esclarecer cualquiera otra dificultad relativa al examen y resolución del asunto.

ARTICULO VI.

En los Estados de Su Majestad Británica, con excepcion de las Colonias ó Posesiones extranjeras, el procedimiento para pedir y obtener la extradicion será el siguiente:—

(a.) En el caso de una persona acusada, la demanda será dirigida al Principal Secretario de Estado de Su Majestad Británica para los Negocios Extranjeros por el Representante Diplomático de España. A dicha demanda acompañará un auto de prision ó otro documento judicial equivalente expedido por un Juez ó Magistrado competente para conocer en la causa formada al acusado en España, y las declaraciones hechas con arreglo á las leyes ante dicho Juez ó Magistrado, manifestando claramente el crimen ó delito de que se le acusa; y por último, si es posible, las señas de la persona reclamada, y cualesquiera otros datos que puedan ser útiles para establecer su identidad.

Dicho Principal Secretario de Estado transmitirá los documentos enunciados al Principal Secretario de Estado de Su Majestad Británica para los Negocios Interiores (Home Department), quien, por una orden de su puño y provista de su sello, someterá la demanda de extradicion á un Magistrado de Policia de Londres, requiriéndole que expida, si ha lugar, un mandato de prision contra la persona reclamada. Este Magistrado expedirá el mandato requerido si las pruebas presentadas fuesen en su opinion bastantes á justificar igual medida en el supuesto de haberse cometido el crimen ó delito en el Reino Unido.

Verificada la aprehension de la persona reclamada, se la conducirá ante el Magistrado que dictó el auto de prision ó ante cualquier otro Magistrado de Policia de Londres. Si las pruebas presentadas justificasen con arreglo á la ley de Inglaterra la formacion de causa al detenido, en el caso de que el acto por el cual se le acusa hubiese sido cometido en el Reino Unido, el Magistrado de Policia ordenará su prision, hasta que el Secretario de Estado expida la orden para que la extradicion se verifique, y dirigirá inmediatamente á este certificacion de que así lo ha hecho, juntamente con un informe sobre el asunto.

A la terminacion de un plazo que no podrá exceder de quince dias desde que se ordenó la prision y sujecion á juicio del preso, el Secretario de Estado mandará, por medio de una orden de su puño y provista de su sello, que sea aquel entregado al Comisionado autorizado para recibirlo por el Gobierno Español.

(b.) En el caso de una persona condenada, el procedimiento será el mismo que queda indicado, salvo que el auto ó mandato que haya de ser mitted by the Diplomatic Representative of Spain in support of his requisition shall clearly set forth the crime or offence of which the person claimed has been convicted, and state the place and date of his conviction.

The evidence to be produced before the Police Magistrate shall be such as would, according to the law of England, prove that the prisoner was convicted of the crime charged.

(C.) Persons convicted by judgment in default or arrêt de contumace, shall be, in the matter of extradition, considered as persons accused, and, as such, be surrendered.

(D.) After the Police Magistrate shall have committed the accused or convicted person to prison to await the order of a Secretary of State for his surrender, such person shall have the right to apply for a writ of habeas corpus; if he should so apply, his surrender must be deferred until after the decision of the Court upon the return to the writ, and even then can only take place if the decision is adverse to the applicant. In the latter case the Court may at once order his delivery to the person authorized to receive him, without the order of a Secretary of State for his surrender, or commit him to prison to await such order.

ARTICLE VII.

Warrants, depositions, or statements on oath, issued or taken in the dominions of either of the two High Contracting Parties, and copies thereof, and certificates of or judicial documents stating the facts of conviction, shall be received in evidence in proceedings in the dominions of the other, if purporting to be signed or certified by a Judge, Magistrate, or officer of the country where they were issued or taken, provided such warrants, depositions, statements, copies, certificates, and judicial documents are authenticated by the oath of some witness, or by being sealed with the official seal of the Minister of Justice, or some other Minister of State.

ARTICLE VIII.

A fugitive criminal may be apprehended under a warrant issued by any Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, or other competent authority in either country, on such information or complaint, and such evidence, or after such proceedings as would, in the opinion of the authority issuing the warrant, justify the issue of a warrant if the crime had been committed or the person convicted in that part of the dominions of the two Contracting Parties in which the Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, or other competent authority exercises jurisdiction: provided however, that, in the United Kingdom, the accused shall, in such case, be sent as speedily as possible before a Police Magistrate in London. He shall, in accordance with this Article, be discharged, as well in Spain as in the United Kingdom, if, within the term of thirty days, a requisition for extradition shall not have been made by the Diplomatic Agent of his country, in accordance with the stipulations of this Treaty.

The same rule shall apply to the cases of persons accused or convicted of any of the crimes or offences specified in this Treaty, and committed on the high seas on board any vessel of either country which may come into a port of the other.

presentado por el Representante Diplomático de España en apoyo de la demanda de extradición expresará claramente el crimen ó delito por el que la persona reclamada haya sido condenada, mencionando al mismo tiempo el lugar y la fecha de la sentencia.

La prueba que en ese caso deberá ser presentada al Magistrado de Policía ha de ser de naturaleza que establezca que según la Ley de Inglaterra el detenido ha sido condenado por la infracción de que se le acusó.

(c.) Los sentenciados en rebeldía ó in contumaciam se considerarán para los efectos de la extradición como acusados, y serán entregados en este concepto.

(d.) Después de verificada por mandato del Magistrado de Policía la prisión de la persona acusada ó condenada, hasta que el Secretario de Estado expida la orden de extradición, dicho persona tendrá el derecho de reclamar un mandato de Habeas Corpus. Si hiciere uso de este derecho, la extradición se diferirá hasta que el Tribunal falle sobre el incidente, y no podrá llevarse á cabo sino cuando el fallo sea adverso al reclamante.

En este caso el Tribunal podrá mandar, sin la orden de un Secretario de Estado, la inmediata entrega del acusado al Comisionado autorizado para hacerse cargo de él, ó mantenerle en prisión hasta que dicha orden del Secretario de Estado sea expedida.

ARTICULO VII.

Los autos, mandatos, declaraciones juradas, expedidos ó tomadas en los Estados de una de las Altas Partes Contratantes, las copias de esos documentos, así como las certificaciones ó documentos judiciales en que se funde la condena, serán recibidos, como pruebas en el procedimiento de los Estados de la otra, si están provistos de la firma ó de la certificación de un Juez, de un Magistrado ó de un funcionario del país en que hayan sido expedidos ó tomadas, y siempre que dichos autos, mandatos, declaraciones, copias, certificaciones y documentos judiciales sean certificados por el juramento de un testigo ó por el sello oficial del Ministro de Gracia y Justicia ó algún otro Ministro de la Corona.

ARTICULO VIII.

Todo criminal fugitivo podrá ser detenido por mandato de cualquier Magistrado de Policía, Juez de Paz, ó Municipal ú otra Autoridad competente en cada uno de los dos Estados, expedido en virtud de informe, demanda, prueba ó todo otro acto de procedimiento que en opinión de la Autoridad que expidiere el mandato fuese bastante á justificar este, si el crimen ó delito hubiese sido cometido ó la persona hubiese sido condenada en la parte de los Estados de ambos Contratantes en que el Magistrado, Juez de Paz ú otra Autoridad competente ejercen jurisdicción; á condición sin embargo en el Reino Unido de que se haga comparecer al acusado tan pronto como sea posible ante un Magistrado de Policía de Londres. Así en España como en el Reino Unido, el detenido, con arreglo á este Artículo, será puesto en libertad si en un término de treinta días no ha sido formulada demanda de extradición por el Representante Diplomático de su país, con arreglo á las estipulaciones de este Tratado.

La misma regla se aplicará á los casos de personas acusadas ó condenadas por cualquiera de los crímenes ó delitos especificados en este Tratado, y cometidos en alta mar á bordo de un buque de uno de los dos países que llegase á un puerto

ARTICLE IX.

If the fugitive criminal who has been committed to prison be not surrendered and conveyed away within two months after such committal, or within two months after the adverse decision of the Court upon the return to a writ of habeas corpus in the United Kingdom, he shall be discharged from custody, unless sufficient cause be shown to the contrary.

ARTICLE X.

In the Provinces beyond sea, Colonies and other Possessions beyond sea of the two High Contracting Parties, the manner of proceeding shall be as follows:—

The requisition for extradition of the fugitive criminal who has taken refuge in an over-sea Province, Colony, or Possession of either of the two Contracting Parties, shall be made to the Governor or chief authority of such Province, Colony, or Possession by the chief Consular Officer of the other State in such Province, Colony, or Possession; or, if the fugitive has escaped from an over-sea Province, Colony or Possession of the State on whose behalf the extradition is demanded, by the Governor or chief authority of such Province, Colony or Possession.

In these cases the provisions of this Treaty shall be observed as far as possible by the respective Governors or chief authorities, who, however, shall be at liberty either to grant the extradition or to refer the decision of the matter to the Governments of their respective countries.

ARTICLE XI.

In cases where it may be necessary, the Spanish Government shall be represented at the English Courts by the Law Officers of the Crown, and the English Government in the Spanish Court by the Public Prosecutor (Ministerio Fiscal).

The respective Governments will give assistance to the Diplomatic Representatives who claim their intervention for the custody and security of the persons subject to extradition.

ARTICLE XII.

The claim for extradition shall not be complied with if the individual claimed has been already tried for the same offence in the country whence the extradition is demanded, or if, since the commission of the acts charged, the accusation or the conviction, exemption from prosecution or punishment has been acquired by lapse of time, according to the laws of that country.

ARTICLE XIII.

If the individual claimed by one of the two High Contracting Parties, in pursuance of the present Treaty should be also claimed by one or several other powers, on account of other crimes or offences committed upon their respective territories, his extradition shall be granted to that State whose demand is earliest in date; unless any other arrangement should exist between the different Governments to determine the preference, either on account of the gravity of the crime or offence, or for any other reason.

ARTICLE XIV.

If the individual claimed should be under prosecution, or have been condemned for a crime or offence committed in the country where he may have taken refuge, his surrender may be deferred until he shall have been set at liberty in due course

ARTICULO IX.

Si el criminal fugitivo constituido en prision no ha sido entregada cuando hayan trascurrido dos meses despues de haber sido expedida la órden de su prision, ó dos meses despues del fallo del Tribunal negativo de su reclamacion de un mandato de Habeas Corpus, en el Reino Unido, será puesto aquel en libertad, á menos que haya causa suficiente para lo contrario.

ARTICULO X.

En las Provincias de Ultramar, Colonias y demás Posesiones de las dos Altas Partes Contratantes el procedimiento será el siguiente:

La demanda de extradicion del criminal fugitivo que se hubiese refugiado en una Provincia Ultramarina, Colonia ó Posesion de una de las dos Partes Contratantes, se dirigirá al Gobernador ó á la Autoridad Superior de dicha Provincia, Colonia ó Posesion por el Agente Consular de mayor categoría del otro Estado en dicha Provincia, Colonia ó Posesion; ó si el criminal se ha fugado de una Provincia Ultramarina, Colonia ó Posesion del Estado en cuyo nombre se pide la extradicion, por el Gobernador ó Autoridad Superior de esta Provincia, Colonia ó Posesion.

En estos casos se observarán en cuanto sea posible las disposiciones del presente Tratado por los respectivos Gobernadores ó Autoridades Superiores, pero se reserva á estos la facultad de conceder la extradicion ó de someter la resolucion del caso á los Gobiernos de sus respectivos paises.

ARTICULO XI.

En los casos en que fuere necesario, el Gobierno Español será representado ante los Tribunales Británicos por los Oficiales Legales de la Corona, y el Gobierno Británico ante los Tribunales Españoles por el Ministerio Fiscal.

Los Gobiernos respectivos prestarán asistencia á los Representantes Diplomáticos que la reclamen para la custodia y seguridad de las personas sujetas á extradicion.

ARTICULO XII.

No se dará curso á la demanda de extradicion cuando la persona reclamada hubiese sido juzgada por el mismo crimen ó delito en el Estado al cual aquella demanda se dirija; ni tampoco cuando despues de los actos que constituyen el crimen ó delito de que se le acuse, despues de la acusacion ó despues de la condena, tenga derecho al beneficio de la prescripcion, segun las leyes de dicho Estado.

ARTICULO XIII.

Cuando la persona reclamada por una de las Altas Partes Contratantes, en virtud del presente Tratado, fuese reclamada asimismo por uno ó varios otros Estados á causa de crímenes ó delitos cometidos en sus territorios respectivos, su extradicion será concedida al Estado cuya demanda sea de fecha anterior; á menos que no exista entre los diferentes Gobiernos un arreglo para determinar la preferencia, ya por la gravedad del crimen ó delito, ya por cualquier otro motivo.

ARTICULO XIV.

Cuando la persona reclamada estuviese encausada, ó hubiese sido condenada por un crimen ó delito cometido en el Estado en que se hubiese refugiado, su extradicion podrá diferirse hasta que haya sido puesta en libertad con arreglo á las

ARTICLE XV.

Such delivery shall not be limited to the property or articles obtained by stealing or by fraudulent bankruptcy, but shall extend to everything that may serve as proof of the crime or offence, and shall take place even when the extradition, after having been granted, cannot be carried out by reason of the escape or death of the individual claimed.

The rights of third parties with regard to the said property or articles are nevertheless reserved.

ARTICLE XVI.

The High Contracting Parties renounce any claim for the reimbursement of the expenses incurred by them in the arrest and maintenance of the person to be surrendered, and his conveyance as far as the frontier; they reciprocally agree to bear such expenses themselves.

ARTICLE XVII.

The present Treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications shall be exchanged at London as soon as possible.

PART IV.

Bills of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 11th January 1879, and was referred to a Select Committee who are to report thereon in six weeks :—

A Bill to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent and to amend the law relating to rent.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the more speedy realization of arrears of rent and to amend in other respects the law relating to rent in Bengal: It is enacted as follows :—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. The provisions of this Act may be extended by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal by notification in the Calcutta Gazette to any districts within the provinces for the time being subject to the said Lieutenant-Governor in which Act X of 1859 or the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, are, or may be, in force, and shall take effect in such districts from the date which may be specified in such notification.

2. Sections 6, 7, 20, and 21 of Act X of 1859; sections 2, 3, 4, and 5 of Bengal Act VI of 1862; and sections 6, 7, 21, 22, 44, 45, 46, and 47 of the the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, are hereby repealed.

PROCEDURE FOR SUMMARY REALIZATION OF ARREARS OF RENT.

3. From and after the commencement of this Act all suits for arrears of rent brought within twelve months after such arrears have become due may, in case the plaintiff shall desire to proceed under this Part, be commenced by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, but the summons shall be in the form contained in Schedule A hereto annexed.

In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit unless he obtains leave from the Court as hereinafter mentioned so to appear and defend;

and in default of his obtaining such leave or of appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree for any sum mentioned in the summons, and interest on the same at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum to the date of decree, together with the interest (if any) stipulated for as mentioned in the proviso of section 26 of this Act, and a sum for costs to be fixed by an order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, unless the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum, in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way, and such decree may be enforced forthwith.

4. The Court shall, upon application within the period of fourteen days from the service of such summons, give leave to appear and to defend the suit upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons, or upon his satisfying the Court by his examination upon oath or affirmation that he has a defence, or can adduce such facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application, and on such terms as to security, framing and recording issues or otherwise, as to the Court may seem fit.

5. After decree the Court may, under special circumstances, set aside the decree, and, if necessary, stay or set aside execution, and may give leave to appear to the summons and to defend the suit if it shall seem reasonable to the Court so to do, and on such terms as the Court thinks fit.

6. No appeal shall lie from any decree of the Court under section 3 of this Act on the part of any judgment-debtor unless he deposit the amount of the decree with costs in such Court to the credit of the person who has obtained the decree.

7. On the application of the person who has obtained the decree the money in deposit shall be paid to him; but if the judgment-debtor appeal, and the appeal is decreed in his favor in whole or in part, notice shall be served on the original decree-holder requiring him to pay the money aforesaid, or such portion of it as may be ordered to be refunded, into the public treasury within fourteen days from the service on him of such notice.

8. In default of compliance with such notice the sum referred to therein shall be deemed a demand under Bengal Act VII of 1868, and shall be recoverable from the decree-holder aforesaid as such.

9. No suit shall be entertained under this Part except where it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Court that rent at the same rate as that alleged to be due has been paid in respect of the holding for which it is claimed some time within the three years immediately preceding the period for which it is claimed, or that the tenant has agreed by a written engagement which is still in force to pay rent at the rate claimed.

10. Nothing in the seven last preceding sections shall be deemed to apply to suits for rent at enhanced rates.

Provided that when in any case a decree has been given by the Court for rent at an enhanced rate, the decree shall also declare the amount of rent due at the rates current before the institution of the suit; and shall direct that in the event of execution being stayed on account of appeal against the enhanced rates, the decree-holder shall nevertheless be at liberty to execute the decree in respect of the sum so declared to be due at the rates formerly current.

PART III.

RIGHT OF OCCUPANCY AND SUB-LEASES.

11. Every ryot who shall have held land for a period of twelve years, and cultivated the same either with his own hands or by means of hired labourers, shall have a right of occupancy in the land so held and cultivated by him, whether it be held under pottah or not, so long as he pays the rent payable on account of the same.

EXPLANATION.—A person to whom the ryot makes over a portion of the produce by way of payment for his labour in cultivating the whole or a portion of the ryots' lands is a 'hired labourer' within the meaning of this section. A ryot who pays a portion of the gross produce by way of rent to the zemindar or other person from whom he holds his lands is not a 'hired labourer' within the meaning of this section.

Nothing contained in this section or in section 16 of this Act shall be held to affect the terms of any written contract for the cultivation of land entered into between a landholder and a ryot, when it contains any express stipulation contrary thereto.

12. The holding of the father or other person from whom the ryot inherits shall be deemed to be the holding of the ryot within the meaning of the last preceding section, and the tenure of a ryot who has acquired a right of occupancy shall be heritable and transferable, provided that no transfer shall be valid unless the whole tenure is transferred, and that the transferee shall have the right of occupancy only so long as he continues to cultivate the lands either with his own hands or by means of hired labourers in the manner contemplated by the last preceding section.

13. After the commencement of this Act no ryot having a right of occupancy shall, without the consent in writing of the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder to whom his rent is payable, sublet any portion of his holding; and no court shall take cognizance of any such sub-letting.

14. If, after the commencement of this Act, the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder consents to the sub-letting of a portion or the whole of the holding of a ryot having a right of occupancy, the sub-tenant, if he cultivates the lands in the manner described in section 11 of this Act, shall begin to acquire a right of occupancy in the lands sublet from the date of such sub-letting. The ryot who sublets the lands shall be deemed to have become the holder of an intermediate tenure, and shall cease to have a right of occupancy in the lands sublet, but he shall not be liable to be ejected by the zemindar or superior tenure-holder otherwise than for non-payment of arrears of rent, and in execution of a decree or order of Court; and the rent which he pays for the land sublet shall not be liable to be enhanced above a sum which shall, in default of specific agreement to the contrary, in no case be less than ten per cent. below the fair and equitable rates payable for the same land by a ryot having a right of occupancy.

15. Sub-leases for a year or for a term of years given before the commencement of this Act by any ryot having a right of occupancy shall hold good for such year or term but no longer.

Saving of existing sub-leases.

16. No right of occupancy shall be acquired by any ryot in khamar, nijote, or seer lands belonging to the proprietor of the estate or tenure which are held by him as such at the date of the commencement of this Act and let by him on lease for a term or year by year.

No right of occupancy in zemindar's private lands.

17. All ryots having rights of occupancy are required to register in the sherishtas of the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder to whom their rents are payable all transfers of their tenures by sale, gift, or otherwise, as well as all successions thereto and divisions among heirs in cases of inheritance, within one month of each such transfer, succession, or division, and every zemindar or superior tenant is required to admit to registry and otherwise give effect to all transfers of whole tenures when made in good faith, and to all such successions and divisions by delivering to the applicant for registration within fifteen days after his application a hukumnama or amulnama declaring the fact of the transfer, succession, or division having been admitted and registered.

Transfers of occupancy tenures to be registered.

Provided that no zemindar or other superior tenure-holder shall be required to admit to registry or give effect to any division or distribution of the rent payable on account of any such tenure, nor shall any such division or distribution of rent be valid and binding without the consent in writing of the zemindar or superior tenant.

18. All ryots claiming to have rights of occupancy in virtue of transfers made before the commencement of this Act are required to register the same within one year from the said commencement, and the provisions of the last preceding section shall apply to all such transfers.

Registry of transfer made before the commencement of the Act.

19. Fees at the rate of two per cent. on the annual rent of the interest transferred may be levied by the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder on the registry under this Act of any transfer:

Fees may be levied on transfers.

Provided that no fee shall exceed one hundred rupees; and that if the zemindar or other superior tenure-holder fails to deliver the hukumnama or amulnama as provided in section 17 of this Act to any applicant for registration any competent Court may direct delivery of the same free of all charges for fees or costs.

20. The Court may, when passing a decree for arrears of rent, on the oral application of the decree-holder, order immediate execution thereof either against the person, or the moveable property, or the right of occupancy of the judgment-debtor.

Execution may issue on verbal application of decree-holder.

21. The provisions of sections 59 to 63 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1869, shall apply to the sale in execution of decree of the tenure of any ryot having a right of occupancy.

Procedure in execution against occupancy tenure.

TENDER OF RENT AND DEPOSIT OF RENT WITH COLLECTOR.

22. In any suit hereafter to be brought for rent, if it appears to the Court that the defendant has, without reasonable or probable cause, neglected or refused to pay the amount due by him, and that he has not, on or before the due date of payment of his quarterly rent instalments as fixed under section 26 of this Act tendered such amount to the plaintiff or his duly authorized agent, or in case of the refusal of the plaintiff or such agent to receive the amount tendered, has not deposited such amount with the Collector within ten days of the said quarterly day of payment, the Court may award to the plaintiff, in addition to the amount decreed for rent and costs, such damages, not exceeding twenty-five per centum on the amount of rent decreed, as the Court may think fit. These damages, if awarded, as well as the amount of rent and costs decreed in the suit, shall carry interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum from the date of decree until payment thereof.

The Court may in certain cases award to the plaintiff additional damages not exceeding 25 per cent.

23. In any suit hereafter to be brought for rent if it appears to the Court that the plaintiff has instituted the suit against the defendant without reasonable or probable cause, or that the defendant had, within ten days of the due date of payment of his quarterly rent instalments as fixed under section 26 of this Act, duly deposited with the Collector, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, the full amount which the Court shall find to have been due to the plaintiff at the date of such quarterly day of payment, the Court may award to the defendant, by way of compensation, such sum, not exceeding twenty-five per centum on the whole amount claimed by the plaintiff, as the Court may think fit; and such sum, with interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum until payment thereof shall be recoverable from the plaintiff in like manner as sums ordered to be paid by decrees of such Court.

The Court may award compensation not exceeding 25 per cent. on the amount sued for to a defendant improperly sued.

24. If any under-tenant or ryot shall at the mál catcherry for the receipt of rents or other place where the rents of the land or other immoveable property held or cultivated by him are usually payable, tender payment of what he shall consider to

And such deposit shall, so far as the under-tenant or ryot, and all persons claiming through or under him, are concerned, in all respects operate as, and have the full effect of, a payment then made by the under-tenant or ryot of the amount deposited to such zemindar or other person.

25. Such deposit shall be received by the

B. in respect of the rent of the said lands you must institute a suit in Court for the establishment of such claim or demand within six calendar months from this date, otherwise your claim will be for ever barred.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE chief object of the Bill is to provide a summary procedure for the realization of arrears of rent when the rates are undisputed. The difficulty experienced by landlords in many parts of Bengal in realizing undisputed rents under the ordinary procedure of the civil courts has frequently of late years been the subject of complaint. Now that the zemindars are bound to pay in to Government under penalty not only the land revenue but also the road cess and provincial public works cess, it is necessary that they should have some more speedy and effective mode of recovering their rents, and that portion of the cesses in question which is payable by their under-tenants and ryots. A summary procedure based upon Chapter XXXIX of the Civil Procedure Code has therefore been devised, and is set forth in Part II of the Bill.

The position of the zemindar in respect of the execution of decrees for arrears of rent is improved by making the ryot's right of occupancy transferable and amending the law with reference to ejectment. It is believed that to make the occupancy tenure transferable by law will, in fact, also strengthen the position of the ryot and tend to encourage agricultural improvements. The Bill also proposes clearly to limit the power of acquiring the occupancy status to cultivating ryots, and to prevent a ryot of this class from converting himself into a middleman without the consent of his landlord. It provides for the registry of transfers and other changes in the holders of occupancy tenures in the sherishta of the zemindar on payment of a trifling fee.

The Bill further amends the procedure in connection with the deposit of rent by under-tenants, and transfers the duty of receiving and dealing with such deposits from the Civil Court to the Collector.

To prevent undue harassment of ryots by repeated suits for rent under either the summary or the ordinary procedure, provision is made for the payment of rent in quarterly instalments; and an attempt is made to render the fact of payment and the rate of rent more capable of proof than at present by insisting on an improved system of rent receipts. The Bill also amends the law of distraint by making the crop of an under-tenant liable for the zemindar's rent, and it provides for the more careful service of process in rent cases.

ORGANIZATION OF DISTRICT ROAD ENGINEER ESTABLISHMENT.

Rules for District Establishments.

No. 1986E.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in the Public Works (Establishment) Department, under date the 30th December 1878.

READ—

This department circular No. 37E, dated 29th May 1877, relative to the rules for qualification tests of District Establishments being more stringently applied than hitherto.

Resolution.—The efficiency of the Engineering Establishments of the District Committees constituted under the District Road Cess Act, 1871, has been a matter of solicitude to successive Governments ever since the introduction of the Act.

At first it was supposed that the ordinary Public Works Establishments could carry out district works in addition to their departmental duties, the size of the executive divisions being reduced for the purpose; but this arrangement was found not to answer. Subsequently, when District Committees began to appoint their own officers, there was an inclination on their part to employ officers of the Public Works Department as their District Engineers, and indisposition on the part of those officers to place themselves under District Committees. Had it been otherwise, the Government could not have spared the number of officers required without largely augmenting its Public Works Establishments, and correspondingly increasing its future liabilities in regard to pensions, &c. It might have been found that the public revenues had assumed the burden of providing for or supporting numbers of unnecessary officers.

In some cases where Public Works Officers were willing to serve District Committees, and the Committees were desirous of obtaining their services, it was found that the rules of the Financial Code, regarding contribution for absentee allowances and pension, rendered it necessary that the salaries which would induce officers to take district employment should be larger than Committees could afford to give, and the services of the officers could not consequently be made available to the Committees. In several instances, however, the impediment of the contribution was insufficient to stand in the way, and about one-third of the districts are now in charge of Public Works Officers of different grades.

Owing to such causes as the above, as well as from the nature of the case, it was unavoidable that, in exercising the powers of appointment on the nomination of the Chairman which are granted to Committees by law, Engineers, of whom little was previously known, should find employment under District Committees; and with the view of securing, as far as possible, the appointment of good men, the Government laid down certain rules regarding District Establishments in 1875, at which time the levy of the cess was receiving active development throughout Bengal under the auspices of Sir Richard Temple. These rules have been beneficial. Engineers who, from their certificates and the other means available to Committees, appeared to be likely to be trustworthy and efficient were sometimes found not to be so, after their antecedents had been carefully inquired into by Government; and in some instances they were totally unworthy men.

The Cess Act also gives to Committees the power of fixing the salaries and allowances of their establishment, subject to the condition that the aggregate salaries and allowances in any one year shall not, except with the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division, exceed one-fourth of the entire income of the Committee for the year. This restriction is very closely worked up to, and the sanction of the Commissioner for excess is occasionally required.

The establishments of District Committees are for two purposes—first, for carrying out the provisions of the Act in regard to collecting the cess, and other matters under the Collector; secondly, for Engineering and other establishments appointed by the Committees under the provisions of the Act. An analysis of the cost of the District Establishments shows instances of great variation in the cost of the first class of establishments as compared with the amount of cess they collect. The cost of such establishments depends for the most part on the arrangements of the Collectors for collecting the cess, and the attention of the Board of Revenue has been specially drawn to the charges under this head with the view of their being systematized and kept as low as possible.

The actual expenditure in 1876-77 on establishments of the second class, that is establishments of all sorts for working the Act under the control of the Committees, has varied in the different districts from Rs. 1,331 to Rs. 21,998 per annum, and the percentages of the establishments on the outlay on the works carried out by the Committees has varied from 9·5 to 49·63. The estimated cost of such establishments for 1877-78 has varied from Rs. 2,300 to Rs. 27,288 with a percentage as above ranging from 9·54 to 22·56.

A percentage is not a very valuable, nor an absolute, test of the proper cost of establishments, though they are useful in attracting attention to variation in expenditure which seems to call for attention; and with districts varying in size and income, there must no doubt be very considerable differences in the aggregate cost of establishments, and in the variations of the percentages; still enough is known of the circumstances to show that District Engineering establishments are more costly than they need be, and their large aggregate expense—about Rs. 7,20,000 in 1876-77, and an estimated cost of Rs. 8,13,000 in 1877-78—indicates that much may be done towards extending the benefits of the cess by carefully attending to the cost of these establishments, and so increasing the funds available for expenditure on works.

This matter does not appear to have received the attention it deserves. The salaries appear to have been generally regulated by the scale of those of the Public Works Department, increased in some instances by the addition of the sums necessary to induce officers of the department to serve Committees, and the amount required as an officer's contribution for Government pension. The Lieutenant-Governor is satisfied that in many instances Committees might obtain such service as they now obtain at less cost, if salaries were fixed with some care, and with the object of limiting salaries to what is essential.

The salaries of the establishments of the Public Works Department were fixed with reference to a proper remuneration for European service, and were calculated with the view of attracting European Engineers to serve in India; such a scale was obviously not necessary to secure the services of native

Engineers, and native labour should of course be paid for at the value of the local labour market. If competent native Engineers can easily be obtained at salaries of Rs. 300 to Rs. 400 a month, it is sheer waste of money to pay them Rs. 700 or Rs. 800 a month, because this is the scale of pay of European Engineers serving in a foreign country. It is clearly much more to the advantage of a Road Cess Committee to have three or four competent native Engineers than one European, if they can be procured at the same expenditure of money which is often the case.

Sir Ashley Eden is strongly of opinion that native agency should be employed to as large an extent as possible in the public service on salaries fixed with reference to the real cost of labour in the country; and when a competent native Engineer can be found expensive European agency should never be employed; and he requests that, in making future arrangements and fixing salaries, Committees will bear this principle in mind. It will not be possible to give entire effect to such a principle immediately, because there is not at present sufficient native agency available for carrying it out; but it is desirable that the principle should be recognised, that the salaries should be fixed with reference to indigenous service, that the European employés of District Committees should realize that it exists, and that the employment of Europeans will decrease as qualified natives become available.

A great improvement is now taking place in native agency of the higher class. For some time past young native gentlemen, who have theoretically qualified as Engineers in the Presidency Civil Engineering College, have been engaged in obtaining practical knowledge in brick-making, and in workshops where they acquire personal experience of the various handicrafts. Some who have already passed through this course have received temporary appointments in the Public Works Department, and are gaining experience in road and other work.

It is the Lieutenant-Governor's intention to continue these temporary appointments as far as may be practicable. The youths will thus obtain experience and practice, and this body of temporary officers will form a source from which qualified natives will be available for district appointments. When appointed to district situations these officers will cease to be servants of Government, and Committees will be troubled by no considerations connected with Government pension. They should be engaged on terms which may be agreed upon as sufficient for the actual services to be rendered and without reference to any other consideration.

In the meantime there are many natives of general knowledge and experience in the lower grades of the department perfectly competent efficiently to discharge the duties of District Engineer. There seems to be no doubt that native engineers are qualified for the ordinary duties of District Engineer, and with Government Engineers whose special province it is to look after the professional aspect of each question and to assist Chairmen and Committees, as members of the Committee, as much as lies in their power, the Lieutenant-Governor considers that, as the rule, district works could be efficiently carried out by native agency. It would be easy to provide by a special arrangement with the Public Works Department for any unusual work which might be beyond the District Engineer's skill.

It will now be possible to carry out more fully than has hitherto been possible clause V of the rules of 1875, which requires that the District Engineering staff shall have the qualification of similar appointments in the Public Works Department; and the Lieutenant-Governor trusts that District Committees will do all in their power to reduce the cost of the District Engineering Establishments, and to extend the employment of native agency therein.

EXPENDITURE ON IRRIGATION WORKS IN BENGAL.

No. 1621A.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in the Public Works Department, Irrigation Branch, under the date the 11th January 1879.

READ—

The Canal Revenue Reports for the year 1877-78, and the Note by the Chief Engineer on the same.

THE total expenditure in the Irrigation Branch of this province during the year under review amounted under all heads of account to Rs. 39,80,553, as detailed in paragraph 6 of the Chief Engineer's Note. The expenditure on works, for which capital accounts are kept, was Rs. 24,15,348, thereby increasing the capital outlay on irrigation works in Bengal from Rs. 4,41,23,640 at the commencement of the year to Rs. 4,65,38,988 at its close. Of the total capital outlay, Rs. 4,57,01,620 has been spent on the class of works now termed "Productive Public Works," which in this province includes the following :—

Orissa Canals,
Midnapore Canal,
Hidgellee Tidal Canal,
Sone Canals.

The Hidgellee Tidal Canal has been completed and is in full operation; the other projects are more or less incomplete, but in operation and yielding revenue. The balance of the capital outlay, viz. Rs. 8,37,368, is the expenditure on works other than productive public works for which capital accounts are kept, viz.—

Tirhoot irrigation scheme,
Hooghly ditto.
Damoodah ditto.

The first of these is still under investigation, but the other two have been abandoned.

The receipts for the year amounted to Rs. 4,94,772, against Rs. 3,29,760 in 1876-77, and Rs. 2,30,434 in 1875-76.

The following table shows in detail the revenue of each project from the several sources as compared with the previous two years :—

GRAND TOTAL ...	4,94,772	3,29,760	2,30,434

The above statement shows a steady growth in the revenue of each of the canals. In the case of the Sone Canals the increase would have been more marked had a fair proportion of the assessments been realized. Owing, however, to delays incidental to the first introduction of a regular revenue system, and to remissions rendered necessary by the destruction of crops by insects in the spring, the collections fell far short of the demands.

The increase in the Orissa Canals is especially gratifying, having been due to a nearly three-fold expansion of the irrigated area concurrently with an enhancement of 50 per cent. in the price charged for the water. It is satisfactory to add that five-year leases have since been executed by the ryots for nearly the whole of the lands irrigated in 1877-78.

In Midnapore the decrease was due to the discouragement caused by two previous years of abundant rainfall, but the area irrigated was all leased for five years, and has since been raised to the full extent of the irrigating capacity of the canal.

The working expenses for the year 1877-78 amounted to Rs. 7,02,857, against Rs. 5,97,960 and Rs. 5,29,490 of the previous two years. The increase was, however, almost wholly in Midnapore and on the Sone, and was due partly to a heavy and exceptional outlay on the re-construction of a lock in the former district, and partly to the increased length of canal brought into operation and the great extension of irrigation in Shahabad.

The deficit, i.e., working expenses less revenue receipts, was Rs. 2,08,085, against Rs. 2,68,200 in 1876-77 and Rs. 2,99,056 in 1875-76, but, inclusive of interest charges which are annually increasing in proportion to increased capital outlay, the total deficit amounted to Rs. 22,47,798, against Rs. 21,80,294 and Rs. 20,39,174 of the two previous years.

The year was on the whole favorable to irrigation, the rainfall having been deficient in all the irrigated districts, especially in the Sone, where the khurree crops suffered considerably. The areas irrigated compare with those of the previous year as follows :—

					1876-77.	1877-78.
ORISSA	...	{	Khurree	...	26,070	95,088
			Rubbee	...	4,312	3,407
			Total	...	30,382	98,495
MIDNAPORE	...	{	Khurree	...	32,600	19,550
			Rubbee	...	81	269
			Total	...	32,681	19,819
SONE	...	{	Khurree	...	1,923	1,07,087
			Rubbee	...	33,896	1,34,903
			Total	...	35,819	2,41,990

The water-rate in Orissa was raised from Re. 1 to Rs. 1-8 per acre for khurree crops. The rate in Midnapore was Rs. 1-8. On the Sone the rate was lowered to Re. 1 for khurree rice as a temporary measure, but has since been raised to its former amount, Rs. 2-8. For both rubbee and khurree crops three-year leases at reduced rates were offered in the Sone districts towards the close of the year, but there has not yet been time to ascertain how far they are likely to be accepted by the people.

The attention of the Lieutenant-Governor was drawn during the year to the large extent of country still unprovided with distributaries under some of the canals in Orissa. For want of these subsidiary and comparatively inexpensive channels, the heavy outlay incurred on the main canals remains without possibility of return, and at least 200,000 acres are deprived of the water which flows idly past them down the canals constructed specially for their irrigation.

Steps have been taken to remedy the defect, and estimates, amounting to Rs. 8 lakhs, have been submitted to the Government of India for additional distributaries from the Kendrapara and Patamundi Canals.

The canal traffic exhibits everywhere a steady growth, the total for the year being about 350,000 tons, against 235,000 tons in 1876-77, and the receipts from tolls Rs. 2,26,043 for the former period, against Rs. 1,43,801 for the latter.

Measures have been taken for the introduction of steam-traffic on all the main canals.

The revenue system on the Sone Canals was organized and brought into regular operation for the first time during the year. That in Orissa was administered with much ability by Mr. Wylly, the Deputy Revenue Superintendent, to whose good management the extension of irrigation there is largely due.

A project for the irrigation of part of the Sarun district was set on foot under a guarantee by the planters and zemindars of the interest on the outlay. The terms of the guarantee were settled at two meetings held at Chupra in the spring, and work was commenced in some of the cuts by which water is to be brought from the Gunduk into the district.

A similar project for the water-supply of those parts of Hooghly which have suffered from the closing of old water-courses formerly fed from the Damoodah was also introduced, on the basis of a contribution by the zemindars towards the capital cost, which is estimated at five lakhs. Schemes for the drainage of extensive swamps, covering about 100,000 acres of land in Southern Hooghly, were brought to maturity, and enquiries set on foot with a view to the provision of a legal enactment for carrying out the works at the expense of the proprietors of the lands benefitted in the same way as in the case of the Dancooni works, which continue to yield very satisfactory results.

On the whole, the general result of the operations of the year may be said to have considerably improved the prospects of irrigation in Bengal as far as its universal adoption by the people, wherever available, is concerned, though the rates at which water is now sold in Midnapore and Orissa will not pay the interest on the very heavy outlay which has been incurred.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., and 22h.; the maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction and movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

The results of observations at the Alipore Observatory are not rigorously comparable with registers of past years (at the Park Street Observatory). The barometer is about 3 feet higher at Alipore, and, other things being equal, reads therefore .003 lower. The diurnal range of temperature is also greater at Alipore, and the mean temperature apparently about 1° or 1½° lower. Finally, the thermometer, which has furnished the record of temperature at the Surveyor General's Office during the last 20 years and upwards, is found to read 0.6° higher than the Kew standard, which is the standard of reference at the present Observatory.

PART VI.

Bill of the India Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps and Court-fees was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 15th January, 1879.

REPORT.

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps and Court-fees was referred, have the honour to report that we have further considered the Bill in connection with the papers noted in the margin.

2. We have, at the instance of some of the Authorities consulted, restored the definitions of "banker," "bottomry-bond," "letter of credit," "protest," "protest of the master of a ship" and "spondentia-bond," placing the five last in the schedule, where only the terms are found.

3. We have enlarged the definition of "settlement" so as to include under it dispositions of property for charitable and religious purposes.

4. We have amended section 6 relating to the case of several instruments employed to effect a single transaction, by providing that each of the subordinate instruments shall bear a fixed duty of one rupee. The result of this amendment, we believe, will be to afford relief in all but an insignificant number of the transactions in question.

5. We have, in section 8, given the Governor General in Council power to exempt from stamp-duty retrospectively as well as prospectively.

6. We have added to the list of documents in section 10 for which adhesive stamps may be used, "entry as an advocate, vakil or attorney on the roll of any High Court" and "Notarial Acts." The former manifestly could be stamped only with an adhesive stamp, and it was represented to us that the present mode of stamping the latter is inconvenient in practice.

7. We have modified section 11 regarding the cancellation of adhesive stamps so as to meet the cases in which the stamp is affixed before the instrument is executed or (as in the case of the cheques contained in the cheque books issued by some banks to their customers) before the instrument is completely drawn up. We have provided that in such cases the person first executing the instrument shall cancel the stamp.

8. We have confined section 12 to impressed stamps, as it has been represented to us that inconvenience would arise from its being applied to cheques, which are very commonly stamped by affixing an adhesive stamp to the back.

9. We have excepted certain receipts endorsed on instruments from the operation of the rule of section 13, which prohibits a second instrument being written on one piece of stamped paper.

10. We have omitted sections 14 and 15 of the Bill as last settled by us and marked No. II, which provided for the number of impressed stamps to be used for the stamping of any instrument, and have, by an addition to section 9, given power to the Governor General in Council to provide for the matter by rules.

11. To remove a doubt which might otherwise have been felt, we have added a section (14) providing that "Every instrument written in contravention of section 12 or 13 shall be deemed to be unstamped." Any hardship which might otherwise arise from this, we think, will be effectually prevented by the provisions of chapter IV empowering the Collector to remit the penalty in such cases, and by the provision for an allowance of the value of the stamp which we have now inserted in section 52.

12. We have, at the instance of some of the Authorities consulted, extended from two to three months the period within which, under section 17, an instrument executed abroad and brought into British India may be stamped.

13. We have, in section 29, added a clause (d) providing that the cost of the stamp for a counterpart of a lease shall be borne by the lessor, and a clause (e) empowering a Revenue-authority making a partition to direct in what proportion the stamp chargeable in respect of such partition shall be borne by the co-owners.

14. A question having been raised as to whether a public officer would be bound by section 34 of the Bill No. II to institute any inquiry regarding an instrument produced before him with a view to ascertaining whether such instrument was duly stamped, we have made it clear in section 33 of the amended Bill that all that he is bound to do is to examine such an instrument with a view to ascertaining whether it bears a stamp of the proper value and description. If, however, it should happen that the instrument was not duly stamped owing to some circumstance which did not appear on the face of it, as, e. g., if a stamp had been illegally affixed after execution, and this fact should appear incidentally in the course of some proceeding before the officer, it would of course be his duty to impound it and proceed in regard to it in the manner prescribed by the Act.

15. We have in section 35 provided that any person receiving a document in evidence under section 34 on payment of duty shall send the amount of such duty and of the penalty levied with it to the Collector.

16. Exception having been taken to the proviso to section 40 of Bill No. II, we have recast it (see section 39 of the amended Bill) and it now runs as follows:—

"Provided that no instrument which has been admitted in evidence upon payment of duty and a penalty under section 34 shall be so delivered before the expiration of one month from the date of such impounding, or if the Collector has certified that its further detention is necessary and has not cancelled such certificate."

17. We have added a provision in section 49 requiring references made by a Revenue Court under that section to be made through the Court immediately superior to it.

18. We have rendered Revenue Courts subject to the power of revision conferred by section 50.

19. We have omitted the latter portion of clause (a) of section 53 of the Bill No. II (now section 51) and clause (c) of the first proviso to the same section, as unnecessary in this country.

20. We have made the period of six months within which, under the second proviso to the same section, certain applications for allowances for spoiled stamps must be made, to run from the date on which the stamp is spoiled, instead of from the date of purchase.

21. We have transferred the power of making rules regarding the sale of stamps from the Governor General in Council to the Local Government.

22. We have inserted a section (59) like section 17 of the present Stamp Act, saving the provisions of the law relating to Court-fees.

23. We have raised the penalty in section 66 from five hundred to one thousand rupees, and restored in section 67 the penalty for post-dating bills and notes imposed by section 13 of Act X of 1862.

24. It having been represented to us that the permission accorded to private persons by section 66 of the Bill No. II to sell stamps purchased in good faith for their own private use and no longer required, would facilitate a practice which prevails in some parts of the country of keeping stocks of old stamps for sale to persons desiring to forge instruments of old date, we have in section 68 of the amended Bill withdrawn that permission and have substituted for it (in section 54) a provision borrowed from the English Act of 1870 requiring the Collector to purchase back stamps held by private persons and no longer required by them.

25. The provision of the Bill No. II relating to the jurisdiction to try offences against the stamp law having been objected to on the ground that it seemed to deprive the Court of Session of power to try such offences, we have now simply provided (in section 70) that no Magistrate whose powers are less than those of a Magistrate of the second class shall try such offences. Subject to this, the ordinary provisions of the law defining the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts will apply.

26. Proceeding next to the schedules, it will be observed that we have, with reference to the opinions expressed by many of the Authorities consulted, and to the dissents appended to our preliminary report, recast (in article 1 of the first schedule as now settled) the 46th article of the same schedule in the Bill No. II. That article now stands as follows :—

“1. Acknowledgment of a debt exceeding twenty rupees in amount or value written or signed by or on behalf of a debtor in order to supply evidence of such debt in any book (other than a banker's pass-book) or on a separate piece of paper when such book or paper is left in the creditor's possession.”

27. We have, on considering the representations made by certain articulated clerks who have already paid a fee of Rs. 500 under the present stamp-law on being bound, and who urge that article 27 of the first schedule would operate unfairly in their case, introduced an exemption in their favour in article 11 of the second schedule.

28. We have re-drawn the article of the first schedule relating to certified copies and extracts. It now runs as follows :—

“22. Copy or extract, certified to be a true copy or extract, by or by order of any public officer and not chargeable under the Court-fees Act, 1870.	{	(a). If the original was not chargeable with stamp-duty, or if the duty with which it was chargeable does not exceed one rupee ...	Eight annas.
		(b). In any other case...	One rupee.”

This involves a slight advance on the duties imposed by Bill No. II, but still gives a considerable reduction as compared with the present law.

29. We have relieved the brokers' and agents' notes referred to in article 46 of the first schedule (as now settled) from all duty in cases where the goods or securities comprised therein do not exceed twenty rupees in value.

30. We have, in article 50 of the first schedule, made the duty chargeable on a power-of-attorney depend on the number of persons appointed by it to act. It seems to us only reasonable that the powers so commonly executed in Bengal in favour of a large number of persons should bear a higher duty than an ordinary power in favour of two or three persons or the members of a single firm.

31. We have again, at the request of the Bengal Government, considered the proposal made by the Board of Revenue to tax a blank transfer of shares each time it passes from hand to hand; but we see no reason for altering our opinion regarding it. Indeed, it is not easy to see how the Board's proposal could be given effect to, inasmuch as there is but one transaction (contract or conveyance) in writing on which to impose a duty, namely, that between the first seller and the last purchaser. The intermediate steps, we understand, are effected simply by oral communication, and we are not prepared to recommend the enactment of a law altering the course of business in this respect.

32. We have in Schedule II, No. 15 (g), included among the instruments exempted from duty receipts given by headmen and lambardars for land-revenue and taxes collected by them.

33. We have afforded some additional relief in the exemption-schedule besides that just referred to, and have made several amendments in the drafting of the Bill which it seems unnecessary to notice in detail.

34. The Bill has been published in English in the Gazette of India and in all the local Gazettes except those of Assam and Ajmer, in which there are practical difficulties about publishing a Bill of this size. We recommend that it be passed with the amendments we have now made.

Provided that such vessel sails from or enters during the course of, or at the termination of, any such voyage a port in British India.

7. The Customs-Collector shall collect the Coast-light dues; and shall grant to the person paying the same a proper voucher in writing under his hand, setting forth the name of his office, the port at which the Coast-light dues are paid, and the name, tonnage and other proper description of the vessel in respect of which such payment is made.

8. Within twenty-four hours after the arrival within a port of any vessel chargeable with Coast-light dues, the master of such vessel shall give notice of such arrival to the Customs-Collector.

9. In order to ascertain the tonnage of any vessel chargeable with Coast-light dues, the following rules shall be observed:—

(a.)—If such vessel be a British registered vessel, or a vessel registered under Act No. X of 1841, or Act No. XI of 1850, or under any other law for the time being in force for the registration of vessels in India, the Customs-Collector may require the owner or Master of such vessel, or any person having possession of her register, to produce such register for inspection. If any such owner, Master or other person neglects or refuses to produce such register, or otherwise to satisfy the Customs-Collector as to what is the true tonnage of the vessel in respect of which such Coast-light dues are payable, he shall be punished with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees, and the Customs-Collector may cause such vessel to be measured and the tonnage thereof to be ascertained; and in such case the owner or Master of such vessel shall also be liable to pay the expenses of such measurement.

(b.)—If such vessel be not a British registered vessel, or a vessel registered under Act No. X of 1841, or Act No. XI of 1850, or under any other law for the being in force for the registration of vessels in India, and the owner or Master thereof fails to satisfy the Customs-Collector as to what is her true tonnage according to the mode of measurement prescribed by the law in force for the time being for regulating the measurement of British registered vessels, the Customs-Collector shall cause such vessel to be measured and the tonnage thereof, according to the mode aforesaid, to be ascertained; and in such case the owner or Master of such vessel shall be liable to pay the expenses of such measurement.

Explanation.—In this section “owner” includes any agent to whom the vessel referred to is consigned.

10. If the Master of any vessel refuses or neglects to pay to the Customs-Collector on demand by him the amount of any dues or expenses payable in respect of such vessel under this Act, the Customs-Collector may distrain or arrest such vessel, and the tackle, apparel and furniture belonging thereto, or any part thereof, and detain the same until the amount of such dues or expenses is paid; and in case any part of such dues or expenses, or of the costs of the distress or arrest, or of the keeping of the same, remains unpaid for the space of five days next after any such distress or arrest so made, the Customs-Collector may cause the vessel or other thing so distrained or arrested to be sold, and with the proceeds of such sale may satisfy such dues, expenses and costs, including the costs of sale remaining unpaid, and shall render the surplus (if any) to the Master of such vessel upon demand.

11. The officer of Government whose duty it is to grant a port-clearance to any vessel shall not grant such port-clearance until her Master, or some other person, has paid, or secured to the satisfaction of such officer, the amount of all dues, expenses and costs with which such vessel is chargeable under this Act, and of any fine to which any person is liable for anything done by him in contravention of this Act.

12. The Master of any vessel departing from or entering any port in British India upon, or in the course of, or at the termination of, any voyage, shall, upon the demand of the Customs-Collector, specify upon what voyage he is or has been bound.

13. If the Master of any vessel evades, or attempts to evade, the payment of any Coast-light dues, expenses or costs payable in respect of such vessel under this Act, he shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

Determination of Disputes under Act.

14. If any dispute arises as to whether any vessel is chargeable with any Coast-light dues, expenses or costs under this Act, or as to the amount of such dues, expenses or costs, such dispute shall, upon application made in that behalf by either of the disputing parties, be heard and determined by any Magistrate exercising powers under the Code of Criminal Procedure not less than those of a Magistrate of the second class, or in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay by a Presidency Magistrate; and the decision of such Magistrate shall be final.

Maulmain and Bassein Port-dues.

15. The port-due leviable under the Indian Ports Act, 1875, in either of the ports of Maulmain and Bassein, shall, to the extent of one anna six pie, be applicable in the first place to defray the expenses of maintaining the existing, port-lights of British Burma.

Prosecutions under other Laws.

16. Nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act: provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same act or omission.

SCHEDULE.

(See section 4.)

1. A voyage to or from Chittagong or any place west of the longitude of Chittagong—

(a) from or to any port in British Burma; or

(b) from or to Port Blair, or any place east of the longitude of Mergui, by a route passing between the northern extremity of the Andaman Islands and the coast of British Burma.

2. A voyage to or from any port in British Burma—from or to any other port in British Burma.

Except voyages to or from Maulmain from or to Tavoy or Mergui, or to or from Tavoy from or to Mergui.

3. A voyage to or from Rangoon and any port in British Burma west of the longitude of Rangoon—from or to any place east of Mergui.

4. A voyage to or from any port in British Burma other than Tavoy and Mergui—from or to Port Blair.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE present coast-light dues of one anna per ton levied under section 3 of Act XIII of 1867 (An Act to provide for the establishment and maintenance of Coast-lights in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal) have been found insufficient to pay a fair rate of interest on the capital expended on the lights which at present exist on the coast of British Burma and provide for their maintenance. Moreover, the recent total destruction of the Krishua Shoal Light-house will immediately entail a large expenditure. It has therefore been determined to raise the present coast-light dues from one anna per ton to one anna six pie and to subject to the dues vessels making certain voyages not mentioned in the Act but in the course of which they benefit by the lights. These voyages are—

- (a) voyages from ports in British Burma to Chittagong and places west of Chittagong;
- (b) voyages from Chittagong to ports in British Burma;
- (c) voyages by certain routes to or from Chittagong and places west of Chittagong (except Calcutta) from or to Port Blair and places east of Mergui;

- (d) voyages from places east of Mergui to Rangoon and from Rangoon and ports in British Burma west of Rangoon to places east of Mergui;
- (e) voyages to or from any port in British Burma other than Tavoy and Mergui from or to Port Blair.
2. The Bill repeals Act XIII of 1867 (which has already been amended) and re-enacts it in a cases mentioned in section 2, clause (b) of the Bill as introduced, to the case of elephants found in the immediate vicinity of canals.

3. We have enlarged the local extent of the Act so as to include not only the territories of British Burma, but also those of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Central Provinces and Coorg, and any other local area to which it may be extended by the local Government.

4. We have made its provisions applicable to the capture as well as to the killing of wild elephants.

5. We have, adopting the suggestion referred to by the Member in charge of the Bill when introducing it, provided, in section 4 of the Bill as now amended, that any elephant captured and the tusks of any elephant killed under section 3, clauses (a) and (b), without license, shall be the property of the Government.

6. We have made it clear that fees to be taken for licenses to kill and capture elephants may be taken in kind, that is to say, in tusks or in elephants as well as in money.

7. We have recast the principal penalty-section (now section 7), and have enhanced the maximum penalty (which, bearing in mind the value of an elephant, seemed to us inadequate) to five hundred rupees for each elephant concerned, and, in the case of a second conviction, from three months to six months' imprisonment,—the term fixed in the Indian Forest Act for the offence of killing an elephant in a reserved or protected forest. We have made the amount or value of any fee payable for a license recoverable as if it were an arrear of land revenue.

8. In view of the extended scope and local operation of the Act herein proposed, we have made a suitable alteration in the title of the Bill.

9. For the same reason, we recommend that the Bill as amended be republished.

10. The Bill has been published in English in the Gazette of India and in the British Burmah Gazette. The report from British Burma as to its publication in that province does not state that it has been published in the vernacular.

Proceedings of the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations.

Present:

HIS HONOR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL, presiding,
 The Hon'ble G. C. PAUL, Advocate-General,
 The Hon'ble C. T. BUCKLAND,
 The Hon'ble H. A. COCKERELL,
 The Hon'ble A. MACKENZIE,
 The Hon'ble J. O'KINEALY,
 The Hon'ble AMEER ALI,
 The Hon'ble MOULVI AMEER HOSSEIN,
 The Hon'ble RAJAH PRAMATHA NATHA ROY, BAHADOOR,
 The Hon'ble BABOO MOHINI MOHUN ROY,
 The Hon'ble BABOO KRISTODAS PAL, RAI BAHADOOR, C.I.E., and
 The Hon'ble J. B. KNIGHT, C.I.E.

The Hon'ble MR. MACKENZIE moved that the Bill to provide for the more ly realization of arrears of rent, and to amend the law relating to rent, be in Council. He had nothing to add to the lengthened statement with which he had troubled the Council on the last occasion. In discussing the Bill, the Council would do well to direct its attention to the principles involved in the measure than to the actual working of the sections of the Bill. As he had only two days' notice of the fact that the measure would be taken up by the Council, and the sections relating to occupancy rights and some other sections were drafted hurriedly and did not receive that full consideration which they required, he hoped they would be carefully considered in Committee. The principles of the measure had been carefully enunciated by him before, and if there was any ambiguity in the statement that he had made, he hoped that it would be pointed out in order that he might be afforded an opportunity to make any explanation that might be necessary. But the particular wording of the sections might, he thought, be left for consideration to the Select Committee.

The HON'BLE KRISTODAS PAL said that, when leave was asked to introduce this Bill by his hon'ble friend, he took the opportunity to express his satisfaction at the proposed legislation. He believed it was admitted on all hands that an amendment of the procedure for the trial of rent suits was a pressing necessity, and that the increased obligations which had been imposed on the landholders for the collection of the cesses had greatly aggravated that necessity. The Government for the last four years had been promising to introduce a Bill upon the subject, and the present measure he took to be in fulfilment of that promise. His hon'ble friend had just explained that the detailed provisions and the wording of the Bill should be discussed in Select Committee; at this meeting they should consider only the leading principles of this Bill. He might say at the outset that he generally concurred in the provisions of the Bill, and although some of the details might be open to objection, he thought the Bill, as it had been drafted, was well calculated to fulfil the object aimed at. There was, however, one important principle to which he was sorry he could not give his adhesion—it was the transferability of the right of occupancy. He might remind the Council that, when the Bill was originally drafted by the local Government, there was no provision authorizing the general transfer of the occupancy right. The Government was of opinion that some such provision would be beneficial to the tenantry, but in deference to the opinion of some zemindars, and also of the Government of India, the section was modified, and the sale of the occupancy tenure was limited to execution of decrees for arrears of rent. Subsequently the Government having taken the opinion of experienced revenue officers, had come to the conclusion that the recognition of the general transfer of the occupancy right would prove beneficial to both landlord and tenant, and so in the Bill laid before the Council that provision had been inserted. He must do the Government the justice to say that it had approached this subject with the utmost care and thought. He need hardly say that the question was one the importance of which could not be exaggerated; it affected the vital interests of the agricultural population of Bengal, and it was a question regarding which much might be said on both sides. He confessed that he approached the subject not without great diffidence and hesitation. When he observed that by far the greater portion of the able and experienced revenue officers consulted by the Government, many of the zemindars who had a direct interest in the question, and His Honor the President, thought that a measure of this kind would be beneficial to both landlord and tenant, BAJOO KRISTODAS PAL could not conceal that he felt great diffidence in expressing his dissent from their opinion. But as he honestly believed that, however benevolent and praiseworthy the object of the Government, the proposed measure would do more harm than good, he solicited permission to state his objections from the ryot's point of view, that was to say, how it would affect the interests of the ryot, although he did not wish to overlook the zemindar's point of view. He had carefully examined the papers circulated in connection with this Bill, and had also perused the very able and lucid speech with which his hon'ble friend introduced the Bill, and he had thus formulated the grounds upon which the measure was based as he gathered them from those documents:—

1st.—That the proposed measure would give permanence and security to the ryot's tenure.

2nd.—That it would raise the market value of the tenure.

- 3rd.—That it would hold out to the ryot an incentive to improved cultivation, and give him a direct interest in the improvement of his land.
- 4th.—That the improved financial position of the ryot would enable him to raise money on better terms.
- 5th.—That it would relieve him from dependence upon the landlord and the mahajun.
- 6th.—That it would introduce amongst the cultivating classes men with better means and knowledge for the cultivation of the land and the protection of their rights.
- 7th.—That it would enable unfortunate ryots to sell their tenures, and with the sale proceeds to start in business more suitable and remunerative.
- 8th.—That the right was not new; that it was recognised by custom, to which the proposed measure would only give legal sanction.
- 9th.—That the transfer being confined to the cultivating classes, and sub-letting being prohibited, which, however, was not the case now, the actual cultivator of the soil would not suffer.
- 10th.—That as the value of the tenure would increase by being declared saleable, the zemindar would not suffer, but would find facilities for the recovery of rent in case of default.

He hoped he had fairly summarised the grounds on which the Bill was founded, and he proposed to offer a few remarks in regard to each of them. The first ground was that the Bill would give permanent security to the ryot's tenure. Now he thought, and any one who would carefully read the provisions of Act X of 1859 would allow, that as long as the occupancy ryot paid his rent his tenure was secure; and as under the law the tenure was heritable, that was to say descendible from generation to generation, the occupancy ryot also enjoyed the element of permanence. It was not proposed in this Bill that the occupancy ryot's rent should not be liable to enhancement, or that his liability to regular payment of rent should be in any way relaxed. All that was now proposed was that the ryot should have the right of alienating his property at his own will for his own requirements, or in satisfaction of the rent of the land. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL did not therefore see how this new provision would in any way give greater permanence and security to the ryot's tenure than what already existed under the present law. Surely it would not be pretended that in the right to sell consisted permanence and security, and not in the right to possess and inherit. So much then for the contention that this Bill would give greater permanence and security to the ryot than he now possessed under Act X of 1859.

The second point was that it would raise the market value of the tenure. He did not deny such a proposition. Certainly, if a tenure could be brought to market it would fetch a value. At present, whatever might be the custom in certain parts of the country, under the law an occupancy tenure was only heritable and not transferable, and as it could not be thrown upon the market, it had not a market value; so that, if the occupancy tenure was brought to market for sale, it would certainly have a market value, and as the exchange of land would progress, the market value was likely to rise; but would this rise in the market value of the occupancy tenure compensate the attendant evils which he was afraid the ryot would be exposed to? Would the sale proceeds of the occupancy tenure be a sufficient compensation for the ruin which would seize the ryot by the mere fact of the loss of his tenure? The people of this country, it was well known, had a deep attachment to the soil, and any facilities given to the sale of landed property could not justly be considered as conducive to their best interests and welfare. He was fully alive to the maxims of political economy as to the advantages of the circulation of capital. But they must deal with facts and not with theories; they ought to look to the real circumstances of the country, the sentiments and feelings of the people, to their every day life, to their habits and thoughts; and if it was found that the people were so much attached to the land, and that the loss of the land under the facilities offered for sale would deprive the ryot and his family of the means of obtaining their livelihood, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL did not think that the Legislature ought to take a step which would hasten such an undesirable and unfortunate result.

The third point was that it would hold out to the ryot an incentive to improved cultivation and give him a direct interest in the improvement of his land. Now, hon'ble members were aware that the agriculturists of this country did as much as they could for the utilization of their lands; that they had a keen sense of what was remunerative to them, and that, if they found any new staple likely to be more profitable than the old staples to which they were accustomed, they did not hesitate to take to it. This had been seen in the case of jute and seeds, and latterly in the case of tea. Hon'ble members could not be unaware that native gentlemen had lately directed their attention to tea, seeing the large profits made by Tea Companies. Knowing, then, as they did, that the agriculturists in Bengal were fully alive to their own interests, it was hardly likely that they would neglect them, because they had not the right to transfer their tenures; the occupancy ryot had that interest in the land which fully secured to him the fruits of his own labour. He could now appropriate to himself the whole of the profits he made from his land, subject to the payment of rent, or to the adjustment of rent in case of enhancement. But exclusive of rent, whatever he earned from his land went to his own pocket, and BABOO KRISTODAS PAL did not think that the transferability of the ryot's tenure would make any alteration in his position in that respect. It might be said that the ryot was impecunious, that his resources were limited, and that he could not carry out improvements for want of capital; that, if his tenure were declared saleable or transferable, he would have facilities for raising money upon it, and thus improving his land. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL was prepared to believe that if facilities be offered to the transfer of land, the ryot would get an advance with greater ease; but it was open to question whether such facility to borrow money would prove in the end advantageous to him or not. Improvements which would materially alter the character of the cultivation in the country could not be effected with the small capital at the disposal of the ryot. That required a large outlay, and in so far the ryot's exertions could not prove much successful. As for small improvements, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL thought that, where the ryots cared for such improvements, they were able to effect them without being under the necessity of encumbering their land: indeed, if it came to this, that improvements could not be effected without the transfer of the land, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL would rather have no improvement than give the ryot facilities to improve himself off his land.

The next point was that the ryot would have a direct interest in the improvement of the land. He had already pointed out that the ryot did now possess a direct interest in the improvement of his land, and en passant he might remark that, according to custom in different parts of the country, the transfer of the occupancy tenure was now going on, and he would ask how far had the ryot availed himself of the custom in effecting improvements? If the intention of the proposed measure was to assist the ryot in raising capital for improvements, he hoped his hon'ble friend was prepared to show that, under the operation of the custom already prevalent in several parts of the country, the ryot had been able to effect those improvements which it was the object of this Bill to help him to effect.

The fourth question was intimately connected with the third, that the Bill would improve the financial position of the ryot in enabling him to raise money on easier terms. In discussing the third point, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL had in a manner anticipated the fourth. He would only say that the greater the facilities offered for obtaining loans of money, the greater would be the facility afforded to the ryot to encompass his own ruin. He need hardly remind hon'ble members that the tendency of legislation in the other provinces had been to restrict as much as possible the sale of land for debts. Here, on the contrary, it was proposed to offer as much facility as possible for the alienation of land either in execution of decrees or by private agreement. He considered this tendency in Bengal legislation not consistent with what was going on in other parts of the country, not to say that it was calculated to work most mischievously.

The fifth point was that it would release the ryot from dependence upon the landlord and the mahajun. He confessed that he did not clearly under-and this point. If it was contended that the recognition of the transferability of the occupancy tenure would so much raise the ryot above want, that it would release him altogether from the books of the money-lender, and of his landlord, who was sometimes also a money-lender. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL could not subscribe to that opinion. It might release the ryot in one way; it might release him from dependence upon the landlord, because he would be sold out in case of debt, but BABOO KRISTODAS PAL did not believe that that was a consideration which had influenced the introduction of this clause in the Bill.

The sixth point was that it would introduce amongst the cultivating classes men with better means and knowledge for the cultivation of the land and the protection of their rights. He did hope with his hon'ble friend opposite that primary education, which was now spreading rapidly amongst the masses, would gradually enable the ryots to better understand their duties and to protect their right and interests more effectually than they now did; but he hoped his hon'ble friend did not consider that the present cultivators of the soil should be supplanted by another body of men who did not now cultivate the soil. If the present cultivators were ousted from their lands, what would be their means of subsistence? How would they live? Their position then would be simply one of serfdom; they would be pauperised and reduced to serfage. It was certainly desirable, in the general interests of society, that the system of cultivation should be improved; but he believed it would be acknowledged by all right-thinking men, that the means to that end should be through the education and advancement of the existing body of cultivators, and not by supplanting them by a class of small capitalists,—a process which would leave them no alternative but to throw themselves upon the resources of the State in times of difficulty and distress.

The seventh point was that it would enable unfortunate ryots to sell their tenures, and with the sale proceeds to start in new business more suitable and remunerative. This being an agricultural country, the people looked up to agriculture chiefly as a means of livelihood. Agriculture did not require much labour or capital; with a pair of bullocks and a plough, and with his own labour, the ryot could cultivate the soil and make a living for himself and his family. If he had recourse to either trade or industry, he must bring more capital, more labour, and more intelligence. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL did not think that the bulk of the agricultural population were in a position to take to other callings, and in the long run he thought they would find it more economical and remunerative to follow their present occupations than to have recourse either to trade or industry. Men, who would not succeed in agriculture, he might say in nine cases out of ten, would not probably succeed in any other occupation at all; and it was therefore vain to hope that men who had failed in agriculture would, with the sale proceeds of their tenures, be able to start successfully in any other path in life. He need hardly say that, when a man had failed in agriculture, his tenure would be then probably not worth much, because it was most likely to be burdened with encumbrances and very little would be left to him after satisfying his creditors; so that, in starting in new business under the circumstances mentioned, his capital would be small, and with such small capital it would be idle to expect that he would be able to enter upon a new career successfully. Accordingly the advantages supposed to be conferred on the impecunious ryot by the transferability of his tenure appeared to be wholly illusory.

The eighth point was that the right proposed to be recognised was not new, that it was already in existence according to custom, and that the proposed measure would simply give legal sanction to it. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL did not deny that according to custom the transfer of occupancy tenures was taking place of late years in different districts. On this point there was, however, a wide divergence of opinion. In the first place the High Court, by its Full Bench rulings, had held that an occupancy tenure was heritable, but not transferable. As for custom, it did hardly apply to the modern occupancy ryot who was the creature of Act X of 1859: the custom referred to in that Act must have had antecedent existence, but the occupancy tenure, founded on twelve years' continuous possession, had had no such existence; the custom upon which reliance was placed was applicable to khloodkasht tenures of old and not to modern occupancy tenures, but for some reason or other, under colour of that custom, transfers, he admitted, were going on. It might, however, be fairly asked that, if under custom the transfer of the occupancy tenure was already recognised, why was it considered necessary to give legal sanction to it. The answer probably would be that there was uncertainty; that the custom was not everywhere the same; that the rulings of the Courts had not been the same; and that consequently it was desirable and expedient to give legal sanction to that custom. For his own part, if he were permitted to say it, he would suggest that this custom should be correctly interpreted, and that the absolute sale of ryotti tenures should be stopped at once. From the days of the permanent settlement it had always been a moot question whether a person occupying the position of a khloodkasht ryot had the power of sale. Practically, however, it was admitted that he enjoyed the right and power of sale, but the khloodkasht ryot and the modern occupancy ryot were two distinct individuals. As his hon'ble friend himself said in introducing the Bill, the khloodkasht ryot had an occupancy right from the days of the perpetual settlement; but the mere squatter for 12 years was a ryot of yesterday; he had therefore no traditional right and claim on the ground of natural justice. But Act X of 1859 had confounded the two, and had, by conferring the right upon the mere squatter, done a grievous wrong to the resident khloodkasht ryot of 80 years ago. This Bill, however, made no distinction between the khloodkasht ryot of old and the occupancy ryot of yesterday; it in fact gave the right of transfer to both, and, by doing so, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL for one thought that it offended one's sense of natural justice.

He now came to the ninth point, which was that the transfer being confined to the cultivating classes, and sub-letting being prohibited, which was, however, not the case at present, the actual cultivators of the soil would not suffer. He must frankly admit that the hon'ble framers of the Bill had taken the utmost care to minimise the evils of the proposed measure. By confining the occupancy right to the bonâ fide cultivator, this Bill would give effect to the original intentions of the Legislature in creating the occupancy right. He humbly thought that, when that right was conferred by Act X of 1859, it was intended solely for the benefit of the actual cultivators of the soil; but unfortunately by the use of one word "held," wide scope had been given to the provision of the law, and this right, which was intended to be confined to the actual cultivator, had been held to apply to persons in the position of middlemen.

With the decisions of the High Court favouring sub-letting, the occupancy tenant of these days had become a middleman, a mere rent receiver, and the result had been that the actual cultivator had been the greatest loser. It was the sweat of his brow which supported the whole body of the superior holders, from the occupancy jotedar to the zemindar in the highest link of the chain, and the sub-letting system, it could not be denied, was detrimental to the best interests of the peasantry. The hon'ble framers of the Bill had therefore done well by confining the occupancy right to the cultivating class and also by restricting sale to that class, and more substantially so by prohibiting sub-letting. But the question was whether the Bill, as it had been framed, would really keep out the small capitalist class—he meant the mahajans and petty traders—from ousting occupancy tenants from their tenures. A cultivator was defined to be he who cultivated the land with his own hands or by means of hired labour. Now that term "hired labour" left, he thought, a very wide door open. He did not mean that hired labour could be dispensed with in the economy of agriculture in this country. Women, children and diseased and infirm men could not be expected to work with their own hands; there were persons who were by rules of caste prohibited from touching the plough, and they must employ hired labour; but when hired labour was permitted, would not the man whom it was sought to keep out come in and cultivate the land? Would not the money-lender come in? It might be said that hired labour was not always remunerative; that the money-lender would not find the employment of hired labour so profitable as to have recourse to it; but there was the system of bhaggjote—of cultivation in common—between the holder of the tenure and the producer; the usual arrangement was that the person giving the labour and cultivating the land took half the produce and left the other half to the holder of the land. That arrangement would in effect be the employment of hired labour for the purpose of cultivation. The Bill as framed did not mean to discourage or discountenance that system of cultivation. Then it was well known that the benamsee system prevailed very largely in this country, and rival zemindars, he was afraid, would not be slow to take advantage of the new law and purchase occupancy tenures benamsee with the view to annoy and harass their rivals. In that way social forces would be brought into play, which might deprive the actual cultivators of the land by which they derived their sustenance; so that, notwithstanding all the safeguards which had been introduced in the Bill, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL doubted whether the land would be really kept in the hands of those who now held it, if a general recognition of the transfer of the occupancy tenure were sanctioned by law.

The last point was that, as the value of the tenure would rise by being declared salcable, the zemindar would find facilities for the recovery of rent in case of default. Now, he admitted that, if the occupancy tenure had a value, the sale of it for rent would satisfy the demand of the zemindar; in that respect he would acquire a facility in the recovery of rent. But had he no other means for recovering his rent? From the earliest times the zemindar enjoyed the right of eviction. By referring to the laws of the permanent settlement it would be found that the right of eviction was inherent in the zemindar, and it was only to protect the occupancy or khoddkasht ryot against arbitrary eviction that section 6 of Act X of 1859 was introduced, and the power of eviction was clogged in various ways. It might be said that the eviction of the tenant was a harsh and cruel measure. So it was in the abstract, just as the Sunset Law considered in the abstract was a harsh and cruel measure. But look at the practical effects of the Sunset Law! It had taught the zemindar punctuality, prudence, and providence; it had enabled the State to collect revenue with clock-work regularity, and yet there was the law which many theorists considered was a blot upon the Statute Book, but so far as BABOO KRISTODAS PAL was aware, the zemindars did not complain of it, nor did it practically do any harm to the landed interests. In the same way, if the present law of eviction were altered (at present there could be no eviction for default in the payment of rent except at the end of a year), if in accordance with the provision for quarterly instalments, facilities for eviction in default of such instalments were given, the rent of the zemindar would be recovered with the same regularity and punctuality with which the revenue was realised by Government. It might be asked, would that measure benefit the ryot? If eviction was allowed, then the ryot would go out without receiving anything for the land which he would vacate; on the other hand, if the tenure were sold, the ryot would at any rate get something as a surplus from the sale proceeds after satisfying the arrears due. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL admitted that; but he held that, if eviction were allowed for quarterly default, very few tenants would practically go out; the ryot would know that, if he defaulted in the payment of his rent, his tenure would be resumed, and thus he would lose all he had in the world, and he would therefore be very careful in meeting the landlord's demand, just as the zemindar now was; the latter might beg or borrow, but pay the revenue he must; and it was generally found that before sunset approached the revenue was deposited in the Collectorate. In the same way BABOO KRISTODAS PAL was persuaded that, if eviction were allowed, recourse to that remedy for default would become very rare, and so what might in theory be considered a harsh and severe measure, would practically operate to the benefit both of the landlord and the tenant.

Having considered the different grounds upon which, as BABOO KRISTODAS PAL conceived, the Bill had been founded, he would just glance at the official opinions upon which some stress was laid by his hon'ble friend in his speech at the last meeting of the Council. He had said already that by far the greater majority of the officials had supported the proposals of Government. But there was a residuum, consisting of some very able, experienced, and distinguished officers, who did hold contrary opinions on the subject. He found in the first place that the Collectors of Backergunge and Tipperah had expressed their opinions against the proposal which BABOO KRISTODAS PAL had been discussing. In the report of the Board of Revenue he read—

“Both the Collectors of Backergunge and Tipperah are of opinion that the sale of occupancy rights to satisfy debts due by ryots should not be legalized. It would introduce all kinds of confusion. Mr. Barton thinks that, in Eastern Bengal at least, ryots need no further protection, nor further immunities, than they have at present. In many cases, as it is, the ryots are the masters and the zemindars the servants.”

Then Mr. Lyall said—

“It is doubted whether the occupancy right would, as assumed by Mr. Reynolds, be purchased in most cases by ryots of the same class and position as the former tenants.”

and so he thought it would go out of the hands of the present class of cultivators. Then Mr. Peacock, Commissioner of the Dacca Division, than whom BABOO KRISTODAS PAL believed there was not in the service a more reasonable, moderate, and even-minded officer, did not advocate a general recognition of the transfer of the occupancy right, but would confine it only to the execution of rent decrees. He said—

“I am on the whole inclined to recommend that occupancy rights should be liable to be sold in execution of a decree for rent when the judgment-creditor applies for execution to issue against such right. It will then rest with the zemindar to adopt this course, if such a sale would be more convenient than the direct resumption of the holding, and not otherwise. As regards the sale by private agreement of such a holding, I see no objection to the ryot being allowed to do so with his zemindar's consent. This would prevent the latter's interests from being prejudiced in cases where he was opposed to such a sale, and, on the other hand, it would not debar such sales from being effected in cases where the zemindar was willing that this should be done.”

Such was Mr. Peacock's opinion, though BABOO KRISTODAS PAL for one would not give the power to sell even with the zemindar's consent. Mr. Edgar, Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling, wrote—

“It seems to me that the question of making occupancy rights transferable by private sale differs in many respects from that of making them liable to sale instead of to ejectment for arrears of rent. The latter, with proper safeguards against fraud on the part of the landlord, would be, I think, an unmixed benefit to the ryot and no injury to the zemindar, while I do not see how in practice it could have a tendency to transfer the land to undesirable classes. I have much more hesitation about the former measure.”

Then Dr. Field, an experienced judicial officer and one who had studied the revenue laws with great care, held that the occupancy tenure should not be sold, except on certain conditions which he had himself recommended for the amendment of the law. And the last, though not the least, was Mr. Hodgkinson, late Collector of Moorshedabad, and now Judicial Commissioner of British Burmah, who said—

“It is believed that to make the tenure saleable would (1) be an undoubted advantage to the ryot, and (2) on the other hand it would frequently be a convenience to the zemindar to be able to realize arrears of rent by the sale of the tenure, instead of resuming direct possession of the land. I join issue with both these conclusions.”

He then discussed the question at length, and incidentally remarked—

“The first feature of the change which will be made apparent to a body of cultivators, nine out of ten of whom are in debt, is the increased facility with which they can borrow money—a feature not calculated to arrest improvidence among an improvident class. The mahajun will then take care that no other feature is allowed to present itself.”

This was a conclusion to which BABOO KRISTODAS PAL endeavoured to draw the attention of the Council in his opening remarks. Then Mr. Hodgkinson pointed out another disadvantage which would flow from the general recognition of the transfer of the occupancy right. In paragraph 15 he said—

“In districts where industries are carried on by European or native capital, requiring for the production of the subject-matter of the industry an amount of land more or less under the control of the capitalist, there would be a great danger of his becoming a large monopolist of land in neighbourhoods where he required it, were occupancy tenures transferable. In the three principal indigo districts of Behar tenures would be bought up all around the factories, the good land put into indigo, the bad land made over to cultivators at comparatively high rates.”

None knew better than the Hon'ble President what a struggle there had all along been between the indigo-planter and the zemindar for the acquisition of land for the cultivation of indigo. As had been justly pointed out by

Mr. Hodgkinson, if this facility of acquiring the occupancy tenure were given, the indigo-planter and others who were engaged in manufactures of indigo and other staples would find a speedy means of buying up occupancy tenures. It might be asked how would the planter acquire the tenure, because he would not be a bonâ fide cultivator; but the clause which sanctioned the employment of hired labour would help him. He would employ hired labour and would come in the category of an occupancy tenant, and the great disadvantage to the ryot would be this, that where the zemindar and the indigo-planter were at loggerheads, the ryot had at least one person to protect him, either the zemindar or the planter; but when the ryot would come into direct contact with the planter, there would be no buffer between the two, and the ryot would be utterly helpless. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL would not enlarge upon this point, because it had been so well brought out by Mr. Hodgkinson in his letter.

Now he had shown the Council what the balance of official opinion was on this question, and from what he had said, it was clear how the case stood. The occupancy tenant was divisible into two classes—firstly, the khoddkhast or the old resident ryot; and secondly, the modern occupancy tenant or the ryot of yesterday. The khoddkhast ryot had always an occupancy tenure; the modern ryot had not. But the two had been lumped together. The right of transfer of the khoddkhast tenure was recognized in many cases in practice, though not distinctly recognized in law; but the modern squatter who had been converted into an occupancy tenant was now proposed to be invested with the right of absolute transfer. The Bill did not make any distinction between the two, and perhaps it would be difficult to make a distinction. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL did not wish to go into the equities of the question as to whether the modern squatter should be allowed to hold the occupancy right or not; but viewing the whole agricultural population as one body, and looking to their actual circumstances, he was constrained to say that the proposed measure would have a most prejudicial effect upon them, as it would encourage them to incur debt, and ultimately to lose their tenures in order to satisfy their creditors. It was observable that the Legislature evinced the most generous sympathy with the agricultural population in all parts of the country. The Civil Procedure Code provided that in payment of debts agricultural implements and cattle should be exempted from attachment and sale; but what would be the practical effect of the present Bill in relation to that clause of the Civil Procedure Code? What good would there be in exempting agricultural implements and cattle from attachment for debt when the land would be liable to be sold and the ryot turned out of his hearth and home? The proposed measure would be thus inconsistent with the tendency of recent legislation for the rest of India, and productive of great injustice to the agricultural population of Bengal.

There was one point to which BABOO KRISTODAS PAL thought he ought to draw the attention of the Council particularly. It was this: that if the sale of occupancy tenures was to be confined to the agricultural classes, the zemindar must always be on the qui vive to see that every person who acquired the occupancy right should fulfil the legal condition, namely, that he should cultivate the land with his own hands or by means of hired labour; that he should not in any way use the land for the purpose of receiving rent, and that meant constant watchfulness and perhaps frequent litigation on the one hand, or frequent corruption of the zemindar's amlah on the other. It was not possible for the zemindar to know personally what ryot was actually fulfilling the condition of cultivation of the land; he must leave that task to his amlah or ministerial officers, and these must be always on the look-out to see whether the ryot did fulfil the condition of cultivating the land: in that way a wide door would be left open for continual harassment, annoyance, and litigation.

BABOO KRISTODAS PAL had incidentally alluded to the experience of other provinces on the subject. He need hardly invite the attention of the Council to the report of the Commission appointed by the Government of Bombay for investigation of the Deccan riots some four years ago. That report had since been made the basis of legislation, and he found from the reports of the Council of the Governor-General that the Hon'ble Mr. Cockerell had introduced a Bill the other day for the relief of indebted ryots in the Deccan, the main object of which was to put restrictions upon the sale of land for debt. Well, in the same way the Civil Procedure Code, as he had already stated, had put restrictions upon the sale or attachment of agricultural implements and cattle for debt and upon the sale of land for unsecured debts. He was reading the other day the report of Mr. Elliott, the Famine Commissioner of Mysore, and he came across the following paragraph in that report: it was a very interesting and instructive paragraph. Mr. Elliott said—

“A custom has grown up (not, as far as I could learn, confirmed by any legal authority) under which he possesses a transferable interest in the land he cultivates, and this right of sale and mortgage is being followed by the same baneful results as in other parts of India. The ownership of the land is fast passing out of the hands of those who are directly interested in it. Anyone who, in technical language, “tests the jamabandi,”—that is, who takes the village papers and walks over the fields to compare the actual with the recorded facts,—will learn that this field belongs to a Brahmin at Seringapatam, and that to a revenue official at the head-quarters of the district, and the third perhaps to a trader in Bangalore. Not single fields only, but large blocks of land, and sometimes whole villages, are alienated in this way; and the actual cultivator, the old owner, remains on the worst and most precarious of tenures, a metayer tenancy-at-will, paying half the crop to the distant proprietor. In this way, the glory of the roytwari system, the union of cultivating and proprietary rights in one person, is departing from it, and the zemindari system is growing up without a traditional basis, without historical justification, and without the careful protection of subordinate rights which the experience of three generations has introduced to remedy the evils inherent in the less simple tenure which prevails in Upper India.”

BABOO KRISTODAS PAL asked the Council to consider whether, by legislation in this Council, it was desirable or expedient to push the tenantry in Bengal to that condition. There was sub-infeudation enough in Bengal, but it was now proposed to prohibit the sub-letting of occupancy tenures. He thought that was a step in the right direction; but if they sanctioned the sale of occupancy tenures in the way proposed, they would, he was afraid, introduce into Bengal the same condition of things which had taken place in Mysore, and which the Mysore Commissioner had depicted in such vivid colours. It might be said that the condition of the peasantry in Mysore, in Bombay, in Northern India, in Central India, was quite different from that of the peasantry in Bengal. He did not quite understand that argument. In what respect did the social and domestic economy of the peasant in Bengal differ from that of his brother in Bombay and other provinces. There was perhaps one cause of difference to the credit of Bengal. The Bengal peasants were not turbulent and therefore not a source of political danger; whereas in some of the other provinces they were more or less so, and therefore for them it was not considered expedient to allow the transfer of land. But in other respects the condition of the cultivators in all the provinces was the same, and if it was the duty of Government to maintain the peasantry in a happy and prosperous state, the same considerations which induced the Government to bar the sale of land in the other provinces ought to apply to the province of Bengal—

He would also draw the attention of the Council to a feeling which widely prevailed amongst the landed gentry of Bengal in favour of a law of entail.

[HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT observed that the law of entail was hardly a question which was connected with the subject of discussion before the Council, and the hon'ble member should therefore confine his remarks to the question in hand.]

He was merely referring to the subject by way of analogy. He meant that the peasantry of Bengal, by the recognition of the right of occupancy, heritable but not transferable, did practically enjoy that law of entail which the landed gentry had not.

He had noticed at some length what he conceived to be the weak points of the proposed measure. He had done so, he repeated, with the greatest diffidence and hesitation, because he found, as he had already said, the opinions of very able and very experienced gentlemen opposed to his. But he felt very strongly on the subject, and had endeavoured to express his opinion honestly and frankly. The question before the Council was one of the greatest moment to the people of Bengal. It was not a personal question, it was not a party question, it was not a race question, it was not a Government question, but a question which would affect millions at the present day, and probably many more millions in the future. His Honor the President had been anxious to provide means for the support of the people suffering from distress at times of famine or scarcity, and the Government of India had founded an Insurance Fund for that purpose. But the best means of insuring the people from such calamities in his opinion was to place them in such a position that they might by their own exertions be able to cope with them. If, however, facilities were given to the peasantry to part with their lands, they would lose the most potent engine for warding off such calamities. If the land was gone, as the Bengali adage had it, everything else was gone, and taking that view, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL humbly dissented from the proposed measure, because it would help the ryot to get rid of his land. He did not wish to make any formal motion; but, as the whole question would be discussed in Select Committee, the arguments and considerations which he had endeavoured to advance would, he hoped, be taken into consideration by the Committee.

BABOO MOHINI MOHUN ROY entirely agreed with the hon'ble member who had just addressed the Council, that this Bill proposed to make very substantial changes in the substantive law of the country, and he also shared in the hon'ble member's apprehensions and misgivings as to the probable consequences of such changes. He had intended to make a few observations in connection with this question, but he found that the arguments against the principle of the measure had been put so well by the hon'ble member who preceded him in his exhaustive speech, that he would not weary the Council by going over the same ground. But he would say this, that the matter was beset with considerable difficulties, and was of the greatest importance. He would therefore suggest that this Bill should be referred to a Select Committee without pledging hon'ble members to the principle of the transfer of the right of occupancy as prescribed in this Bill, and thus leave the entire matter open in the hands of the Select Committee.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said—"I will not follow the hon'ble gentleman through his arguments, because they relate generally to points regarding which the views of Government have already been very fully expressed. I was quite prepared to find that there would be some little difference of opinion as to the principles of the Bill, though I hardly expected that it would take the form it has done. As has been correctly stated, the Bill relates to two very distinct and separate principles—one is more directly in the interest of the landlord, the other in the interest of the tenant. The first is intended to give to the landlords more effective, speedy, and summary means of obtaining the rents justly due to them, and to save them and the tenants from the protracted, dilatory, and expensive processes of law to which they are now confined; and as regards this, I am glad to find that there is entire unanimity of opinion in this Council. It is a measure which has been declared necessary in the face of the experiences of the past few years by the most able revenue officers of Government, and by those interested in the collection of rents, and on this point we all seem to be agreed.

As to the second principle, however, there seems to be a decided difference of opinion. I expected to find some opposition to the measure on behalf of the landholders; but I must say I was very much startled to find that the persons who objected to the recognition of tenant-right were not the landlords, but the tenants, and that they had chosen as their mouthpiece my hon'ble friend, who has so long and so ably acted as Assistant Secretary to the Landholders' Association. It seems that on their behalf he has been instructed to represent that by giving greater legal value to a right which they already possess, and by declaring and defining their rights in their tenures, and endeavouring to ensure that those rights are respected by others, they fear that in that we shall be doing them a mischief. We shall, it is said, be giving them something which is of such tangible value that they will be able to raise money on it at 6 or 7 per cent. instead of at 50 or 100 per cent., and they are apprehensive that the possession of the property and these facilities for raising money on low interest, or at moderate interest, will prove such a temptation to them, that they may be induced to involve themselves in debt, and eventually sell their lands to pay these debts; and in this way it is urged on their behalf that, instead of giving them security of tenure, we shall end by throwing all the occupancy tenants' lands into the market, to be bought by bunniahs and money-lenders. Now this is a startling theory; but the remedy proposed on behalf of the ryots, and by the ryots' friend, is very much more startling. We are told that what they really require to give security of tenure and the fullest possible advantage from their tenant right, is not a legal and definable definition of that right, with power to obtain the full value for it if circumstances compel them to part with it, but the right of being summarily evicted if they don't pay their rents by a particular hour on a particular day, without receiving the very slightest consideration for the value of the right of which they will be deprived. It is stated on their behalf that, if they are rendered liable to eviction, the great principles of prompt and punctual payment of their debts will be impressed upon their minds in such a practical form that we shall never hear anything more of arrears of rent, or suits for the recovery of rent.

The hon'ble gentleman proceeded to say that this right to be evicted, which he demands for his clients, would place them in precisely the same position as the landlords, under what he describes as the Sunset Law—meaning the law for the sale of estates for arrears of revenue. Now, I expected to hear my hon'ble friend state that he intended to move for an amendment of that law in such a manner that the zemindars shall be subjected to immediate and prompt eviction from their estates in the event of their revenue not being paid to the minute, without any recourse to sale or transfer, and absolutely without any consideration for the value of their rights. My hon'ble friend, however, was not consistent and logical enough to do this; and if he does, I warn him that I shall be compelled to oppose any such act of spoliation; but obviously till he does this, he cannot compare an evicted tenant to a landlord whose estate is sold for arrears. All that we ask is that the zemindars shall show to their occupancy tenants some of the consideration that they demand for themselves. My hon'ble friend alluded to Mr. Elliott's description of the evil arising from the transfer of landed property in Mysore; but even if Mr. Elliott's conclusions are just and right as regards Mysore, they describe a state of things which could never possibly arise under the Bill now under discussion. Mr. Elliott talks of land being parted with by the ryots to non-cultivating classes, and to a money-lender or Government servant in a distant part of the country; but the most cursory glance at this Bill will show that such a consequence and such a condition of things has been most carefully guarded against and could not possibly arise. The hon'ble gentleman must surely know too much of the people to suppose that a bunniah or money-lender would, instead of putting his money out at a rate of interest anything between 20 and 100 per cent., be contented to accept the position of a resident cultivator, facing all the risks of season and market. He speaks of the ryots of Bengal as only distinguished from those of other parts of India, in so far as they are peaceful, quiet people, incapable of turbulent conduct, and therefore undeserving of consideration and attention on the part of Government. But if I have heard of one fact more than another in the many able letters of the British Indian Association, it has been of the necessity of legislation to meet the turbulent and lawless conduct of the tenantry, especially of Eastern Bengal. I must say that, with my long experience of the grievances of the ryots, I have never heard any of them express repugnance to tenant-right, or a desire for eviction; but, as I said before, that is an objection raised on their behalf, while no objections of any kind have been raised on behalf of the zemindars; and as we are all therefore of one mind so far, that we all desire to guard the ryot in the possession of the land, I think that we may leave the details with which this common object can be best effected to the Select Committee. If an objection had been raised to the principle of the Bill on the score of undue protection of the ryot by those who represent the zemindar, it might have been necessary to come to a vote on the question of principle before reading the Bill in Council."

The motion that the Bill be read in Council was then put and carried.

On the motion of the HON'BLE MR. MACKENZIE the Bill was referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble the Advocate-General, the Hon'ble Mr. O'Kincaly, the Hon'ble Mr. Inglis, the Hon'ble Kristodas Pal, the Hon'ble Rajah Pramatha Natha Roy, the Hon'ble Mohini Mohun Roy, the Hon'ble Moulvi Ameer Hossein, and the Mover, with instructions to report in six weeks.

The Council then adjourned till Saturday the 25th instant.

SCHEME FOR THE GRADING OF THE SUBORDINATE OFFICERS IN THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT.—EDUCATION.

Calcutta, the 21st January 1879.

RESOLUTION.

- This Government letter No. 3128, dated the 6th November 1877, recommending the scheme proposed by the Director for the sanction of the Government of India.
- A letter No. 2, dated 2nd January 1878, from the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, suggesting a modification of the extent of the scheme.
- This Government letter No. 217, dated 12th January 1878, accepting the decision of the Government of India on this point.
- Endorsement No. 110, dated 25th April 1878, from the Home Department of the Government of India, forwarding copy of a despatch to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, recommending the scheme for sanction.
- Endorsement No. 187, dated the 23rd July 1878, from the Home Department of the Government of India, forwarding copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, sanctioning the scheme on the understanding that the expense involved is charged to the provincial revenues of the Lower Provinces.
- A letter No. 18, dated 27th December 1878, from the Director of Public Instruction, submitting for the orders of Government a graded nominal roll of the subordinate officers of the Education Department.

THE proposal to include in a regular graded service all the subordinate officers of the Education Department has now been before Government for some years. In September 1867 the Director of Public Instruction sketched the outline of a scheme for establishing ten grades of educational officers at an additional cost to Government of a lakh-and-a-half of rupees per annum. This, however, was indefinitely postponed in 1870, partly owing to the general reduction of expenditure which was then necessary, and partly because the scheme could not readily be reconciled with other administrative changes in the department which were contemplated at the time.

2. In September 1877 the proposal was again brought forward by the present Director of Public Instruction in the first letter cited in the preamble to this resolution. Mr. Croft urged that the principles involved in grading the subordinate officers of the Education Department had already received the approval of Government, and that the reasons for improving the position of those officers were at least as forcible now as in 1870. He pointed out that, under existing arrangements, great difficulty had been found in attracting the best students of the University into the Education Department, and that the class of men who were specially suited for teaching work of a high order were deterred by the absence of definite prospects of promotion from accepting the lower-paid appointments. He stated that the establishment of a graded service would go far to remove these difficulties and to place educational work on the same level as a profession as the other branches of Government service. The certainty of attaining in the course of five years to a salary considerably exceeding that of appointment would practically equalise the value of the minimum and maximum rates of pay; and if the number of appointments in each class was fixed so as to bear a fair proportion to that in the class immediately below it, a powerful inducement would be offered to men of ability to join the service in a class far below that which they might fairly hope ultimately to reach. And this would have a marked effect in increasing the efficiency of the entire department, as the value of the higher work largely depends on the character of the earlier instruction which the students receive.

3. Having regard to financial exigencies, the Director was unable to recommend the adoption in all its details of the scheme proposed in 1867. That scheme not only involved an excessive increase of expenditure, but was more extensive in its scope than the requirements of the Educational Department really demand. Mr. Croft accordingly submitted the proposal set forth in the following table, which shows the number of existing appointments and their actual cost, as compared with the number and cost of the graded series recommended by him:—

4. Among the appointments on Rs. 400, under the head of "present distribution," were included the four Assistant-Inspectorships recently created, and the head-masterships of the Hindu and Hare Schools, the pay attached to which has been raised to Rs. 400. The cost of the proposed classes was estimated in accordance with the practical rule followed by the Financial Department of the Government of India. In grades of Rs. 100 and upwards, the average salary of each class was assumed to be equal to the minimum pay of the class plus two-thirds of the difference between the minimum and maximum salaries, while, in the case of salaries of Rs. 100 and under, the average salary of the class was taken as equal to the minimum plus three-fourths of the difference between the maximum and minimum salaries, as the rate of retirement in these lower classes is less rapid. Thus estimated, the scheme involved an increased charge of Rs. 32,000 a year, or about 5 per cent. over the existing scale. The Director also explained that he proposed to meet the difficulty of combining the system of graded salaries with that of net-grants to schools by substituting classes for fixed rates of pay in the sanctioned establishments of such schools.

5. The scheme as proposed by the Director met with the Lieutenant-Governor's entire approval and was strongly recommended to the Government of India, the sanction of that Government being required to the creation of new classes of appointments. In submitting the proposal, stress was laid upon the necessity of offering to the officers of the Education Department the same reasonable prospects of advancement as are held out to the junior members of the executive and judicial services. It was also explained that the increased cost which the arrangement would involve would be spread over several years, and would be wholly met from provincial funds.

6. The Government of India, while expressing their general approval of the scheme, were doubtful as to the expediency of including therein the lowest or 8th class, as, owing to the disproportion between the members of that class and the class immediately above it, very few of the members of the lowest class could receive promotion out of it. The Lieutenant-Governor, after careful consideration of the claims and prospects of those officers whom it had been proposed to include in the 8th class, was constrained to accept the decision of the Government of India as to the elimination of that class from the graded scheme. He expressed, however, his desire to fix the numbers of the

7. Under the scheme thus amended, provision is made for 316 officers instead of 290, being an addition of 26 officers to the scheme as curtailed by the Government of India. These 26 officers are now drawing salaries of Rs. 50 per month, or Rs. 15,600 per annum in all. Deducting this from the annual increase shown in the statement, it will be seen that the increased expenditure actually involved is Rs. 22,152 per annum, or nearly Rs. 10,000 less than the increase under Mr. Croft's original scheme.

8. The scheme in its amended form has now received the sanction of Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, and it remains to give effect to the arrangement by formally settling what officers of the subordinate ranks of the Education Department shall be admitted to the graded service, and publishing their names in the order which will henceforth be recognised. In determining the place of each officer, careful regard has been had to the principles explained below, and every endeavour has been made to avoid the semblance of hardship to individual officers.

9. It has been assumed in drawing up the list that higher pay under the existing system must carry with it higher rank in the graded scheme. Thus, every officer drawing a salary of Rs. 250 a month is necessarily placed, as regards his immediate position, above every officer drawing only Rs. 200 a month.

10. Secondly, it seems to be fair that, among officers drawing the same pay, relative seniority should be determined by priority of promotion to that rate of pay. In cases, however, where two or more officers were appointed to the same rate of pay in the same year, their places have been settled by seniority of service.

11. Thirdly, amongst officers drawing the same pay, at a rate which is also the limit between two classes of the graded scheme, the same rule of seniority has determined generally the selection of officers for promotion to the higher class. This principle, however, has been departed from when an unfavourable report has been recorded against an officer, or when an officer has already reached the highest promotion to which he is entitled, that is to say, when he draws the maximum rate of pay already assigned to the office which he fills and is not competent to discharge duties of a higher character. In each of these two cases, officers who by their seniority would be entitled to rank on their present pay in the higher of two classes, and ultimately to attain by yearly increments the maximum pay of that class, have been left in the lower class of which they already draw the maximum salary. Officers so circumstanced will be eligible for future promotion only when the causes at present disqualifying them are removed. Thus, a sub-inspector, ignorant of English, might learn that language, or a teacher might, while so employed, take a university degree. In either case the officer in question would become eligible for promotion.

12. In the two highest classes the number of appointments is small, and the principles set forth above have not been rigidly followed in determining the seniority of officers within those classes. But the service, character, and other grounds of claim on behalf of such officers to immediate or future promotion have been scrutinised and compared in fuller detail, and the circumstances of each case have been fully and carefully considered by the Lieutenant-Governor in consultation with the Director.

13. On the appointment of an officer to any given class in the graded list, he will ordinarily be allowed to draw, as a matter of course, the annual increments of the class until he reaches the maximum pay of that class. But it should be clearly understood that promotion from class to class will not be determined by seniority alone. Seniority is only one of the conditions which render an officer eligible for promotion. Efficient service in the posts hitherto held, and capacity to fill posts of greater responsibility, are other determining conditions of at least equal importance. The Lieutenant-Governor therefore wishes to take this opportunity of finally laying down the rule that the mere fact of seniority will give an officer no right to complain if a junior is promoted over his head.

14. It should also be understood that the officer appointed to a post which falls vacant will not always be the officer who gains the promotion arising from the vacancy. Such promotion will be determined by seniority and by the other considerations set forth in the last paragraph. The officer who is actually appointed to fill the vacancy will, however, gain indirectly by having been selected for an appointment of higher responsibility, as he will thereby make good a claim to further promotion when his place in the list shall warrant such a step.

15. As regards the authority by which promotions are to be made from class to class, the Director points out that at present appointments in the subordinate ranks of the Education Department are not made on any consistent rule. Deputy-inspectors, drawing salaries of Rs. 100 and upwards, are appointed by Government and gazetted. All other officers are appointed by Government and gazetted only when they draw salaries of Rs. 200 and upwards. This difference between inspecting officers and other officers of the department should now cease, and the rule will be in future that all appointments in the first four classes of the subordinate service will be made by Government and gazetted. In the three lower classes, appointments and transfers will be made by the Director of Public Instruction, and in these classes he may also suspend an officer, stop his promotion, degrade him to a lower class, dismiss him or dispense with his services, without reference to Government.

16. As it is intended that the graded system now introduced should supersede all existing systems of pay in the Education Department, it becomes necessary to lay down a fixed rule governing those cases in which officers have already been appointed on a rising scale of pay. In some cases the new system will be more favourable to officers than the old. For instance, certain superintendents of madrasahs have been appointed on salaries of Rs. 200 rising to Rs. 250 in eight years. Under the graded system their salaries will rise to Rs. 300 in five years, and the Lieutenant-Governor sees no reason for refusing to admit them to the full benefits of their new position. Other officers, however, have been appointed on a scale of pay which extends through two classes of the revised scale. Cases in point are those of officers appointed on Rs. 150 rising, in ten years, to Rs. 250. By the original understanding on which they entered the service they would rise to salaries of Rs. 200 in five years' time, and thus far the effect of the old system would be the same as that of the graded scheme. But against the chance of rising to Rs. 300 or even more by promotion under the new arrangements must be set the certainty of rising to Rs. 250 without any break. Under these circumstances, any definite rule which might be laid down for the settlement of all such cases might bear hardly upon individual officers, and the Lieutenant-Governor considers that the fairest course will be to offer every officer so circumstanced his choice of abiding by the understanding on which he entered Government service, or by taking his chance of promotion with other officers under the new system. The Director will therefore call upon all officers thus situated to make their choice within one month of the issue of this resolution.

17. Under the graded system now introduced, the pay of every officer will advance from the minimum to the maximum of his class by five equal annual increments. It therefore becomes necessary to adjust all existing salaries in accordance with the scale of increments fixed within each class. For instance, an officer who is placed in the 3rd class is now drawing Rs. 250 a month, and will become entitled at the close of the year to an increment of pay. The ordinary increment attached to the class is Rs. 20 per annum, but, as the officer in question begins to draw increments when he is in receipt of a salary of Rs. 250, one of the three increments by which he will reach the maximum salary of the grade must be reduced to Rs. 10 instead of Rs. 20. In order to get rid of all irregularities in the system during the first year of its working, the Lieutenant-Governor directs that, in any case where a reduction of the increment is necessary at some stage of an officer's progress through a given class, the reduction shall be made in the first increment to which he becomes entitled. Thus, in the case stated above, the first increment which will be drawn by an officer placed in the third class on a salary of Rs. 250 will be Rs. 10 and not Rs. 20, and his pay will in this manner be brought into accord with the new system.

18. Under the system hitherto in force, an officer's acting allowance is calculated on the pay of the appointment in which he acts, while, under the new system, it will be calculated on the mean pay of the class in which the appointment is held, subject to the further proviso that an officer acting for another in the same class, but drawing higher pay, is entitled to no allowance. It is clear that, if the new method of calculation is applied in the case of officers now holding acting appointments, though some might gain by the change, others would lose. The Lieutenant-Governor has therefore decided that all officers now officiating in higher appointments shall be entitled during the tenure of their acting appointments to the allowances which they now draw. It is believed that the number of such cases is very small, and if any loss results to Government from the arrangement it will be insignificant.

19. The Director observes that the excision of the 8th class from the scheme originally submitted by him has resulted in excluding all but a small proportion of the officers drawing salaries of Rs. 50 from any share in the benefits of the graded system. He states that, although the number of such officers exceeds 150, it has been found possible to include only 18 of them in the lowest class, the remaining appointments in that class being occupied by officers drawing Rs. 75 and under, who have not found a place in the class above. It has been a task of the very greatest difficulty to select officers for admission to the lowest class out of a large number possessing almost equal claims, and Mr. Croft accordingly expresses a hope that, at some future time, Government may find itself in a position to raise the numbers of the 7th class from 100 to 120 or 150, and of the 6th class from 75 to 80 or 90. While admitting that the selection of officers for the lowest grade must, under the circumstances, have been a matter of extreme difficulty, and that much disappointment must be caused by the omission of an 8th class from the graded scheme, the Lieutenant-Governor regrets that he can hold out no hope at present of an increase in the two lowest classes. On this point the orders of the Government of India and the Secretary of State must be accepted as final. It is possible that some few cases of exceptional hardship may be redressed by the subsequent promotion to the 7th class of officers now excluded, but fresh appointments will also be made from among University graduates who have taken good degrees, and this will in future be the regular method of recruiting the Education Department.

20. Effect will be given to the graded scheme from the 1st August 1878. This resolution, together with the nominal list of officers admitted to the graded service, will be published in the Calcutta Gazette. It should be understood, however, that the officers placed in the three lowest classes will not thereby establish any claim to be treated as gazetted officers.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

A. MACKENZIE,

Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

The average fall of the corresponding period for 26 years, S. G. Office ... 0.21

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., and 22h.; the maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction and movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

P. W. Dept., Irrigation Branch.

The 15th January 1879.

Report of Fluctuation of Traffic on the Tirhoot State Railway for the month of December 1878.

Increases.
Coal	Mds. 7,764
This traffic is steady.
Food-grains	Mds. 24,137
The month opened with brisk despatches of food-grains, but as the Calcutta and other markets became glutted, and consequent on the unfavourable prospects in the northern districts of Tirhoot, the despatches fell off as early as the 10th of the month.
Hides and horns	Mds. 1,168
The traffic in this staple fluctuates with rise and fall of markets, and much depends upon local collections.
Indigo	Mds. 3,279
Although the outturn of indigo this year was not as favourable as last, the business done in this staple has been satisfactory, and I have no hesitation in saying that the managers of indigo concerns are well satisfied with the prompt and careful despatches of the chests to Calcutta.
Iron	Mds. 274
This traffic fluctuates according to local requirements.
Piece-goods	" 6,205
This increase is satisfactory, and is due to the Mohurram in a measure.
Railway material	" 6,295
This was owing to the construction of the Diara extension to Ganges bank.
Seeds, Indigo	" 1,147
This is satisfactory as being early.
Salt	" 13,526
This increase is satisfactory, and is due in a measure to the rivers being unnavigable
Saltpetre	" 1,195
The manufacture of saltpetre, though once thriving in the district, is dying out, and any increase may be regarded as favourable.
Sugar	Mds. 2,137
The sugar traffic is becoming steady and increasing.
Tobacco	" 1,595
The tobacco season is approaching, and from the favourable appearance of the plant, I hope for a satisfactory traffic in this staple.
Miscellaneous goods	Mds. 3,463
There has been no fall in this traffic throughout the year, which is satisfactory.
Decreases.
Seeds, oil	Mds. 11,891
Last year's business in this staple was exceptional as a run upon the opening of through booking with other railways, and heavy despatches will resume as soon as the markets revive.

EXAMINATIONS FOR THE CIVIL SERVICE OF INDIA.

REGULATIONS FOR THE OPEN COMPETITION OF JUNE AND JULY 1879.

N.B.—The Regulations are liable to be altered in future years.

1. On 17th June 1879 and following days an examination of candidates will be held in London. At this examination not fewer than candidates will be selected, if so many shall be found duly qualified. Of these, will be selected for Presidency of Bengal [for the Upper Provinces and for the Lower Provinces], for that of Madras, and for that of Bombay.* Notice will hereafter be given of the days and place of examination.

2. Any person desirous of competing at this examination must produce to the Civil Service Commissioners, before the 1st of April 1879, evidence showing—

- (a) that he is a natural-born subject of Her Majesty.
- (b) that his age will be above seventeen years on the 1st of June 1879 and under nineteen years on the 27th January 1879.† [N.B.—In the case of Natives of India this must be certified by the Government of India, or of the Presidency or Province in which the candidate may have resided.]
- (c) that he has no disease, constitutional affection, or bodily infirmity unfitting him, or likely to unfit him, for the Civil Service of India.‡

He must also pay such fee as the Secretary of State for India may prescribe.§

3. Should the evidence upon the above points be prima facie satisfactory to the Civil Service Commissioners, the candidate will, upon payment of the prescribed fee, be admitted to the examination. The Commissioners may, however, in their discretion, at any time prior to the grant of the Certificate of Qualification hereinafter referred to, institute such further inquiries as they may deem necessary; and if the result of such inquiries in the case of any candidate should be unsatisfactory to them in any of the above respects, he will be ineligible for admission to the Civil Service of India; and if already selected, will be removed from the position of a probationer.

6. The marks assigned to candidates in each branch will be subject to such deduction as the Civil Service Commissioners may deem necessary, in order to secure that "a candidate be allowed no credit at all for taking up a subject in which he is a mere smatterer."

* The number of appointments to be made, and the number in each Presidency, &c., will be announced hereafter.

† At the Open Competition to be held in 1880, Candidates will be required to be above 17 on the 1st June, and under 19 on the 1st January, of that year. At subsequent competitions, they will be required to be above 17 and under 19 on 1st June of the year in which the competition is held.

¶ Marks assigned in English Composition and Mathematics will be subject to no deduction.

¶ A considerable portion of the marks for English History and Literature will be allotted to the work specially prepared. In awarding marks for this, regard will be had partly to the extent and importance of the periods or books selected, and partly to the thoroughness with which they have been studied.

 The examination will range from Arithmetic, Algebra, and Elementary Geometry up to the elements of the differential and integral calculus, including the lower portions of applied Mathematics.

†† The standard of marking in Sanskrit and Arabic will be determined with reference to a high degree of proficiency such as may be expected to be reached by a Native of good education.

7. The examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers and by vivâ voce examination, as may be deemed necessary.

8. The marks obtained by each candidate in respect of each of the subjects in which he shall have been examined will be added up, and the names of the candidates who shall have obtained a greater aggregate number of marks than any of the remaining candidates will be set forth in order of merit, and such candidates shall be deemed to be selected candidates for the Civil Service of India, provided they appear to be in other respects duly qualified. Should any of the selected candidates become disqualified, the Secretary of State for India will determine whether the vacancy thus created shall be filled up or not. In the former case the candidate next in order of merit, and in other respects duly qualified, shall be deemed to be a selected candidate. A selected candidate declining to accept the appointment which may be offered to him will be disqualified for any subsequent competition.

9. Selected candidates, before proceeding to India, will be on probation for two years, during which time they will be examined periodically, with a view of testing their progress in the following subjects :—*

	Marks.
1. Law	1,250
2. Classical languages of India—
Sanskrit	500
Arabic	400
Persian	400
3. Vernacular languages of India (each)	400
4. The History and Geography of India	350

In these examinations, as in the open competition, the merit of the candidates examined will be estimated by marks, and the number set opposite to each subject denotes the greatest number of marks that can be obtained in respect of it at any one examination. The examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers and by vivâ voce examination, as may be deemed necessary. The last of these examinations will be held at the close of the second year of probation, and will be called the "Final Examination," at which it will be decided whether a selected candidate is qualified for the Civil Service of India. At this examination candidates will be permitted to take up any one of the following branches of Natural Science, viz.—Botany, Geology, and Zoology, for which 350 marks will be allowed.

10. Any candidate who, at any of the periodical examinations, shall appear to have wilfully neglected his studies, or to be physically incapacitated for pursuing the prescribed course of training, will be liable to have his name removed from the list of selected candidates.

11. The selected candidates who at the final examination shall be found to have a competent knowledge of the subjects specified in Regulation 9, and who shall have satisfied the Civil Service Commissioners of their eligibility in respect of age, health, and character, shall be certified by the said Commissioners to be entitled to be appointed to the Civil Service of India, provided they shall comply with the regulations in force at the time for that service.

12. Applications from persons desirous to be admitted as candidates are to be addressed to the "Secretary to the Civil Service Commissioners, London, S.W.," from whom the proper form for the purpose may be obtained.

October 1878.

(5)—All selected candidates will be required, after having passed the second periodical examination, to attend at the India Office for the purpose of entering into an agreement binding themselves, amongst other things, to refund in certain cases the amount of their allowance in the event of their failing to proceed to India. A surety will be required.

(6)—After passing the final examination, each candidate will be required to attend again at the India Office, with the view of entering into covenants. The stamps payable on these documents amount to £1.

(7)—Candidates rejected at the final examination of 1881 will in no case be allowed to present themselves for re-examination.

* Full instructions as to the course of study to be pursued will be issued to the successful candidates as soon as possible after the result of the open competition is declared.

CHAPTER II.

STAMP-DUTIES.

A.—Of the Liability of Instruments to duty.

5. Subject to the exemptions contained in the second schedule, the following instruments shall be chargeable with duty of the amount indicated in the first schedule as the proper duty therefor respectively, that is to say:—

(a) every instrument mentioned in the first schedule, and which, not having been previously executed by any person, is executed in British India on or after the first day of April 1879;

(b) every bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note drawn or made out of British India on or after that day and accepted or paid, or presented for acceptance or payment, or endorsed, transferred or otherwise negotiated, in British India; and

(c) every instrument (other than a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note) mentioned in the first schedule, which, not having been previously executed by any person, is executed out of British India on or after that day, relates to any property situate, or to any matter or thing done or to be done, in British India, and is received in British India.

6. Where, in the case of any sale, lease, mortgage or settlement, several instruments are employed for completing the transaction, the principal instrument only shall be chargeable with the duty prescribed for the conveyance, lease, mortgage or settlement in the first schedule, and each of the other instruments shall be chargeable with a duty of one rupee instead of the duty (if any) prescribed for it in that schedule.

The parties may determine for themselves which of the instruments so employed shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be the principal instrument.

7. Any instrument comprising or relating to several distinct matters shall be chargeable with the aggregate amount of the duties with which separate instruments, each comprising or relating to one of such matters, would be chargeable under this Act.

Subject to the provisions of the first clause of this section, an instrument so framed as to come within two or more of the descriptions in the first schedule shall, where the duties chargeable thereunder are different, be chargeable only with the highest of such duties; but nothing herein contained shall render chargeable with duty exceeding one rupee a counterpart or duplicate of any instrument chargeable with duty and in respect of which the proper duty has been paid.

8. The Governor General in Council may, by order published in the Gazette of India, reduce or remit rates of duty.

(a) reduce or remit, whether prospectively or retrospectively, in the whole or any part of British India, the duties with which any instruments or any particular class of instruments, or any of the instruments belonging to such class, or any instruments when executed by or in favour of any particular class of persons, or by or in favour of any members of such class, are chargeable, and

(b) cancel or vary such order to the extent of the powers hereby given.

B.—Of Stamps and the Mode of using them.

9. Except as otherwise expressly provided in this Act, all duties with which any instruments are chargeable shall be paid, and such payment shall be indicated on such instruments, by means of stamps—

(a) according to the provisions herein contained, or

(b) when no such provision is applicable thereto—as the Governor General in Council may by rule direct.

The rules made under this section may, among other matters, regulate—

(1) in the case of each kind of instrument—the description of stamps which may be used,

(2) in the case of instruments stamped with impressed stamps—the number of stamps which may be used,

(3) in the case of hundis—the size of the paper on which they are written.

10. The following instruments may be stamped with adhesive stamps, namely:—

(a) instruments chargeable with the duty of one anna except parts of bills of exchange payable otherwise than on demand and drawn in sets;

(b) bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes drawn or made out of British India;

(c) entry as an advocate, vakil or attorney on the roll of a High Court;

(d) notarial acts; and

(e) transfers by endorsement of shares of public companies and associations.

11. Whoever affixes any adhesive stamp to any instrument chargeable with duty and which has been executed by any person, shall, when affixing such stamp, cancel the same so that it cannot be used again, and whoever executes any instrument on any paper bearing an adhesive stamp shall, at the time of execution, unless such stamp has been already cancelled in manner aforesaid, cancel the same so that it cannot be used again.

Any instrument bearing an adhesive stamp which has not been cancelled so that it cannot be used again shall, so far as such stamp is concerned, be deemed to be unstamped.

12. Every instrument written upon paper stamped with an impressed stamp, shall be written in such manner, that the stamp may appear on the face of the instrument and cannot be used for or applied to any other instrument.

13. No second instrument chargeable with duty shall be written upon a piece of stamped paper upon which an instrument chargeable with duty has already been written: provided that nothing in this section shall prevent any endorsement which is duly stamped or is not chargeable with duty being made upon any instrument for the purpose of transferring any right created or evidenced thereby, or of acknowledging the receipt of any money or goods the payment or delivery of which is secured thereby.

14. Every instrument written in contravention of section twelve or thirteen, shall be deemed to be unstamped.

15. Where the duty with which an instrument is chargeable, or its exemption from duty, depends in any manner upon the duty actually paid in respect of another instrument, the payment of such last-mentioned duty shall, if application be made in writing to the Collector for that purpose, and on production of both the instruments, be denoted upon such first-mentioned instrument in such manner as the Governor General in Council may by rule prescribe.

C.—Of the Time of stamping Instruments.

16. All instruments chargeable with duty and executed by any person in British India shall be stamped before or at the time of execution.

17. Every instrument chargeable with duty executed only out of British India, and not being a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note, may be stamped within three months after it has been first received in British India; or, where such instrument cannot, with reference to the description of stamp prescribed therefor, be duly stamped by a private person, it may be taken within the said period of three months to the Collector, and he shall stamp the same, in such manner as the Governor General in Council may by rule prescribe, with a stamp of such value as the person so taking such instrument may require and pay for.

18. The first holder in British India of any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note drawn or made out of British India shall, before he presents the same for acceptance or payment, or endorses, transfers or otherwise negotiates the same in British India, affix thereto the proper stamp and cancel the same:

Provided that if, at the time any such bill, cheque or note comes into the hands of any holder thereof in British India, the proper adhesive stamp is affixed thereto and cancelled in manner prescribed by section eleven, and such holder has no reason to believe that such stamp was affixed or cancelled otherwise than by the person and at the time required by this Act, such stamp shall, so far as relates to such holder, be deemed to have been duly affixed and cancelled. But nothing contained in this proviso shall relieve any person from any penalty incurred by him for omitting to affix or cancel a stamp.

D.—Of Valuations for duty.

19. Where an instrument is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of an amount expressed in pounds sterling, pounds currency, francs or dollars, such duty shall be calculated on the value of such money in the currency of British India according to the following scale:—

One pound sterling or pound currency is equivalent to ten rupees:

One hundred francs are equivalent to forty rupees:

One Mexican or China dollar is equivalent to two rupees four annas.

20. Where an instrument is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of any money expressed in any other foreign or colonial currency, such duty shall be calculated on the value of such money in the currency of British India according to the current rate of exchange on the day of the date of the instrument.

21. Where an instrument is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of any stock or of any marketable security, such duty shall be calculated on the value of such stock or security according to the average price thereof on the day of the date of the instrument.

22. Where an instrument contains a statement of current rate of exchange, or average price, as the case may require, and is stamped in accordance with such statement, it shall, so far as regards the subject-matter of such statement, be presumed, until the contrary is proved, to be duly stamped.

23. Where interest is expressly made payable by the terms of an instrument, such instrument shall not be chargeable with duty higher than that with which it would have been chargeable had no mention of interest been made therein.

24. Where any property is transferred to any person in consideration, wholly or in part, of any debt due to him, or subject either certainly or contingently to the payment or transfer of any money or stock, whether being or constituting a charge or incumbrance upon the property or not, such debt, money or stock is to be deemed the whole or part, as the case may be, of the consideration in respect whereof the transfer is chargeable with ad valorem duty.

25. Where an instrument is executed to secure the payment of an annuity, or other sum payable periodically, or where the consideration for a conveyance is an annuity or other sum payable periodically, the amount secured by such instrument, or the consideration for such conveyance (as the case may be), shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be—

(a) where the sum is payable for a definite period so that the total amount to be paid can be previously ascertained—such total amount;

(b) where the sum is payable in perpetuity or for an indefinite time not terminable with any life in being at the date of such instrument or conveyance—the total amount which, according to the terms of such instrument or conveyance, will or may be payable during the period of twenty years next after the date of such instrument or conveyance; and

(c) where the sum is payable for an indefinite time terminable with any life in being at the date of such instrument or conveyance—the total amount which will or may be payable as aforesaid during the period of twelve years next after the date of such instrument or conveyance.

26. Where the amount or value of the subject-matter of any instrument chargeable with ad valorem duty cannot be, or (in the case of an instrument executed before this Act comes into force) could not have been, ascertained, at the date of its execution or first execution, nothing shall be claimable under such instrument more than the highest amount or value for which, if stated in an instrument of the same description, the stamp actually used would, at the date of such execution, have been sufficient.

27. The consideration (if any) and all other facts and circumstances affecting the chargeability of any instrument with duty, or the amount of the duty with which it is chargeable, shall be fully and truly set forth therein.

28. (a.) Where any property has been contracted to be sold for one consideration for the whole, and is conveyed to the purchaser in separate parts by different instruments, the consideration shall be apportioned in such manner as the parties think fit, so that a distinct consideration for each separate part is set forth in the conveyance relating thereto, and such conveyance shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of such distinct consideration.

(b.) Where property contracted to be purchased for one consideration for the whole, by two or more persons jointly, or by any person for himself and others, or wholly for others, is conveyed in parts by separate instruments to the persons by or for whom the same was purchased, for distinct parts of the consideration, the conveyance of each separate part shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of the distinct part of the consideration therein specified.

(c.) Where a person having contracted for the purchase of any property, but not having obtained a conveyance thereof, contracts to sell the same to any other person, and the property is in consequence conveyed immediately to the sub-purchaser, the conveyance shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of the consideration for the sale by the original purchaser to the sub-purchaser.

(d.) Where a person having contracted for the purchase of any property, but not having obtained a conveyance thereof, contracts to sell the whole, or any part, thereof, to any other person or persons, and the property is in consequence conveyed by the original seller to different persons in parts, the conveyance of each part sold to a sub-purchaser shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect only of the consideration paid by such sub-purchaser, without regard to the amount or value of the original consideration, and the conveyance of the residue (if any) of such property to the original purchaser shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect only of the excess of the original consideration over the aggregate of the considerations paid by the sub-purchasers:

Provided that the duty on such last mentioned conveyance shall in no case be less than one rupee.

(e.) Where a sub-purchaser takes an actual conveyance of the interest of the person immediately selling to him, which is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of the consideration paid by him, and is duly stamped accordingly, any conveyance to be afterwards made to him of the same property by the original seller shall be chargeable with a duty equal to that which would be chargeable on a conveyance for the consideration obtained by such original seller; or where such duty would exceed five rupees, with a duty of five rupees.

E.—Duty by whom payable.

29. In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, the expense of providing the proper stamp shall be borne—

(a) in the case of any instrument described in numbers 2, 11, 13, 14, 15, 24, 28, 29, 30, 44, 53, 54, 55, 57 and 60 (a) and (b) of the first schedule—by the person drawing, making or executing such instrument:

(b) in the case of a policy of insurance—by the insured:

(c) in the case of a conveyance—by the grantee: in the case of a lease or agreement to lease—by the lessee or intended lessee:

(d) in the case of a counterpart of a lease—by the lessor:

(e) in the case of an instrument of partition—by the parties thereto in proportion to their respective shares in the property comprised therein, or when the partition is made in execution of an order passed by a Revenue-authority, in such proportion as such authority directs:

(f) in the case of an instrument of exchange—by the parties in equal shares: and

(g) in the case of a certificate of sale—by the purchaser of the property to which such certificate relates.

ADJUDICATION AS TO STAMPS.

30. When any instrument, whether executed or not, and whether previously stamped or not, is brought to the Collector, and the person bringing it applies to have the opinion of that officer as to the duty (if any) with which it is chargeable, and pays a fee of such amount (not exceeding five rupees and not less than eight annas) as the Collector may in each case direct, the Collector shall determine the duty (if any) with which, in his judgment, the instrument is chargeable:

and may for that purpose require to be furnished with an abstract of the instrument, and also with such affidavit or other evidence as he may deem necessary to prove that all the facts and circumstances affecting the chargeability of the instrument with duty, or the amount of the duty with which it is chargeable, are fully and truly set forth therein, and may refuse to proceed upon any such application until such abstract and evidence have been furnished accordingly :

Provided that no evidence furnished in pursuance of this section shall be used against any person in any civil proceeding, except in an enquiry as to the duty with which the instrument to which it relates is chargeable; and every person by whom any such evidence is furnished shall, on payment of the full duty with which the instrument to which it relates is chargeable, be relieved from any penalty he may have incurred under this Act by reason of the omission to state truly in such instrument any of the facts or circumstances aforesaid.

31. When an instrument brought to the Collector under section thirty is in his opinion one of a description chargeable with duty and

(a) the Collector determines that it is already fully stamped, or

(b) the duty determined by the Collector under section thirty, or such a sum as, with the duty already paid in respect of the instrument, is equal to the duty so determined, has been paid, the Collector shall certify by endorsement on such instrument that the full duty (stating the amount) with which it is chargeable has been paid.

When such instrument is in his opinion not chargeable with duty, the Collector shall certify in manner aforesaid that such instrument is not so chargeable.

Any instrument upon which an endorsement has been made under this section shall be deemed to be duly stamped, or not chargeable with duty, as the case may be; and if chargeable with duty, shall be receivable in evidence or otherwise, and may be acted upon and registered as if it had been originally duly stamped :

Nothing in this section shall authorize the Collector to endorse—any instrument executed or first executed in British India and brought to him after the expiration of one month from the date of its execution or first execution (as the case may be);

any instrument executed or first executed out of British India and brought to him after the expiration of three months after it has been first received in British India; or any instrument chargeable with the duty of one anna, or any bill of exchange or promissory note, when brought to him after the drawing or execution thereof on paper not duly stamped.

32. Every payment of a fee under section thirty shall be made in stamps, or cash, as the Governor General in Council may by rule direct.

Payment of fees under section 30 how made.

INSTRUMENTS NOT DULY STAMPED.

33. Every person having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence, and every person in charge of a public office except an officer of Police, before whom any instrument chargeable in his opinion with duty is produced or comes, in the performance of his functions, shall, if it appears to him that such instrument is not duly stamped, ~~immediately~~ ^{immediately} the same.

For that purpose every such person shall examine every instrument so chargeable and so produced or coming before him, in order to ascertain whether it is stamped with a stamp of the value and description required by the law in force in British India when such instrument was executed or first executed.

Provided that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require any Magistrate or Judge of a criminal Court to examine or impound any instrument coming before him in the course of any proceeding other than a proceeding under chapter forty or chapter forty-one of the Code of Criminal Procedure, or chapter eighteen of the Presidency Magistrates Act :

Provided also that, in the case of a Judge of a High Court, the duty of examining and impounding any instrument under this section may be delegated to such officer as the Court appoints in this behalf.

The Local Government may from time to time, in cases of doubt, determine who shall be deemed to be, for the purpose of this section, persons in charge of public offices.

34. No instrument chargeable with duty shall be admitted in evidence for any purpose by any person having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence, or shall be acted upon, registered or authenticated by any such person or by any public officer, unless such instrument is duly stamped :

Provided.

Provided that—

1st, any such instrument, not being an instrument chargeable with a duty of one anna only or a bill of exchange or promissory note, shall, subject to all just exceptions, be admitted in evidence on payment of the duty with which the same is chargeable or (in the case of an instrument insufficiently stamped) of the amount required to make up such duty, together with a penalty of five rupees, or when ten times the amount of the proper duty or deficient portion thereof exceeds five rupees, of a sum equal to ten times such duty or portion ;

2nd, nothing herein contained shall prevent the admission of any instrument in evidence in any proceeding in a criminal Court other than a proceeding under chapter forty or chapter forty-one of the Code of Criminal Procedure, or chapter eighteen of the Presidency Magistrates Act ;

3rd, when an instrument has been admitted in evidence, such admission shall not, except as provided in section fifty, be called in question at any stage of the same suit or proceeding on the ground that the instrument has not been duly stamped.

35. When the person impounding an instrument under section thirty-three has by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence and admits such instrument in evidence upon payment of a penalty as provided by section thirty-four, he shall send to the Collector an authenticated copy of such instrument, together with a certificate in writing, stating the amount of the duty and penalty levied in respect thereof, and shall send such amount to the Collector, or to such person as he may appoint in this behalf.

In every other case, the person so impounding an instrument shall send it in original to the Collector.

36. When a copy of an instrument is sent to a Collector under the first paragraph of section thirty-five, he may, if he thinks fit, upon application made to him in this behalf, refund any portion of the penalty in excess of five rupees which has been paid in respect of such instrument, or when such instrument has been impounded only because it has been written in contravention of section twelve, or section thirteen, he may refund the whole penalty so paid.

37. When the Collector impounds any instrument under section thirty-three, or receives any instrument sent to him under the second clause of section thirty-five, he shall adopt the following procedure :—

(a.) If he is of opinion that such instrument is duly stamped, or is not chargeable with duty, he shall certify by endorsement thereon that it is duly stamped, or that it is not so chargeable (as the case may be), and shall upon application made to him in this behalf deliver such instrument to the person from whose possession it came into the hands of the officer impounding it, or as such person may direct.

(b.) If the Collector is of opinion that such instrument is chargeable with duty and is not duly stamped, he shall require the payment of the proper duty or the amount required to make up the same, together with a penalty of five rupees ; or if ten times the amount of the proper duty or of the deficient portion thereof exceeds five rupees, then such penalty, not less than five rupees and not more than ten times the amount of such duty or portion, as he thinks fit :

Provided that, when such instrument has been impounded only because it has been written in contravention of section twelve or section thirteen, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, remit the whole penalty prescribed by this section.

Every certificate under clause (a) of this section shall, for the purposes of this Act, be conclusive evidence of the matters stated therein.

38. If any instrument chargeable with duty and which is not duly stamped by accident, is produced by any person of his own motion before the Collector within one year from the date of its execution or first execution, and such person brings to the notice of the Collector the fact that such instrument is not duly stamped, and offers to pay to the Collector the amount of the proper duty, or the amount required to make up the same, and the Collector is satisfied that the omission to duly stamp such instrument has been occasioned by accident, mistake or urgent necessity, he may, instead of proceeding under sections thirty-three and thirty-seven, receive such amount and proceed as next hereinafter prescribed.

Nothing in this section applies to an instrument chargeable with a duty of one anna only or to a bill of exchange or promissory note.

39. When the duty and penalty (if any) leviable in respect of any instrument have been paid under section thirty-four, section thirty-seven or section thirty-eight, the person admitting such instrument in evidence, or the Collector (as the case may be), shall certify by endorsement thereon that the proper duty or (as the case may be) the proper duty and penalty (stating the amount of each) have been levied in respect thereof, and the name and residence of the person paying them.

Every instrument so endorsed shall thereupon be admissible in evidence, and may be registered and acted upon and authenticated as if it had been duly stamped, and shall be delivered on his application in this behalf to the person from whose possession it came into the hands of the officer impounding it, or as such person may direct :

Provided that no instrument which has been admitted in evidence upon payment of duty and a penalty under section thirty-four shall be so delivered before the expiration of one month from the date of such impounding, or if the Collector has certified that its further detention is necessary and has not cancelled such certificate :

Provided also that nothing in this section shall affect the Code of Civil Procedure, section 144, clause 3.

40. The payment of a penalty under this chapter in respect of an instrument shall not bar the prosecution of any person who appears to have committed an offence against the stamp-law in respect of such instrument :

But no such prosecution shall be instituted in the case of any instrument in respect of which such a penalty has been paid, unless it appears to the Collector that the offence was committed with an intention of evading payment of the proper duty.

41. When any duty or penalty has been paid, under section thirty-four, section thirty-seven or section thirty-eight, by any person in respect of an instrument, and by agreement, or under the provisions of section twenty-nine or any other enactment in force at the time such instrument was executed, some other person was bound to bear the expense of providing the proper stamp for such instrument, the first-mentioned person shall be entitled to recover from such other person the amount of the duty or penalty so paid ; and for the purpose of such recovery any certificate granted in respect of such instrument under section thirty-nine shall be conclusive evidence of the matters therein certified.

42. When any penalty is paid under section thirty-four or thirty-seven, the Remission of penalty paid under section 34 or 37. Chief Controlling Revenue-Authority may, upon application in writing made within one year from the date of the payment, refund such penalty wholly or in part.

43. If any instrument sent to a Collector under the second paragraph of section thirty-five be lost, destroyed or damaged during transmission, the person sending the same shall not be liable for such loss, destruction or damage.

When any instrument is about to be so sent, the person from whose possession it came into the hands of the person impounding the same may require a copy thereof to be made at the expense of such first-mentioned person and authenticated by the person impounding such instrument.

44. When any bill of exchange or promissory note chargeable with the duty of one anna, or any cheque, is presented for payment unstamped, the person to whom it is so presented may affix thereto the necessary adhesive stamp, and upon cancelling the same in manner hereinbefore provided may pay the sum payable upon such bill, note or cheque, and may charge the duty against the person who ought to have paid the same, or deduct it from the sum payable as aforesaid, and such bill, note or cheque shall, so far as respects the duty, be deemed good and valid.

But nothing herein contained shall relieve any person from any penalty he may have incurred in relation to such bill, note or cheque.

CHAPTER V.

REFERENCE AND REVISION.

45. If any Collector acting under section thirty, section thirty-seven or section thirty-eight feels doubt as to the amount of duty with which any instrument is chargeable, he may draw up a statement of the case, and refer it, with his own opinion thereon, for the decision of the Chief Controlling Revenue-Authority, and such Authority shall consider the case and send a copy of its decision to the Collector, and he shall proceed to assess and charge the duty (if any) in conformity with such decision.

46. The Chief Controlling Revenue-Authority may state any case referred to it under section forty-five or otherwise coming to its notice and refer such case with its own opinion thereon, if the case arises in the territories for the time being administered by the Governor of Fort Saint George in Council or the Governor of Bombay in Council—to the High Court of Judicature at Madras or Bombay as the case may be: if it arises in the North-Western Provinces or Oudh—to the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces: if it arises in the territories for the time being administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb—to the Chief Court of the Panjáb: if it arises in the Central Provinces—to the High Court of Judicature at Bombay; and if it arises in any other part of British India—to the High Court of Judicature at Fort William.

Every such case shall be decided by not less than three Judges of the High Court or Chief Court to which it is referred, and in case of difference the opinion of the majority shall prevail.

47. If the High Court or Chief Court is not satisfied that the statements contained in the case are sufficient to enable it to determine the questions raised thereby, the Court may refer the case back to the Revenue-Authority by which it was stated, to make such additions thereto or alterations therein as the Court may direct in that behalf.

48. The High Court or Chief Court, upon the hearing of any such case, shall decide the questions raised thereby and shall deliver its judgment thereon containing the grounds on which such decision is founded: and it shall send to the Revenue-Authority by which the case was stated, a copy of such judgment under the seal of the Court and the signature of the Registrar, and the Revenue-Authority shall, on receiving such copy, dispose of the case conformably to such judgment.

49. If any Court other than a Court mentioned in section forty-six feels doubt as to the amount of duty to be paid in respect of any instrument under the first proviso to section thirty-four, the Judge may draw up a statement of the case and refer it with his own opinion thereon for the decision of the High Court or Chief Court to which, if he were the Chief Controlling Revenue-Authority, he would under section forty-six refer the same, and such Court shall deal with the case as if it had been referred under section forty-six, and send a copy of its judgment under the seal of the Court and the signature of the Registrar to the Judge making the reference, who shall, on receiving such copy, dispose of the case conformably to such judgment.

References made under this section, when made by a Court subordinate to a District Court, shall be made through the District Court, and when made by any subordinate Revenue Court shall be made through the Court immediately superior.

50. When any Court in the exercise of civil or revenue jurisdiction makes any order admitting any instrument in evidence as duly stamped or as not requiring a stamp, or upon payment of duty and a penalty under section thirty-four, the Court to which appeals lie from, or references are made by, such first-mentioned Court may, of its own motion or on the application of the Collector, take such order into consideration; and if it is of opinion that such instrument should not have been admitted in evidence without the payment of duty and penalty under section thirty-four, or without the payment of a higher duty and penalty than those paid, may record a declaration to that effect, and determine the amount of duty with which such instrument is chargeable, and may require any person in whose possession or power such instrument then is to produce the same, and may impound the same when produced.

When any declaration has been recorded under this section, the Court recording the same shall send a copy thereof to the Collector and, where the instrument to which it relates has been impounded or is otherwise in the possession of such Court, shall also send him such instrument; and thereupon the Collector may, notwithstanding anything contained in the order admitting such instrument in evidence, or in any certificate granted under section thirty-nine, or in section forty, prosecute any person for any offence against the stamp-law which the Collector considers him to have committed in respect of such instrument:

Provided that no such prosecution shall be instituted where the amount (including duty and penalty) which according to the determination of such

Court was payable in respect of the instrument under section thirty-four is paid to the Collector, unless he thinks that the offence was committed with an intention of evading payment of the proper duty :

Provided also that, except for the purposes of such prosecution, no declaration made under this section shall affect the validity of any order admitting any instrument in evidence, or of any certificate granted under section thirty-nine.

CHAPTER VI.

ALLOWANCES FOR SPOILED STAMPS AND STAMPS NO LONGER REQUIRED.

51. Subject to such rules as may be made by the Governor General in Council as to the evidence which the Collector may require, allowance shall be made by the Collector for impressed stamps spoiled in the cases hereinafter mentioned, namely :—

(a.) The stamp on any paper inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled, obliterated or by any means rendered unfit for the purpose intended, before any instrument written thereon is executed by any person :

(b.) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note, signed by or on behalf of the drawer or intended drawer, but not delivered out of his hands to the payee or intended payee, or any person on his behalf, or deposited with any person as a security for the payment of money, or in any way negotiated, issued or put in circulation, or made use of in any other manner, and which, being a bill of exchange or cheque, has not been accepted by the drawee, and provided that the paper on which any such stamp is impressed does not bear any signature intended as or for the acceptance of any bill of exchange or cheque to be afterwards written thereon :

(c.) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note signed by, or on behalf of, the drawer thereof, but which from any omission or error has been spoiled or rendered useless, although the same, being a bill of exchange or cheque, may have been presented for acceptance or accepted or endorsed, or, being a promissory note, may have been delivered to the payee, provided that another completed and duly stamped bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note is produced identical in every particular, except in the correction of such omission or error as aforesaid, with the spoiled bill, cheque or note :

(d.) The stamp used for any of the following instruments, that is to say :—

- (1) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found by a competent Court to be absolutely void in law from the beginning :
- (2) an instrument executed by any person, but afterwards found unfit, by reason of any error or mistake therein, for the purpose originally intended :
- (3) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but which, by reason of the death of any person, by whom it is necessary that it
